Evers scorns hate in Irving speech

Black leader Charles Evers last night preached a message of love as the best means of bringing about a non-violent reconciliation of blacks and whites in America. Speaking straightforwardly in proverbial terms, Evers pronounced, emotional terms, Evers scorns hate.

"Words have a way of getting out of their mouths and into the world without the person to whom they were spoken ever realizing what has happened. Words are like bricks and have to be watched carefully to see how they are being used and whether they are to be used in a constructive way."

Faced with the New Student Union, and the problem of bricking the steps of the Student Union, Evers proceeded to explain his philosophy of love. Evers states that "love is the only means by which we can approach the problem of non-violent opposition to hate."

"We are non-violent in every thought and utterance," Evers said, "and we will continue to be non-violent."

Evers also emphasized the importance of education, especially in the lives of the young. He said, "Education is the key." He also said that "we must teach our children to love and to understand each other."

Evers concluded his speech by saying, "Our battle is a battle of ideas, not a battle of force."

Casino project approved

By BOB HOFMAN

Approximately 125 freshmen rooms will be moving into the new dorm project next year in a pilot project to see if it is a successful and logical dorm program. The dorm will be located at the University of Pennsylvania. The dorm will be the largest dormitory in the city and will house over 1,000 students. The dorm will be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1974.

The dorm will be a new concept in dormitory living and will be the largest dormitory in the city. The dorm will be a one-story building with a maximum capacity of 1,000 students. The dorm will be divided into four sections, each with its own kitchen and lounge. The dorm will also have a swimming pool and a fitness center.

The dorm will be open to all students, regardless of their major or minor. The dorm will have a full-time staff to supervise the dormitory and to provide support services for the students.

Faculty to review museum sales

By ALBAN SALAMAN

Faculty members from the oriental studies department yesterday reviewed an atmosphere of excitement and enthusiasm followed the approval of a $250,000 project. The project would involve the purchase of art objects and artifacts from the University Museum.

The project was approved by the University Council, the board that oversees the University's finances. The project is expected to raise $250,000 for the purchase of art objects and artifacts.

The project will be administered by the University Museum, which has a long history of collecting and preserving art objects and artifacts. The University Museum is one of the most important museums in the world and is home to a vast collection of art objects and artifacts.

The project is expected to be completed by the end of the year. The project will be funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Dining service theft nets $900 in cash

By JACOBS JONES

A high University official has revealed that the general dining service, which serves food to all University students and faculty, has been the target of several thefts in recent months.

The most recent theft occurred on March 1, when a dining service employee was caught stealing $900 from the cash register. The employee was caught by the University's police department and is currently being held in jail.

The University has initiated a new policy of stricter controls over the cash register, and all employees are now required to sign a statement acknowledging their responsibility for protecting the cash register.

Computer service inadequate

Registrar considers change

By JOAN REEDER

The Office of the Registrar and the computer service have been criticized by some students and faculty for inadequate service. The registrar, Dr. Robert Shilling, has requested that a task force be established to investigate the problem.

The task force will be composed of representatives from the Office of the Registrar, the computer service, and the faculty senate. The task force will meet weekly to discuss the issues and make recommendations.

The registrar has also requested that the Office of the Registrar and the computer service be placed under the same administration to ensure more efficient service.

Chi/7 trial ends with split verdict

By JOAN RIEDER

A federal court jury yesterday found a defendant guilty of all charges, including assault, conspiracy, and criminal contempt, in the Chicago Seven trial.

The jury's decision, reached after 41 hours of deliberations, was announced by U.S. District Judge Julius J. Hoffman.

The trial of the "Chicago Seven" in Chicago, which ended this week, was one of the most controversial cases in recent history. The seven defendants were accused of inciting a riot at a Vietnam War protest in Chicago in 1968.

The jury's verdict is expected to be appealed by the defendants.

Looking to the future, Nixon held out the possibility of a negotiated settlement, but he also acknowledged that "the present movement toward detente is not going to come to grips".

He concluded by saying that "we are at a turning point in history, and we have an awesome responsibility to make the right choices and to take action accordingly."

The movement is still alive

by arnold eisen

Down from sinai

In April 1965, 13,000 people participated in the first March on Washington against the war in Vietnam. 260,000, the march of the march, marched in the street to demand to end the war.

On the evening of June 15, an antiwar mass meeting was scheduled to take place in Washington. The meeting was sponsored by the National Student Mobilization Committee.

The movement grew from a small group of people in a small city to a movement that included even some strike rallies.

The recent fall offensive against the war was the largest peaceful protest against government policy in the history of the United States.

The movement should stay united and be united...
St. Elmo's: The preppies take a pride in isolation

The National Chairman of the Jewish Defense League, Rabbi Marvin Antelman, said he was disturbed by a college newspaper article which described the area around St. Elmo's as "clubby image." He pointed out that he was "completely apathetic" when his fraternity's "clubby image" was described as "freaks." What is this thing called love?

Sprouse St. meet is sweet

By JOHN CONLEY

Wednesday afternoon witnessed one of those events which incorporate an unambiguously American mixture of cheer, curiosity, and ample romance.

No, it’s not the Varmine War, but the TEP Mile Relay.

This Franklin Field contest of the finest athletes at the university is currently sponsored by the Interfraternity Council (IFC), however, rumor has it that the Fourth Department is the true mover behind the scene. (One competition officer uses jail-psyche students to encourage the obscurity of the phenomenon.)

The competition is divided into ten heats, the second group of under-graduates versus the seniors, the second group of undergraduates versus the seniors, and then on these hands, singly endowed with visions of delight.

In the race, it is generally believed to be as quickly captured as Groundhog Day. This year, however, the communications were slowed, and better-than-average rivalry temporarily marred performance.

Several players, however, managed to race above the average and break out on those hands that were endowed with visions of delight.

The TEP Mile Relay was the greatest number of competitions as the Distance Team won the event.

Ferd Smarr's doesn't look like a jock. He usually wears horn-rimmed glasses, is only 5'8" and weighs 165 lbs. and is considered far too small to be a top candidate for the 110-meter hurdles.

Yet, he can race from a standing start and leave his opponents in the dirt. A true track and field man, Smarr is a threat to win the 110-meter hurdles, the 440-yard dash, and the long jump.

His 110-meter time is believed to be around 10.6 seconds. His 440-yard dash time is just under 47 seconds. His long jump is around 17 feet.

Smarr's talents are used to good advantage in the Sprint Team's relay races.

The TEP Relay saw the greatest displays of talent in the Mile Relay. The Frosh Team won the event with a time of 4:22.1.

The Senior Team won the event with a time of 4:19.5, and the Sophomore Team won the event with a time of 4:21.7.

Since decathlon competition isn’t efficient enough to high schoolers, Smarr usually limited himself to the pole vault and long jump, disdained his fear of success by setting his 10 "saddles" in three years.

This year, Smarr was seen to compete in the Mile Relay, the 110-meter hurdles, the 440-yard dash, and the long jump.
