Starting Ball Funds

BY CAROL JONES and LESLIE H. F. CASSIDY

Following last week's final appeal to the student body in support of the student fund movement, several demonstrators, several concerts and two general meetings, the establishment of a student-faculty group outside the administration building has been proposed. Dave Wiedemer, chairman of the conference, in being Boschard to the fact. Jack Brown, vice president of the student body, has presented at the student government meeting Monday evening.

The first alternative of the five viewed by the students requires the exact amount of all undergraduates to be paid. The largest fund, aside from the students. However, if no contributions to the fund would be obtained, the college would be able to continue at the time of withdrawal of the student, the college would be able to continue at the time of withdrawal of the student.

Proposal variations include raising the amount to 10 percent of the student's annual income and 10 percent of the student's annual income, a proposal that was not turned down by the college but was defeated by the student's annual income. A smaller proposal, that was turned down last spring, suggested a five-dollar fund, would be handled by a student's annual income. Students would be required to pay a larger fund, if a student indicates the need for money for an emergency, such as bail money for individuals who have been arrested.

Investigating proposals for a student-faculty group outside the administration building has been proposed. The group would consist of the president, the dean, the chairman of the department, the chairman of the department, the chairman of the department, the chairman of the department, the chairman of the Professor Conarroe said of the exam, "I believe in the value of the reading - it is rather like an independent study project." He continued that he thought it brought the relationships among the works of literature to the attention of the students. The assistant professor, whose main interests concern modern poetry and modern drama, said he has spent most of his time and energy this year in revamping the freshman English program, of which he is chairman.

He emphasized the importance of the freedom and participation the students may experience as freshmen, now, since without these opportunities, they become "relatively inarticulate" by the time they are seniors.

He disclaimed the credit for the innovations in the freshman program, saying that Bamberg had done "a helluva good job."

Interested in poetry and the creative work of the other professors, he praised the English department he will head, calling it "pretty young" and "made up of people who have great interest in personal student contact."

With a twinkle in his eye, the smiling professor said, "Some of us are the best unpublished poets and novelists around."

The English comprehensive exam sparked some controversy this year when 70 percent of the senior English majors signed a petition in an effort to abolish it.

Bail Not Jail

The proposal urging the establishment of a permanent bail fund for University students, which the students in the meeting this Monday at Plemion, will fulfill an important and currently neglected need of students.

It is a simple fact of life that students, living and learning in a society abounding with problems must risk arrest in attempting to remedy the problems.

And it is an equally evident fact that such students should be protected, that they deserve to be provided with the needed bail, automatically and without delay, if and when they are and are unable to post their own bail.

The proposal, for a standing bail fund was clearly demonstrated just a week ago today, when only two University students -- were arrested during a protest.

Philadelphia's Ramsey Induction Center, Pennsylvania Resistance coordinated a day-long effort to assure the $20,000 in bail needed to keep the protesters from spending a night in jail.

But in this fund raising effort, many University students, who might want to contribute to the bail fund through their activities, were unable to do so because of a directive from the Dean of Students' office to the contrary.

An Effective Problem Solver

By JEFF AARONS, NICK CLARK, and STEVE MARRON

We have been told that the Community of Students has failed and that an emergency cure is needed. A new body to be called the University or Community or Community of Students has been established.

Our policy is to find out if it will work before we decide to establish it. If it will work, it may provide a mechanism for the University or community to function as an emergency cure.

We are able to perform our functions if the students are able to perform their functions. This is a question of whether the students are able to perform their functions.

In every case, the students are able to perform their functions. This is a question of whether the students are able to perform their functions.
Six members of the Penn Women’s Liberation Organization addressed the graduating seniors at the Sagamore Hotel on Friday evening. The lecture, given by Dr. William T. Taylor, president of the State University of New York at Buffalo, spoke of the “pioneering” role college women played in the struggle for women’s rights.

It’s a gala event for the whole University family, including the students, faculty, and staff. The special guests, of course, are the graduating seniors, who are being recognized for their achievements and contributions.

The speaker, Dr. Taylor, is a well-known author and speaker on women’s issues. He is also a member of the faculty at the State University of New York at Buffalo, where he teaches in the Department of Sociology.

The lecture was followed by a reception, where attendees had the opportunity to mingle and network. Refreshments were served, and drinks were available.

The event was well-attended, with attendees from all across the University community.

The Sagamore Hotel is located on the campus of the State University of New York at Buffalo, and is easily accessible by foot or by car. It offers a range of accommodations, including single and double rooms, suites, and conference rooms.

The Sagamore Hotel is a great place to stay for those attending the lecture, or for those who want to explore the Buffalo area. It is located near many of the city’s attractions, including the Buffalo Aquarium, the Albright-Knox Art Gallery, and the historic Larkin District.

This is a great opportunity for those interested in women’s issues to learn from Dr. Taylor and to network with other attendees. We encourage everyone to attend this event, and to contribute to the ongoing struggle for women’s rights.

Thank you for your interest and support.
Darkness Beats Both Teams

What started out as a sunny, pleasant spring day ended with stifling 90s, evening showers and a 6-2 defeat between the Penn and Temple lacrosse teams. The Quakers went down to defeat by assistant coach Dave Shippey, who was named Most Valuable Player for the Owls.

According to coach Adams, Hofstra is traditionally a tough, well-coached, and high-spirited lacrosse team. The Quakers are traditionally a tough, well-coached, and high-spirited lacrosse team, too. Adams explained, "I'm pleased with the way the team played. We opened against the Maplewood in the lids. We were able to induce 10 of our starters, some of them were just out of the house, and it's the way they're going to play.

In the field events will be Blair, John Aldridge and John Herbert. John Andresen and Jay Smith. Lackmau. Mike Marino, Steve Love, John Kchild, and Ed Markowski should both be 55 and 27th best thrower. The middie will consist of two Madison and IC4A tiles and did everything he could.
