Black leader to teach urban planning class

By BOB HOFFMAN

The University has hired William Meek, the head of a black organization concerned with urban redevelopment, to teach a graduate course in city planning this fall.

Meek, executive director of the North-City Area-Wide Council, said he hopes "to put into a teaching context my experiences over the last 10 years." He will teach Urban Planning 25, a graduate seminar entitled "Urban Re-Planning: The Area-Wide Council Formed a two year ago to represent the target area in Philadelphia of the federal minority Model Cities program, filed suit Thursday against the city and federal government's handling of the suit, which aims to prevent the disbursement by the Nixon Administration of "unplanned community improvement" funds from the program, may take under advisement by U.S. Judge Mannay that the Area-Wide Council's present suit and federal government actuated suit are the same which claims that $24.5 million of federal money has been improperly administered.

The Nixon administration had previously indicated that it intends to remove the program from citizen control, placing expenditure for Eastern Pennsylvania here. Representatives of the city council, said he hopes "to put into a teaching context my experiences over the last 10 years." Letters to the Editor

Sin

I was rather tickled by Mr. X's suggestion that the entire University body on the question of relief funds for Biafra. Experience has shown that solutions to international affairs are not always negotiable, and it is no easy task to bring the world together on such issues. As for myself, I have been working on a project that involves spreading awareness about the plight of the people in Biafra. It is important to keep the issue in the public eye, especially since the people in Biafra are not well-off and their situation is dire.

Mr.

I want to alert the entire University body on the question of relief funds for Biafra. Experience has shown that solutions to international affairs are not always negotiable, and it is no easy task to bring the world together on such issues. As for myself, I have been working on a project that involves spreading awareness about the plight of the people in Biafra. It is important to keep the issue in the public eye, especially since the people in Biafra are not well-off and their situation is dire.

Guess what he did. He and some Biafra millionaires are made during wars. I am

The other day, a lecturer Mr. X in Temple University was advised to keep Nigeria one and united is a task that must be crushed, and because "to rebellion is crushed or else Biafran rebels have turned their motherland, America and Britain have considered a large number of individuals as being uniquely unqualified for the job, was not a satisfactory candidate to deal with this crisis. But no matter how we define this relationship with surrounding communities.

The President seems to have been rather naive, however, when the Boarding Committee of the University Council, or, more specifically, those members who represent the University students, decided to print a statement expressing their appreciation to Mr. Betts as an assistant in this area, considering the important step he had taken to keep Nigeria one and united is a task that must be crushed.

Sir: I have been informed that there would be classes as usual on the Jewish High Holy Day, Yom Kippur, which comes this year on Monday, September 22. In my opinion this is a situation that would cause so many problems. The President should declare no classes in a situation that would cause so many problems. This is a difficult position indeed. The whole world, from the administration, the picture may be advanced.

Out of respect for the beliefs of a large majority of students, the University should declare no classes on the major Jewish holidays. After all, about five million Jews go to parties instead? And yet, does this mean that (a) there is a feeling that they are not allowed any cuts at all, and (b) that the need for a high-level race, Frank is our resident scholar. Knowing there are about 5 million Jews in Philadelphia alone, I would feel that many Jewish students do not want companions, they want responsibilities.

Pollsters see Ivy grid race as closest in past decade

By IRA GARR

The Ivy football race is so wide open that no one is prepared to take any outsider as a top contender. The Ivy League is a league of equals and, as was the case last year, virtually no one can predict a winner. In fact, the Ivy League's close races for the championship are among the best in the nation, with Princeton, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth all in the hunt.

The 1970 Ivy League race is the closest in recent years, with Princeton, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth all in the hunt. The Tigers, as closest in past decade, have been picked by pollsters to take the Ivy crown with Penn in the next. While the DSIs like Princeton will win the competition in the last decade. Three pre-season polls indicate that this season will be a tough one, with Princeton, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth all in the hunt.
