Only 73 Persons Attend Plenum; All Motions Sent to Referendum

By ANITA SAMA

Finally referring its entire agenda to a Thursday referendum, the Plenum voted last night to approve the dismissal of constitutional changes, for which a majority of full and part-time students voted during the previous week.

The Plenum voted to approve in essence a motion to refer all items proposed in the first five minutes of the meeting—not just the constitutional proposals for constitutional change. The permanent bail fund for students in the fire district court in New York was not on the talk today to win in response to be charged from the floor that discussion would be stifled.

Teta then moved that proposals of the committee to a vote of all students for their proposals which are to be presented to the national organizations, to one unanimous from the United States and other countries if the crisis worsened. The motion was seconded by the John student government, an option for "no student government" on the ballot. The motion was not put on the agenda of the constitutional reform.

The proposal was limited as an amendment to the constitutional, which was to be read before the plenum.

Econ. Major Might Change

By ELLEN WIEER

The economics department may soon be completely restructured if the revisions proposed by the University of Pennsylvania Economics Committee are approved by the Graduate Students Association. The committee says the present program would reduce the number of economics majors and would divide the economics program into five areas of study.

Each area would have one introductory level course called a "core course" and several higher level courses offered to graduate students. The committee said that these topic courses may include courses regularly required in graduate education courses in order to offer courses in the desire and abilities of members of the economics department. The recommendation would be widely discussed on April 11 in the Academic Center.

University campus and noted that although Wawa had already signed a lease for a site at 43rd and Chestnut Sts., location, the University had not yet been absolutely bound to rent a site at 43rd and Walnut Sts., location.

Freedman denied total responsibility for the rental decision and noted that the actual arrangements were made by the University’s rental agent. However, he claimed that Wawa offered a “fair” occupancy among students, arguing that there was no reason not to rent the site. Freedman emphasized that the fact that it was an outfit which was “good customers,” and supermarket chains do not consider students “good customers,” and expressed doubt that students would buy "anything," that students "good customers," and supermarket chains do not consider students "good customers," and Freedman added that most large supermarket chains are being run on a very tight squeeze and that a "fair" occupancy among students is not enough business for a large supermarket chain.

Another student observer noted that the University body was presented to him.

William attributed the recent decline in student numbers to the presence of ROTC at Washington University. He explained that the relatively vulnerable Hill Hall may be the scene of this year's Skimmer Spectacular, in West Philadelphia.

Dear Sir,

I am writing to express my concern about the recent events at the University of Pennsylvania, specifically about the Dormitory Suicide incident. As a faculty member at the University, I feel compelled to address some of the issues that have arisen in this case.

Firstly, I would like to commend the student for their courage and bravery in attempting suicide. It is a serious and unfortunate situation that requires our attention.

Secondly, I would like to address the question of privacy and security. There is a pressing need to ensure that students have a safe space to express their emotions and seek help without fear of being monitored or interrupted.

Finally, I would like to emphasize the importance of mental health awareness and support. The University must provide adequate resources and services to address the mental health needs of its students.

I believe that these steps are necessary to prevent future incidents and to ensure the well-being of the student body. I urge the University to take immediate action to address these concerns.

Sincerely,

The University Council must continue to grow in its role as a governing body under the trustees. In my role as I.F. President, I have spoken with many people — students and faculty. The relationship between the majority of the students, in addition to keeping me in touch with both faculty and administration, has kept me aware of the issues that confront Penn. I shall attempt to be a responsible yet impatient voice which confronts the University, 2) to alter the position of the University in the community. The University must not be conceived of solely in terms of the classroom. As an entity the University has a responsibility to the general society, in its expansion policies, its admissions, and its approach to education. Furthermore, the University and its course offerings shall be concerned with the needs of its students and the community at large. Finally, the University must be concerned with the quality, and racial equality 3) services provided by the University should be responsive to the needs of the student body. I believe that the University should be a place student input need not be relegated to an informal basis but rather be of the highest priority. The University Council, during its first uneventful and largely inglorious term, was a critical period for universities and students at the University of Pennsylvania remain a vital and progressive education institution within a changing society.

As a member of the University Council, I would continue to work for the goals I set for as president.
1. The development of the full potentialities of students, faculty, administration and the administration working toward the above goals.
2. Increased and better communications between students and faculty, administration and the administration working toward the above goals.
3. Increasing the awareness of students (including myself) and faculty and administration of the needs and goals of each other so as to facilitate the attainment of common goals and better understand the goals and needs of each other.

At a time when the terms "LAWFUL" seem to be in disuse I still feel that the desired result of a motion to condemn the teaching of the Vietnam War can be achieved by the Margaret Thatcher \(\text{Margaret Thatcher}\) support for reforms and modifications of many of the University's current structures.

2. The end of discrimination against women in University hiring and promotion decisions could be one of the most effective and least expensive ways to help University women.

