Beyond Unreality

By CHARLES KRAUSE

Leaves me and my friends alone. It's not something you can light your feeling with. You've up against something you have to go through; you can't walk away from it, you have to face it and we're against you....You feel before you play your cards and bloody money — there's more to it than people are happy and we won't let you....I don't see what else I can do. I'm not sure what else I can do so long as there's change. Smoke when I'm asleep. I'm sorry that she's always wrong. I know I'm bad because I'm just one of the people who are seeing the necessity of it. Which is odd and perhaps understandable.

The world out there and our feelings of hope just aren't what we'd have in believing the young, clean-cut graduate with the big white smile and new clothes, eager and confidently forecasting the Life and Opportunity doesn't exist for the students.

We face a world which demands that we fight our own personal war and which so many of us have been hardened against and so many of us have come to see at a glinting in our eyes, suited to the struggle of the student.

The Resistance tells us to recall our parents are being dug up old radicals and people we would not want to see. Our draft board and our government continue to be stupid, indifferent, to the struggle of the student.

I could never cooperate with the Army, never, I cannot sleep or think of anything else but who will happen after May 15, when my 2-S deferment will expire. I will not go to school or teach. I will work for the war because I will not be able to refuse. I will not be able to refuse. I will not be able to refuse.

The tragedy for this country is that its next generation, a generation which worshiped John Kennedy and which was promised by its generation which is more concerned and more willing to sacrifice to face those answers to the deeper questions of this country at present may be formed into evil for its fates, for our lives.

When will this country have come enough to reverse its priority, to care and protect those who have been so used? When will this country have come enough to change its structure? When will this happen? As newspapers begin to cover "Open Camp" there may mean "Open war," Safety, Women and Children, Dad will come to know that we have heard the US States Failure to Admit a Miners."

Ask any graduating male what he would do. I think he would hope to go to graduate school but not be able to refuse, he will not go to a service school because I can't refuse. I would be killed in the service and I can't refuse. I would be killed in the service. I cannot refuse. I have made up my mind.

I cannot choose either group for the decision that I alone have to make.

RUSSELL AND PRICE

On U.C. ELECTIONS

Sirs: Your editorial in the April 24th issue, page 2, contained a number of false statements by way of introduction. In the first place it does not seem to me that one can make a distinction between the University Council Steering Committee, I want to the Steering Committee trying to determine for them there was a clear alternative to the election pro-

14 vacant seats

At the March meeting of the University Council—the highest governing body of the trustees—the members voted to change their existing by-laws to seat 14 undergraduate students. At the April 21, Mr. Russell, as vice provost for student affairs, was delegated the authority to supervise the selection of the student members.

Mr. Russell was not unaware that the Council was contemplating adding student members... At the February Council meeting, if not sooner, Mr. Russell knew it would be his job to arrange for some student members. Yet after the Council formally handed him the responsibility, a month passed without any visible sign of activity.

Finally, Mr. Russell reached his decision. After the U.P.S.G was a democratically elected student government, the vice provost decided to launch a referendum for the Forum as a legitimate nominating committee under a November U.P.S.G resolution. The Forum student members accepted this responsibility, but later decided that they were not a proper body for selection. At that time, the students, with the agreement of the vice provost, set up a University-wide election.

The student members of the Forum decided that the results of the referendum would be binding. The students put election.

The student members of the Forum decided that the referendum Wednesday, and no undergraduate students will sit on the Council at its May meeting.

The vice provost decided that it would be proper to hold the election under the Council as set up by the Forum situation in instigated and agitated by the country's

First, the vice provost should have recognized much more than the fact that he could not sit on the Council at its May meeting.

Second, Mr. Russell interpreted the U.P.S.G resolution when the final interpretation should have been made by the Joint Student Judiciary of U.P.S.G.

Third, Mr. Russell was seriously remiss in not approaching the student members of the Forum with his decision before he went before the steering committee.

As the situation now exists, there will be no student referendum Wednesday, and no undergraduate students will sit on the Council at its May meeting.

It is clear that this was neither the wish of the Council at its March meeting, nor is it what the student want. The vice-president should conduct undergraduate-at-large elections on Wednesday in the hope that any previous errors in judgment and interpretation will not result in 14 vacant seats in May.

Men of conscience

On Thursday, the University will convoke the second University Council Steering Committee, the only such conference anywhere in the nation. On that evening, members and friends of the members of the University will perform in Irvine Hall in a ceremony of conscience, decrying the beastial and bullish war in Southeast Asia.

Last year, the first commemoration, the Reverend Silas Coffin urged war and draft protestors to revolt "because you know what happens to you are right." We know that massive resistance to the Selective Service laws will stop the war, and we know we're right.

The ceremony Thursday night will recognize and honor both those who have returned their draft cards and those who support them in this action. The speakers will be Thomas P. Gries, well-received from his speech, from poetry, from draft resistance, and Michael Ferber, who was indicted last year for holding a mini-course in Coffee and Du, Benagconcert Spock.

The draft resistors will not be alone Thursday night. Members of the FBI and the Philadelphia police will be there, intimidating in their presence, but as is the habit of students, they too will be influenced by their activities and they too will be inspired by the impotence of Vietnam.

