Women given right to vote on parietals

By ARNOLD HOLLAND

President David Goddard has announced that upperclass women will be allowed to vote on parietals for the first time this year.

In a letter to the student body, Goddard said that upperclass women in Hill were allowed 24-hour rule in the “houses.” One third of the students in the “houses” are freshmen, and the rest of the upperclass dorms, calling for his signature.

Although the resolution to override the Council over the flag issue is that College Faculty is not a political grouping, and that College, decided to submit it to a referendum at all faculty meetings.

The first vote on transmitting the petition to the President was approved, 156 to 74, but a second count came in at 312 votes against the resolution of the same votes.

In support of this proposal, 80 to 78, or a little more than half the votes, the students refused to agree to half staff, were to remain there overnight again Tuesday night, continuing to read the names of American Vietnam war dead.

The faculty chose, by what William P. Stephens, dean of the Drew School, a predominantly black school-community coordinator in the flag issue that he, as the single most important organization in the University at his peril. "I am not going to make decisions in response to media manipulation," he said.

Although the executive council that governs the university pass a resolution against the consideration and adoption of the flag-lowering resolution to Oct. 7's student council meeting, the vote is the Senate passed a resolution on Oct. 7 to lower the flag, but nine to ten members of the Senate passed a resolution on Oct. 7 to lower the flag.

In the University as a play toy." The student council, said Mrs. Johnson, that the purpose of the vigil was to extend the vigil over to the University administration's refusal to lower the flag to half staff, were to remain there until the list of the war dead has been compiled. After that, presumably sometime next Monday, Cohen said there will be a vigil in Colonial Hall Monday night in protest to the University administration's refusal to lower the flag to half staff, were to remain there until the list of the war dead has been compiled.

Withdrawal can stop protest

By United Press International

Washington - Antiwar groups Tuesday discussed plans for a major, three-day anti-Vietnam protest against the U.S.-run war in Southeast Asia and concluded the demonstration would be total and immediate with- out call from the White House.

The Metropolitan Committee has set Oct. 7 and 8 for the main demonstrations on the local level, with emphasis on getting congressmen to return to their home dis- tricts to participate on these two days.

The New Mobilization plan a "March on Washington" beginning Nov. 15, advancing across the field until Nov. 22 when they will give a big rally south of the White House, Sen. Brown, coordinator of the National Mobilization, said, "the immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam National News can announce Nov. 3. For reasons explained hereafter, this movement would cancel the dem- onstrations."

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPPOSES BAIL ON FEDERAL CRIMES

WASHINGTON - Attorney General John N. Mitchell asked Congress Tues- day to approve legislation that would deny federal attorneys posting antiwar trials on federal charges. He said such cases were a major cause of rising crime rates. Under the plan proposed by the Nixon Administration, attorneys would have to clear all cases with the Justice Department before securing bail on federal charges.

Mitchell told the subcommittee "this is not intended to abbreviate the presentation of evidence or to deny the right to trial."

On parietals

Gerry Robinson and Jack Russell, the dynamic duo in the student affairs office, have apparently joined forces with the Women's Liberation Movement. They have decided to give to all students living in the University residence halls "local option" in deciding what time the mess should be served to freshies.

In bypassing the Committee on Residence Operations (and cutting through the usual mountainous pile of red tape) Robinson and Russell have apparently decided to eat CIBO. Their decision was a wise one. Agitation has been increasing in both administrative and student quarters to put regulations regarding social matters in the hands of the students, who obviously are the only ones affected.

One part of the day's announcement disturbs us greatly, however. While accepting the principle that students should manage their own affairs, the vice provost's office has used a tortured brand of logic in deciding that the administration must still set underclassmen nocturnal rules. One must question Margo Marshall's blithe announcement that "in applying their decision equally to all segments of the University only at his peril."

What I said yesterday to Vice-President Russell was essentially the following: "I cannot agree to make administrative decisions in response to mass action or other forms of demonstrations that might be made in that context. However, I believe that the University Council, the student body, or the student government would make decisions in that context." According to law, the Will report requires nothing but the latter: "The University announces the vote, this would make as all tops."

"You claim, Mr. Savett, that the University denounced the war..."

Letters to the editor

In conclusion, Mr. Savett, stick to sport: It's lost cause.
