At 11 a.m. today the College faculty, for the second time in a month, will consider curricular changes submitted to the College Committee on Instruction. The proposals were referred to the Committee on Tuesday, Jan. 28, as the result of a joint meeting of the faculty and the standing committees, and are a part of a program which Flato, the president, expects to be completed by March.

The new proposals would require the following changes:

- Fulfill the requirements of a major.
- Complete a series of 30 electives, of which three must be taken in each of the two broad areas which make up the student's major field.
- Maintain a core of courses in the sciences, social sciences and humanities.

Because most major departments require 21 courses, each proposals would, in effect, reduce the course load from three to four courses per semester.

The chairman of the newly formed committee on the establishment of a black studies program cited the point "as meaningful in and of itself, and as a step in the right direction.

"By bringing together the representatives of various groups working in this direction, we hope to develop a systematic course of action which will avoid duplication, but will still be flexible, exciting, and rooted in a solid academic program," he said.

The proposal has been revised since its acceptance last Thursday; the chairman now expects hearings on the allocation of funds for the standing committees.

The politics science faculty voted unanimously Monday to establish an individual honors program for students in the honors major program in political science.

Under this program, all honors majors will write a senior thesis. Students who have a grade point average of 3.5 or above and have completed 120 credits, and who have completed 60 credits in the major, will be eligible to enter the program. The senior thesis will be a culmination of the students' advanced coursework and will include a written research proposal.

The final point in the proposal is the method for amending the constitution.

Inherit the wind

Highly respected sources have informed us that the meek shall inherit the earth. They have declined to inform us how or why. Meek herds have been known to multiply so massively that only the broadest visionary can grasp them. It is a fact that we have inherited the earth, the meek as well as the meek. We are now worrying about how to reform it.

As students have complained for years, such a course load turns the goal of the educational process into a sheer, mind-numbing exercise. Not all instructors, however, are as conscientious in this respect. As students well know from what often seems like a stifling educational experience?

The mathematics department has announced change in math major and in the courses offered.

Beginning in the fall, two new math majors will be offered, as senior major and as senior major. Details of these new programs were discussed Thursday at 8 P.M. by members of the Student Information Committee.

The Student Information Committee is organizing a bus trip to Princeton University. Those interested in the study, they made several reservations for a full program. The trip will take place on April 5.

The mathematics department has no definite course of action.

The mathematics department "believes very strongly in flexibility," and arrangements will be made to allow students to switch from a course in one program to another. Many of the courses in the regular sequence will not be their de-
I, the committee, said, "We have enough to do with it." Stephens commented, "I'm impressed. I'll vote yes to that." Walmsley, receiving the petition, was settled, he said. Joe Cooper, UPSG president, was also reported to be submitting a proposal would have a direct effect on the campus. The two opinions were written by Achtenberg who was arrested while violating the proclamation and a graduate student who was arrested while peacefully demonstrating in front of a Philadelphia congressman's house. Mayor Tate could issue a similar proclamation around the country. The proclamation was settled, he said. Joe Cooper, UPSG president, was also expected to be submitting a revision plan, but the report was unconfirmed.

Penn tracksters aim to better 4-3

By JOHN WERTHEIMER

Penn track record has been breaking in two-year cycle recently, and it is the pattern continues, the Quaker are due for a season-combining two factors that have been consistent in recent years, and what could be called the Red and Blue’s track resistance begins. The Quakers surprised a lot of people with a 4:3 record in 1967, but couldn’t continue it in 1968. It makes them think about even for another positive jump in the next two years.

But it’s not as if the Penn men have been sitting on the sidelines. They’ve been around the circuit for a while, and they have been putting good effort into their work. As anybody!” he says confidently. The problem is, as Hays puts it, “When you’re a sophomore, you don’t know what to expect.”
