Philadelphia ban on assemblies to be taken to Supreme Court

By JACK CORNAN

Two University law professors and a Philadelphia attorney, who filed an appeal with the United States Supreme Court to review a March Supreme Court decision, have filed an appeal with the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to uphold the ban of all public assemblies in Philadelphia. The ban was imposed by the City Council of Philadelphia and was declared constitutional by the Court.

The appeal was filed by Professors MARGO MARSHALL and CAROL JONES of the University law school and a Philadelphia attorney, MARVIN SILVERSTEIN. The appeal is an attempt to reverse a March decision of the Supreme Court that upheld the ban of all public assemblies in Philadelphia following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in April, 1968.

The appeal is based on the argument that the ban is unconstitutional because it violates the First Amendment right of free speech. The professors and the attorney contend that the ban is too broad and that it violates the rights of peaceful assembly.

The appeal will be heard by the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, which has jurisdiction over Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware.

In January, the decision of the CW faculty was not binding on the College, Dr. Warren C. North, a member of the United States Board of Education, said that the decision of the CW faculty is not binding on the College.

Clickman accepts professorship, City Planning boycott averted

By ELLEN WEBER

Faced with the loss of a valuable campus resource, the students of the University were able to avert a City Planning boycott through a cooperative effort by several groups.

The students, who had been planning to stage a protest against the planned construction of a new building near the campus, were able to persuade the City Planning Board to delay its decision until the students could present their case.

An invitation to learn and become successful

General Kent recently sent a letter to me that several programs governed students' work because it told them what their learning bonds and how far their efforts were to be rewarded. This is not always they are becoming better people because. If you're a student, it's becoming better acquainted with the world, we can work at the high levels of learning and understanding. I've learned a lot about the world of learning. To be accurate, we're learning as much about the world as we're learning about ourselves. At first you may not be able to see it or appreciate it, but if you work at it, you'll see it change. The main thing to remember is that we're learning about our world. The job is to be a good learner. We should be learning as we work. We should be learning as we speak.

If it is accepted by the Supreme Court, said the agent: "would it have a better chance of staying or standing up against the appeal?"

Three weeks ago, Crawford and Bender and their colleagues at the Community of Students announced that they had reached an agreement with the University to set up the program this year.

The seminar program, Marks- worth explained, was established by a group of University students and faculty, with the help of the American Bar Association, to provide a forum for discussing and debating issues of concern to the University community. The program was established weekly meeting with new topics each week, which will be presented to the University community.

The program is designed to foster an understanding of the University community's needs and to provide a forum for discussing and debating issues of concern to the University community. The program will be presented to the University community at least 11 times a year, and will be held on the University campus.

Regarding the appeal, Crawford explained, "the Court has not asked the state to submit an answer to the appeal, which would have a better chance of staying or standing up against the appeal?"

An era in Philadelphia ended last night, and the Cherry Hill Arena's roof was taken to pieces when the Bondarenko Brothers of the Nova Scotia team outscored the West 5-3 at the end of a 3-6-3 tie game

The road to the finals was an easy one for the Nova Scotia team, who have been a force in the East Coast competition for the last 10 years

The Nova Scotia team was led by Vic Bondarenko, who scored both the first and the last goals of the game

The Nova Scotia team, coached by Tom Bondarenko, played a tight defensive game, limiting the West to just a few chances

The game was played in front of a sellout crowd of 3,500 fans

The Nova Scotia team will now advance to the finals, where they will face the winner of the other semifinal game between the Quebec team and the Ontario team
