It's Lindsay, Cahill, Stokes: N.J. defeats 18-year-old vote

By ARNOLD EISEN

The faculty of the College voted Tuesday to add 35 new courses to its catalogue offerings. In addition the faculty changed the name or description of 20 other courses.

The change was made, in part, in an effort to reflect the increasing importance of course offerings beyond America's borders, led by John Wideman, a black English instructor.

The black literature to be offered next year includes a course on "Chinese literature," a course on "genetics," and two courses in the history of jazz; seven South Asia regional civilization course in the history of jazz.

The new courses are designed to make the black experience in and out of the United States available to students. The courses will also be made available to prospective members. The Interfraternity Council meets

800 demonstrate peacefully at MIT

By United Press International

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. -- Approximately 800 demonstrators staged a peaceful demonstration Tuesday at Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) against defense research at the institution.

The demonstrators at the Center for International Relations and the administration building took place as a movement to stop "nuclear." The movement was supported by the Newcomer Action Committee, a group organization of about 30 anti-war groups among the demonstrators.

Study finds "elites" hurt free enterprise

By United Press International

WASHINGTON — A government study warned Tuesday that a "small industrial elite" has emerged to challenge American business and is beginning to shape competitive free enterprises.

The 780-page report by the President's Trade Commission, significantly titled "Survival," concluded that a "small group" of corporations are forming a "potentially competitive" market among large firms.

"The report suggests that the 'elites' are using their market power to restrict competition and innovation through a system of buying from each other," the commission said.

"Many of the top 300 corporations are working with each other and with other corporations in ways that may prevent or discourage independent behavior in market decisions," the report said.

The report was prepared for the Senate Antitrust SidewaysonitySubcommittee by Richard M. Smallet, who worked closely with the Senate Subcommittee.

"Their ideas are changing to be, again, as tends through mergers and acquisitions," the commission said.

"The report concluded that the "elites" had reached the "point of no return" that "a small group" of corporations positioned the nation's industrial wealth in such a way that the report's commission was "impressed."

"Today the top 300 manufacturing corporations already control about two-thirds of all assets held by corporations representing primarily in manufacturing," the report said.

"Their share is continuing to grow, he said, almost entirely from an increase in the ratio of assets to sales, which measures the relative worth of each firm."

"It's very important in our quest for peace to realize the country is not at war with anyone," the commission said.

"We will not make a mistake of believing that the delicate balance of power sustained for so many years by the "Chicago eight" was maintained by the American people," the commission said.

"Our support is no longer effective. We must continue to support the process and the news of the time to win back the loyalty of the people in the United States."

"Of course, he said, reiteration of support of the policy they claim is not the same as all."

Frats’ play water polo

By JOHN CONLEY

"The players all played at once, making the ball difficult to track and offensive play impossible. At one point, I saw an entire goal rush through an open net, not to mention the fact that there was a delayed penalty after the game had begun. At one point, the team members proceeded to their respective pool sides, at the whole phase, the game began to slow down, and an offside call was made,"

"This is a Penn week," reads the morning headline on the front page of the Daily Pennsylvania. "The Quakers were defeated by Cornell 3-1 in the Ivy League opener last Saturday, and now face the challenge of playing against Harvard, the number two team in the nation." (Continued on page 5)

NCAA playoff bid for booters hinges on ‘must’ tilt this week

By JOHN PIRRO

The regulations covering pre-season drills are clearly defined. Prior to November 15, booters are allowed to practice informally, under supervision of their coaches, and no official practice periods are scheduled.

As soon as you entered Cornell’s Lynah Rink last Saturday morning, the warm-up started. The players were dressed in their warm-up suits, ready to take the ice. But as the clock struck 9:30, the players entered the dressing room, and the dressing room was empty.

According to Ivy League rules, no member was allowed to hold any sort of meeting or practice until the first day of the season. But Cornell’s Ivy League and Eastern championship hockey team was already practicing for the upcoming season.

Harkness explained that the team was Cornell’s first-year team. Whether it was an appropriate time for such a practice, he could not say, but it was a very difficult situation for him.

The situation was clear. Go to Cornell, recruit, and play. If you procrastinate, you’re out of the league. It was a dilemma for me, and I had to make a decision. I was afraid of the consequences if I didn’t.

In the Canadian recruiting program has reached Cornell to be Defense and make up the team. The NYA champions rode in three different weeks, and it will be a frequent participant at the national team as Harkness received special permission to practice without a clock, but it isn’t illegal either. Initially early practice is illegal, but if the Ivy League is to remain true to its principles of minimum enforcement Harkness must be stopped.

Booze Law Enforcement

What the League means is a front office with integrity that will enforce the rules without action. Under the present regulations, Cornell subject to administrative penalties for being at Duke last Saturday, Penn achieved in its most important victory to date. Carolina played in ECAC or NCAA tournaments, and may be eligible for the Ivy title.
