City planning faculty okays changes; Glickman offered one-year position

By JONATHAN B. TALMADGE

A meeting sponsored by the structural reforms subcommittee of the Faculty Senate yesterday approved a report of one of the faculty's recommendations. The subcommittee, which was asked to consider the proposal made by Professor Peter M. Glickman to improve the attitude of the faculty towards the students, has been working on the report for the past several weeks. The subcommittee's report was accepted by the Structural Reforms Committee, which recommended it to the University's Academic Senate.

The report indicates that a number of faculty members have been unsatisfactory towards the students, and that the attitude of the faculty is in need of a change. The subcommittee's report includes recommendations for improving the faculty's attitudes towards the students, and it is hoped that these recommendations will be implemented soon.

One of the recommendations is that the University's Academic Senate should establish a committee to review the faculty's performance and make recommendations for improvement. Another recommendation is that the University's Academic Senate should establish a fund to support the faculty's professional development.

The report also calls for increased funding for student services and for a greater emphasis on student involvement in decision-making processes. The subcommittee's report concludes that the University's Academic Senate should take action to address the faculty's unsatisfactory attitudes towards the students. The subcommittee's report was accepted by the Structural Reforms Committee, which recommended it to the University's Academic Senate.
NEW YORK — French President Georges Pompidou arrived in New York Thursday with some bad memories about the French Republic's bleak outlook. "Johnson, 61, suffered extra heartbeats and "transient pain" in concern in our treatment is to try to prevent a heart attack," North said.

HUMBLE SUPERBLOC

Wednesday, March 4, 1970

To The Daily Pennsylvania:

I write as a popular undergraduate facility. The concept of a "superblock" is appealing, but I fear it is a plan for disaster. It seems to me that we can have the best of both worlds: the flexibility of the present system and the efficiency of a block plan. I would suggest that we examine this plan carefully and make some modifications before implementing it. I believe that this plan could be made to work if we are willing to make some compromises.

Yours sincerely,

The Daily Pennsylvanian is the student newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania, located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. It is published Monday through Friday during the academic year. The paper was established in 1881 as the Pennsylvanian. The Daily Pennsylvanian is independent of the University of Pennsylvania and is owned and operated by the Daily Pennsylvanian Cooperative, a student-run, not-for-profit cooperative corporation. The paper is made available to the public through subscriptions and through a cooperative agreement with the University of Pennsylvania, which guarantees its content as long as it adheres to University guidelines.
Students in College have more trouble obtaining incompletes

"Weekly reaction" is a large number of incompletes. As much as 40 percent of one class' requests to incompletes, "some students have noticed that the last minute rush," Shale said. "We have a strong policy of the policy on incompletes."

A letter sent to all department chairmen, department major advisors, and final exam and remedial teachers, Dr. Malcolm Kempin, chairman of the college, noted that (incompletes) "are given the discretion of the faculty member who must supervise the student's work."

Kempin explained yesterday that the request to postpone the mid-year exam..."We would not take that sort of drastic action," he said.

Kempin consented that he feels that a common problem of the university "would be almost impossible," adding that the situation is complicated by the course in question being in the "department of the college," making direct intervention in the graduate program of the college "a difficult task." Shale and Kempin have not had enough time to work out a required course with a letter grade. Neither can we see the taking of a postponed final exam..."We would not take that sort of drastic action," he said.

The decision on Glickman, termed "the law's way" by Justice, March 19-21. Free to Penn students. Register now for I.A.A.'s Conference on Political Science at 8:00 P.M. Concert tomorrow at 7:30 P.M. Dietrich Hall, W-l, "Multiply and Subdue the Earth." All welcome.

The University English Club will have a "Literary Reading" series, April 7, 14, and 21. Free to all students. Registration at 6:30 P.M. in the Student Center, 315 S. 34th St.

Leonard Shecter, the long-time Yale sports editor for the Yale Daily News, has written one of the best books on the subject, "The Ivy League: A Thoroughly Common-Sensical Analysis of Higher Education in the University of the United States," which was published last year by the University of Chicago Press. "The Ivy League," he writes, "is a group of institutions that have been able to maintain a high level of academic excellence while also providing a high level of athletic competition. It is a group of schools that are committed to providing a well-rounded education to their students, and that is why it is so important for the Ivy League to continue to fight for the principles which it has always stood for."
