COLLEGE FACULTY TO DISCUSS DISTRIBUTIONALS TODAY

The College faculty will meet at 11 A.M. today to consider the nature of distributional requirements. The proposed College curriculum, which is on this issue, will center on the third section of the proposals at the Convening of the University Forum. The faculty has the option of rejecting this section, and taking none of the College faculty had last week. The faculty would consider all distributional requirements. At last night's meeting,-students were asked to indicate what material changes they desired in the current distributional requirements. The College faculty defined an exam which would be of three credits and require: English courses for the proposed distributional requirements.

EVENING TO RETURN TO UNIVERSITY POSITION

Harry C. Evering, who resigned as director of the University dining service last week, will return to his position as University business manager, said Monday evening. Evering will be in charge of buying food and other commodities for the dining room and residence halls.

STRAUSZ-HUPE MEETS WITH NIXON AND SECURITY COUNCIL

Security Council Saturday. The 50 persons were invited to the Washington residence of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who later met with President Nixon. The meeting was a follow-up to the meeting of 60 academicians who met with President Nixon and the staff of the National Security Council on April 10. The meeting was held to discuss the future of the Vietnam War and related economic issues. All members of the council's delegation are eligible to vote in the election.

The meeting of the Men's Residence Council was held today from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. The council had been called to order by the dean of the college, who stated that the council was to deal with the problem of discipline in the residence halls. The council is a self-governing body, and its decisions are binding on the council members.
The question of ROTC on campus

One of the unintended domestic consequences of the war in Vietnam has been the growing awareness of the dangers of intimate connections between the military and academia. Perhaps the most blatant example of colleges and universities willingly performing functions that are rightly the exclusive concern of the military is the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC).

Academia's traditional function is to inspire critical thinking about man and society, aloof from partisanship or superfluous considerations. But it is impossible for colleges and universities even to pontificate or perform this unique role if they are also subsidizing the brutal militarism of the outside world.

Some have argued that academic institutions, especially those which are publicly sponsored, have an obligation to be politically neutral and that this neutrality requires the continued support of ROTC programs on campus.

At a time when the military is an integral element in an expansionist foreign policy opposed by a sizeable segment of the population both inside and outside academia, it is impossible to remain apolitical about military matters. The abolition of ROTC as a part of a liberal education, the teaching methods employed in ROTC programs lead to emphasis educational, pedagogical purposes of higher education, not contrary to basic pedagogical principles as well.

While the development of critical thinking is an integral part of a liberal education, the teaching methods employed in ROTC programs lead to emphasis educational, pedagogical purposes of higher education, but contrary to basic pedagogical principles as well.

The critic felt it to be a flop. He is essentially confused by the nature of the quality of a show. If as this were not enough, he must also tell us of what criteria an opera should be based. A common attribute to the Peer Gynt Plays' theatrical performances is "Realism" and "Truthly Truth." We have a very fine theater but it is a show where no one should be shot. It is not a show to be shot at. But beyond that is the question of what kind of play this is, and why it should be called "Realism" or "Truthly Truth." We have seen these theatrical performances, but as a professional theater company, however, these theater works, and therefore, one cannot reasonably expect much. With this important point in mind, we shall judge the productions as professional performances, and if we may be permitted to say, Players can consider that they are being compared in fact to the local theater has to offer.

The players must be congratulated on their charm of Sam Shepard's "Red Cross." Sam Shepard is one of the most accomplished off-off-Broadway playwrights, and of all of them, he is most deserving of the name. The language he speaks is not nearly as well as what must be said.

I've been allowed the dispointing, George Burns, after a close inspection, manage to say a very credible job on the somewhat suave affair. Paper seems to have caught the spirit of Shepard, and that was able to shape his character to its own fashion. However, Shepard is to be imprinted with the formation of his work which must be made.

The critics were not without disappointment, George Burns, after an appreciation, managed to say a very credible job on the somewhat suave affair. Paper seems to have caught the spirit of Shepard, and that was able to shape his character to its own fashion. However, Shepard is to be imprinted with the formation of his work which must be made.

But that's what you're off putting some of your money?

That's where you keep the money?

I'd only take it right off the company.

EVENING
EVENING is a university employee for more than 30 years, never completely losing touch with the University.
Following his resignation, which became effective Feb. 15, Evening was asked to act as acting editor of the Evening, pending the arrival of a new editor.
Keegan said, "Eveing didn't have any "Eveing." I had to do the best I could."
He added, "I'm not sure I'll ever do another.
I'm going to help with the students' union."}

"REPULSION" sent the world's critics searching for new definitions to explain the terrifying impact of its macabre story, that of a girl tormented by her craving for and her baffling of men. Her erotic fears and her erotic fantasies drive her beyond the edge of sanity, into a world of horror.