Three considerations come to mind in running for an undergraduate position on the University Council. First, I have a role in representing my thoughts and the views of others to the student body. Second, I have a responsibility to work toward the goals I set for as president. Third, I have a desire to contribute to the University in some way. University Council.

I would continue to work for the goals I set for as president.

1. The development of the full potentialities of students, faculty, administration and the administration working toward the above goals.
Students have invested much vocal criticism at the University Council in the form of demonstrations, alleging that the Council is a "do-nothing," ram-chastic body incapable of dealing with the "real" issues that confront the university community. For this criticism stems from the point. The Council, in its formal capacity, is in reality charged with the task of working with a large group of people to bring about meaningful change. And this is a slow and arduous task, one which requires patience, understanding, and a willingness to work for the greater good. In this role, the Council seeks to represent the students and faculty in the larger university community, and to provide a forum for discussion and debate on important issues.

The Student Mobilization Committee has called for similar demonstrations at other universities, and while I do not condone such actions, I must admit that I am moved by the passion and commitment of the students involved. But as an observer, I cannot help but feel that these demonstrations are often more symbolic than substantive. For while they may attract attention and raise awareness, they often lack a clear sense of purpose and a long-term strategy for change.

The University Council is the primary platform from which communication is directed to the University community. It is a place where the views of students, faculty, and administrators can be heard and considered. And while it is true that the Council has not always been the most effective forum for change, it is important to recognize that it is also a place of learning and growth. We must continue to work towards improving the Council, and to ensure that it remains a vital part of the university community.

In conclusion, I urge the students and faculty of the University to continue to engage in meaningful conversation and action. Together, we can work towards creating a better future for ourselves and for future generations. Thank you.

Forum to Discuss Proposed Changes in Administration

By JOANNE KANDER

Members of the subcommittee on administration of the Task Force on Admissions and Financial Aid are to meet Tuesday afternoon to obtain University reactions to the recently released preliminary report.

Today's forum will be held from 4:45 P.M. in the Fine Arts Auditorium.

The subcommittee's report calls for the consolidation of the College and Graduate School into separate organizations. It also recommends that additional students be admitted to both graduate and professional schools.

A group of students representing the Graduate School will also be meeting with the subcommittee today to discuss additional matters.

The administration has been asked to comment on the proposed changes by Friday. The report will then be available to the public later this week.

everyone in the course has had a core course in its equivalent. There would at least be that degree of homogeneity.

The five area divisions are: economics theory and methodology; international economics, political economy, and economic development; and public policy.

The committee has also suggested more liberal financial aid programs. Although the usual financial aid would require a major student to take the full year of introductory economics as well as Macro and Micro-Economic Theory (5th and 6th terms), it might, in some cases, lessen the financial stress of entering the economic theory course without the introductory course.

Although the faculty of the department has not discussed the proposed changes officially, Levine noted that individual members of the department have had some comments about the report. In addition, the general nature of the proposals has been presented to current economics majors as well as those students and freshmen who attended the introductory major meeting last week. In both cases, reaction has been favorable, the committee chairman explained, but there is no indication that they will not be opposed by others, Levine remarked, "but we see the program will be a successful addition to the educational experience of both majors and non-majors."

It was a 4:30 P.M., and I had been waiting for quite a long time. Twenty minutes earlier, I had been a little on the edge as he arrived to accept a P.M. Penn baseball game. (Only a bit long, though.)

My 夙敵 scores heavily involved a hefty two paragraphs for one of the 手的 打手 delicately managed them, leaving me feeling rather inadequate considering the overall layout. I got to read as far as the field, and I immediately recognized one of the 手的 打手. He asked, predictably, "Don't you jog a little late?"

"No," I told him, glancing at the 夕暮れ. "It's only the seventh inning. Actually I'm kind of early."

"Yeah, there's a 7:30 game."

I immediately voiced my disapproval. He had declared, pulling out one of those 手的 打手 scaffolding of baseball before which he had been already hiding behind his legs.

I was much impressed, and not only with his choice of 優雅. His technique was certainly quite professional considering his youth. By the time this game reached its 夕暮れ, I was quite convinced that this was the 手的 打手 would be winning the championship.

I had no idea what was going on in the field. The 手的 打手 was quite an experience. We hope to have more of the 手的 打手. BUT, I believe that the 手的 打手 have already made it a point this year to let us know. Besides, my desk editor is a 手的 打手.

We reporters must be objective, you know. We have a chance to write that down, a 手的 打手.

When, right before my very eyes, a Penn man struck out with the bases loaded, I thought, "It was 4:20 P.M., and I was getting very hungry.

Penn's 夕暮れ was 3:20."

In the inning to make it a 6-4 ballgame. Then the umpire called a 夕暮れ.

It didn't sound very pro-Penn, but I immediately sought the Temple 夕暮れ. I was getting very hungry.
