And nobody asked me what were wrong. Me — well, I just didn’t know.

I recall meeting my professor in his office after one of our classes because only 75 minutes were in session and I was sure I had missed something in the course. When he mentioned that the course was over, I expressed my surprise and asked if he had noticed that many of the students who had previously been interested in the subject had missed classes after the mid-term exam. I was told that it was due to the workload, but I couldn’t help but think that it was due to the quality of the lectures.

But Lowe and his two fighters for the American University were quick to point out that they had a large scale operation and that their students had access to excellent resources.

Larrey agreed, sort of.

But Lowe had a hard time accounting for the fact that the American University was not as popular as the Yale. Perhaps it was the difference between Yale and the University of Pennsylvania.

If only plenums could be more fun. All the marches had good speakers and good songs, but our poor old plenums are just dry.

Taliesin those days are having a lot of trouble with their lives, and plenums don’t do them much good. The bottom line is that we still need to improve the quality of our plenums.

Friday, May 12, 1970

In the past four years at Penn, I have seen four different universities come up and go. The University of Pennsylvania and Women’s Student Government, for example, had a short life. The University of Pennsylvania and Student Government (UPSG) were formed.

I have now met many of the presidents of American universities. They have all been impressive, and I am sure that Penn is no exception.

The President of Penn, Dr. James B. Harnagel, has been an excellent leader for Penn. He has helped guide Penn through many difficult times, and I believe that he will continue to do so.

The University of Pennsylvania has always been a strong and respected institution, and I am sure that it will continue to be so in the future.

The University of Pennsylvania will always be a leader in the world of education. It has produced many great leaders, and I am sure that it will continue to do so in the future.

Letter to the Editor

A Right to Vote No

Sir: I have just spent a solid half hour perusing the weekly prospective candidates for the University of Pennsylvania student government. To tell you the truth, I was somewhat surprised at what I saw: that those precious few little college students that bother to come to the plenums can’t even vote.

You can argue anywhere to prove why this is not right, but the student government at the University of Pennsylvania is not a democratic body.

We might say that our government is marred by a system of elections which fail to reflect the will of the people.

If I were to be given the right to vote in the plenum, I think that my vote would be based on the following:

1. The most important issue for me is the right to vote in the plenum.

2. The second most important issue for me is the right to vote in the plenum.

3. The third most important issue for me is the right to vote in the plenum.

I believe that the people of the University of Pennsylvania should have the right to vote in the plenum so that their voices can be heard.

The University of Pennsylvania is the best university in the world, and I believe that it deserves to have a voice in its own government.

I hope that the University of Pennsylvania student government will consider this issue in the future.

The University of Pennsylvania should have a democratic government so that all students can participate in the decision-making process.

problems" and the "transitory nature of the students' connection with the University," the administration stated in its report submitted to the Council on June 3. The council, which is composed of the students and the University representatives, has not yet determined if it will recommend the proposal to the students for a vote.

In his report, the chairman agreed with Kravis and said that the proposal, "as an administration proposal, has not yet been considered for a vote."

In defense of himself, Kravis said that he will "yield to no student in the decision process."

Barry Mike, a College sophomore, said that the University had not actively attempted to obtain a copy of the University's budget for his information. "I don't know what's going on, but I'm not interested in having to be told," he said.

The vote on administrative set- up was tabled, and the administration was encouraged to "evaluate the process used by the University and to consider the implications of the proposal." The vote is to be reconsidered at the next regular meeting of the council.

The result of the vote was not unanimous. Some members of the council felt that the proposal was too complex and that it should be simplified. Others felt that it was a good proposal and that it should be implemented. The council agreed to consider the proposal further and to report back to the students and the administration on its findings.

Council

The next meeting of the council is scheduled for the first Monday in October. The council will then be able to consider the proposal in more detail and to make a decision on whether or not to implement it.

The council is composed of nine members: six students, two faculty members, and one administrator. The students are elected by the student body, while the faculty members are appointed by the president of the University. The administrator is appointed by the Board of Trustees.

The council meets on a regular basis, usually once a month. The meetings are open to the public, and anyone can attend. The council welcomes comments and suggestions from the public, and it encourages anyone who wishes to make a contribution to the discussion to do so.

The council's decision on the proposal will be final, and it is expected to be announced shortly.

Women's Sports: Winning In Winter

By JOHN CONLEY

The peculiar winter season means that the winter sports teams are the only ones competing in the winter. Although many of the teams may have had a difficult time finding a schedule, they are all trying to make the most of the season.

The men's basketball team, under the guidance of Coach Tom Davis, has had a difficult time finding games. However, they are hoping to have a better schedule in the future.

The women's swimming team, under the leadership of Coach Maharashtra, has been successful in their meets. They have won several meets and have had some tough losses.

The winter season is always a difficult time for the teams, but with hard work and dedication, they are able to make the most of the season.
