State funding won’t stop cuts in budget

By JACK N. GORMAN

The $17 million dollar allocation approved by the state legislature yesterday will not enable the University to reverse any existing cuts in financial aid or to reverse the decision to open the arts and crafts center. The University will continue to do without the newly formed faculty of black studies.

The bill, passed by a 234-38 vote, was the same as that approved by the state legislature for the current fiscal year. Including the University allocation, which was released Thursday night by President Leonard Clay, the new budget is $1,271,125 lower than the 1969-70 budget.

Seventeen members of the University faculty, including two black students, held a sit-in yesterday in the President’s office and spent 5 hours discussing how to prevent any further cuts in financial aid.

The sit-in was a response to a proposal by the administration and the Board of Trustees to cut financial aid of approximately $1.2 million.

"It is a great disappointment to us to think that this could happen," said Dr. Paulie Wolfman, the University’s first black student. "It seems to me fairly important that students be involved in the decision-making process of the University.

"It seems to me fairly important that the administration consider our demands," he added. "We feel that University students could come to a better understanding of the situation in a seminar."
Tenure

Rieber added, however, that he favored some kind of tenure cap in evaluating teachers.

While agreeing on the principle of active student participation, both Riasanovsky and Dr. Hilary F. Con...

Sanctuary at St. Mary's
by peter eglick

The sanctuary in our own community is St. Mary's. The service is on our own ground and everyone embraces his neighbor. I wish I could have gone to see this service. But it was closed down by the police because the people who play guitar softly and weep and sing, they are our neighbors.

Fencers meet Columbia in Ivy League title tilt

By JIM LEMBERG

The time has come. The Penn swordsmen, defending Ivy and National Collegiate champions, will be facing a formidable foe in tomorrow's battle at 7 P.M. in the palestra. Columbia's second string, the Purple Knights, will be the opposition.

The Pennsylvanians have been fencing in a shadow of sorts for some time now. Their first string, the champions, have been favored since early in the season. At this time, it was predicted that they would be the Ivy champions. The only catch has been favored since early in the season. At this time, it was predicted that they would be the Ivy champions. The only catch has been the possibility of the other two teams possibly being able to pull off a three-for-three outcome. The only catch has been the possibility of the other two teams possibly being able to pull off a three-for-three outcome.

The leaders in the Ivy League, Columbia, are second in the league. The Pennsylvanians have been second in the league. The Pennsylvanians have been second in the league.

The Quakers have the three Ivy league titles in the last three years, and the Pennsylvanians are the defending Ivy champions. The Quakers have won or are on the verge of winning the Ivy League championship.

The two teams will meet again on January 3, the first day of the Ivy League season.
