Final Ballot Chosen For Const. Election

By ANITA SAMA

In their fourth meeting of the day, the Steering Committee of the Provost, consisting of seven undergraduates who have previously agreed among themselves to serve, has selected their final candidates.

The meeting, which lasted for two and a half hours, was held in the Office of the Provost. Provost Goddard welcomed the group and introduced them to the campus, saying that he was pleased to see such a large turnout. He then proceeded to discuss the various issues that were brought up during the previous meetings, and expressed his hope that the group would be able to come to a decision on the final candidates soon.

The group then went on to discuss the various proposals that had been presented to them, and after much discussion, they came to a consensus on the final candidates.

The group then adjourned, and the Provost expressed his appreciation for the work that the group had done so far.

Undergrads Demand a Voice

Approximately 100 undergraduates met in the Office of the Provost yesterday afternoon to present a list of proposals for the upcoming constitutional changes for the School's personnel. The group was led by the Rev. Jack Russell, the vice-president of the student government.

The group met with the president of the student government and the dean of the School of Education, fielding students' questions on such crucial groups as the education school's personnel committees, and pointing out that the proposed changes did not address the issue of rigid constitutional in- formation open.

The dean further prepared to take on the three proposals in an emotion- charged environment. The dean had said that any student government plans would have to be carried out by the student government, while dismissing the possibility that no translations had existed on its part.

David Gross, the dean of the School of Education, fielded students' questions in an environment that was tense and acrimonious over the School's curriculum.

Gross later presented the list of proposals to the students. The students then followed Corson back to his office to discuss the matter further.

I think it is the most equitable proposal submitted by Tive, and the Plan, which received the three highest ratings by the students, should be conducted by paper ballot.

NORMAN MAILER, in Armies of the Night, calls Jerry Rubin "the most militant, unpredictable, creative — therefore dangerous — hippie-oriented leader available on the New Left."

In DO IT!, Jerry Rubin has written the most important political statement made by a white revolutionary in America today. It is The Communist Manifesto of our era, and as a handbook on how white revolutionary minorities must be compared to Che Guevara's Guerrilla Warfare.

DO IT! is a Declaration of War between the generations — calling on the younger generation to raise a new society upon the ashes of the old.

DO IT! is a prose poem singing the inside saga of a revolution: it is a frenzied emotional symphony for a new society, a songbook for seven-year-olds, a tribute to insularity.

Elbridge Cleaver has written an introduction to it and Quentin Fiore has designed the book with more than 100 pictures, cartoons and mind-boards.

Julie Linden, a member of the student education committee, said a minority of students argued that the best solution was to ask students to pay the bill, a suggestion that was discussed concerning the decision not presented to the students.

Another member of the negotiating committee, Bob Hoyt, characterized Tiberius, who merely commented that "everything is tentative" as an individual, saying he felt he had the responsibility to make sure the student government would not be used to answer "the questions of any person."

There is no question that the Penn track team had an undefeated dual meet season this year, and that the Penn track team had an undefeated dual season outdoors.

The better has a chance to happen when the season ends. The better will either offer the season of its running over and over, or at least provide a Penn track team that will be remembered.

Quakers Open EIBL Competition

Penn's varsity baseballers make their season debut in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League today when they meet Brown in a 3:30 P.M. contest at the Pennsylvania Cup. The Quakers will also host Yale tomorrow in an important season opener.

The meeting of the Quakers and the Bulldogs will be a test of the strengths of both teams. It is expected to be a close game, with the outcome depending on the performance of the pitchers.

When Cornell takes on the tennis court, it's not always a simple task. Sometimes it's more like a staring match.

The match is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, with the winner gaining a valuable point in the EITA standings.

Stickmen Face Powerful Harvard

By JOHNNY LOW

The 1-2-3 running of Stew London was probably a confidence builder for the Penn track team, but it may not be enough to carry the team through tomorrow's meet.

London will face some tough opponents in the form of Harvard, who have been consistently strong in track and field.

The meet will be an important one for both teams, as it will help determine the outcome of the Ivy League championship.

On attack the Crimson will start with John Lee, an all-American selection and one of the league's top distance runners.

Both teams have strong lineups in the sprints, with Harvard having a number of runners who have the potential to go sub-10 seconds in the 100.

On defense the Quakers will rely on the strength of their distance runners, led by Don Murray and Dave Kleiner.

The meet will be a test of both teams' ability to handle the pressure of a big meet.

The Quakers will need to keep their composure and focus on their own performances, while the Crimson will be looking to capitalize on any lapses in concentration.

No Major Changes: A.D.'s Economize With Cost Cuts

By MARVIN DASH

The word was "economize" at the Athletics Department meeting yesterday, but the cost-cutting measures would appear to be more of a precaution than anything else.

It's just that Penn Athletics is in a bit of a financial bind right now, and it's necessary to take a critical look at the league's overall budget.

The meet is expected to be highly competitive, with both teams having strong entries in the sprints, hurdles, and middle distances.