Of the men in the audience will present a written statement of their refusal to fight in this amoral war, which is supported by no connection with the Selective Service. These men and those who give their support show a new and far-flung order.

We urge the whole of the University family to join us in support and in beating these men the honor due those who live by conscience.

Charles C. Price
Chairman, University Council Steering Committee

Letters to the editor

John A. Russell, Jr.

Sirs: We believe the editorial strike April 24th Pennsylvania and we are surprised to see it off our next. We believe the Steering Committee of the University Council will become aware of the University Council for its purposes.

The Formers were recently restored in an unequaled election in the Up-

On the basis of what I judge to be rousing among many students and in view of the formal election in a form of student government to be held in the fall, it occurred to me that the final election for the new student government to be held in the fall might be held a little before the fall election for the new student government. This was a decision to be made in regard to the procedure for nomination; the procedure for election and the procedure for selection.

We regret this delay but, of course, we cannot blame either group for making the decision to restructure the election procedures, seriously erred in his methods of effecting these changes.

First, the vice provost should have consulted much more than the student members of the Forum with his decision before he went before the steering committee.

We regret this delay but, of course, we cannot blame either group for making the decision to restructure the election procedures, seriously erred in his methods of effecting these changes.

Second, Mr. Russell interpreted the U.P.S.G resolution when the final interpretation should have been made by the Joint Student Judiciary of U.P.S.G.

Guidelines on Open Expression

(Adopted by the University Council on April 5, 1969)

I. Principles

1. The freedom of expression and assembly, as a community of scholars, students, faculty and employees, is a necessary foundation of thought, inquiry and lawful assembly. The freedom to experiment, to question, to accept different data and viewpoints, to bear, to express, to debate various views, and the freedom to participate in the formation of existing practices and laws is a fundamental right which must be upheld and practiced by the University in a free society.

2. The University recognizes that the educational process includes demonstrations and other forms of collective expression, the University shall safeguard the right of individuals to engage in demonstrations on campus within the limits of these Guidelines. The University also affirms the right of students to express their actual activities within the University and to be protected from philosophic and ideological interference with their views or expressed to students.

3. The Guidelines are designed to encourage the continuance of openness and effectiveness of channels of communication among students, students on questions of common interest. To further these purposes, a Committee on Open Expression is hereby established, with the University Council as the exclusive body in the determination of the substance of the policies and procedures and the substance of the implementation, the publication of the guidelines.

4. Specific activities should be given in the policies and procedures to protect and further the educational process, including on student, faculty or administrative organizations, to receive request for a course or the making of recommendations to amend or repeal the Guidelines. Before adopting a rule, the Committee should hold an open hearing on the text of the proposed rule and receive the views of interested individuals or groups. An affirmative vote of seven members is required to make such recommendations.

II. Standards

A. The right of individuals and groups generally to engage in demonstrations shall not be infringed.

B. The substance or the nature of the views expressed is not as important as the manner of their expression, whether by means of organization or by means of action.

III. Guidelines

1. Termination of demonstrations should not be used to interfere with the operation of hospitals, emergency facilities, communication systems, police or other University personnel, planning or participating in demonstrations should not create any disturbance.

2. Procedures

a. Meetings of the Committee on Open Expression will be held at the request of an interested member of the University. If the members are unable to agree upon such a procedure, and instead select an interim process shall serve only until their peers are established as an appropriate basis for any restriction upon or encouragement of open expression.

b. Members of the University, student, faculty or administrative organizations, entitled to request use of any available facility or meeting place, shall be subject to the same rules governing the use of such facilities.

3. Termination of demonstrations may be determined by the following standards: a. Acts that cause injury to persons or damage to property, or which threaten to cause such injury or damage, is impermissible.

b. Demonstrations should not interfere with the operation of hospitals, emergency facilities, communication systems, police or other University personnel, planning or participating in demonstrations should not create any disturbance.

4. Meetings of the Committee on Open Expression will be held at the request of an interested member of the University. If the members are unable to agree upon such a procedure, and instead select an interim process shall serve only until their peers are established as an appropriate basis for any restriction upon or encouragement of open expression.

b. Members of the University, student, faculty or administrative organizations, entitled to request use of any available facility or meeting place, shall be subject to the same rules governing the use of such facilities.

It was a long weekend for Penn's 11-0 baseball team.

The Quakers, who were to face Brown and Yale this weekend after having played four games this past week in Maine, were of course bolstered by the fact that they had played both games and won to back to Philadelphia. The two teams, the Blue and White and the Quakers, were among the teams that were in the tournament, but the Blue and White and the Quakers were the teams that were in the tournament.

Steve Kirby was also a victor, as he took his event for the fifth consecutive victory.

The mile marked the return of Julio Fried, the star of the 800 and 1500 meter events. Mr. Sheerr, president of the Crown Distributors, will be presented a dedication held today at the stadium.

The Gimbel Gym swimming pool will be dedicated to the memory of the Gimbel family, who have contributed to the pool in recent years.

Jeff Fried and Rick Velson closed the bar at 6 feet in the high jump, one second behind Flynn.
