CAMPUS BICYCLES may soon be chained to rows of bike racks if students are able to reach a $4,300 appropriation approved by the Budget Committee to finance the project.

Bicycle Rack Funds May Be Forthcoming

By MARK MCINTYRE

The University indulged in a rare luxury Tuesday by appropriating $4,300 to install bicycle racks on campus. The Budget Committee allocated the funds after Assistant Provost John Foote, who heads the budget committee, and members of the University community met to discuss the issue.

Many students have been clamoring for bike racks on campus, a request that was also brought to the attention of the Budget Committee.

Col. Donald C. Shults spoke to the library conference and was scheduled to speak at the conclusion of the conference next week. Shults warned that the campus guards should be more alert to their surroundings and that they should be more professional in their approach.

Shults also noted that the campus guards should be aware of the dangers of carrying guns and that they should be trained in the use of firearms.

The campus guards have been criticized in the past for not being professional in their work and for not being adequately trained in the use of firearms.

Report Recomends U. Insurance Pool

By STUART STEIN

Insurance representatives of all the larger universities in the country met last week at Purdue University to discuss a comprehensive report analyzing the overall university insurance crisis.

The report, which was based on a survey of 46 universities, including the University, attempted to examine problems facing university insurance rates and to offer solutions. The report, prepared by the University's insurance manager, Rodney Piter, claimed that the University's insurance rates were too high and that the University should consider forming a large pool of universities to purchase insurance.

Piter pointed out that many universities do not buy insurance with a "practical deductible" and that the University could benefit from joining a larger pool of universities who purchase insurance together.

Officer addressed a meeting of the Graduate Students' Ad Hoc Committee that the campus guards should be more alert to their surroundings and that they should be more professional in their approach.

Piter also noted that the campus guards should be aware of the dangers of carrying guns and that they should be trained in the use of firearms.

WFC Comm. Set Up To Hear Bias Problems

The Ad Hoc Committee on the Problem of Racial and Religious Bias at the University, formed by the Women's Faculty Club (MFU), met Tuesday to discuss establishing an effective means of redress for women faculty members who feel that they have been discriminated against because of their race or religion.

Committee chairman Dr. Phoebe Lowenthal said that "women do not know where to turn when they feel that they are discriminated against."

Lowenthal also noted that the committee had been meeting to discuss the issue of bias discrimination.

"I think we are trying to find a way to make the campus a safer place for everyone," Lowenthal said.

The report recommended the addition of a "Confidential Phone Pool" which would sound certain classifications of participating institutions.

The pool which could be operated by July 1, 1971, would reduce claims by 10 to 50 per cent and was derived from premiums charged by participating universities.

Dean招投标 added that the report pointed out that universities faced by this prevention program. He cited one such a "key to maintaining reasonable premiums" as well as living loans.

"I don't like the idea of a recess, quite honestly. I think people are into it pretty much because they want to release a lot of people into a political campaign who might not be that interested."
The commission has asked that President Meyerson reconfirm the commitments of the College-Hall sit-in and they have also asked his approval of a new proposal to gain the needed monies for community redevelopment. In this decision to inactivate, and believe the commission's matching fund program to be a feasible -- though debatable -- means of finance.

We hope that the President's response following this period of reevaluation will be prompt. The University has taken great strides in recent years in developing community-related programs, but the quadripartite commission with its goal of community housing is by the novel, significant feat. A decent community can not be built without decent housing. While we recognize the limitations imposed by the extraordinary financial crises, we believe the commission's efforts should receive a high priority, possibly at the expense of other, less significant community programs.

The long months of the commission's existence have been frustrating ones. Much has been said, little has been done. Hopefully, the commission will soon be able to return to its difficult and important task with new found unity and commitment, with the months of discord, confusion, and failure left behind.

Ali: The Man Comes Back

It was something special in Atlanta last night -- something special for LeRoy, something special for Ali, but most of all something special for the Atlanta fans. The man who was on the verge of quitting his first fight with Larry Holmes the next day joined forces with the boxing legend and two nights later, the man who was on the verge of losing his career faced off against the man who was on the verge of losing his career. Nothing more profound than that.

More than a few of us in attendance fell in love with the man who was on the verge of losing his career. It was a love story that was destined to end in tragedy, but in the end, it was a love story that was destined to end with a happy ending. Ali was not the same man he was when he faced Holmes. He was a different man, but a better man.

Ali's story was a tale of redemption. He had been down, but he had never been out. He had been defeated, but he had never been beaten. He had been knocked down, but he had never been stopped. Ali was a fighter, and he was a winner.

And so it was that Ali stepped into the ring against the man who was on the verge of losing his career. Ali was not the same man he was when he faced Holmes. He was a different man, but a better man.

The commission's report is a testament to the power of the human spirit. It is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope. It is a reminder that even in the most difficult of circumstances, there is always a way forward.

Bruce Berger: Trials Of A 'Living Legend'

By Jeff Rothbard

Everybody has their favorite Bruce Berger story. This time it was the Berger transfer that torpedoed a dormant campaign and caused Coach Bruce Berger to get fired.

There was the week he bristled 11 windows trying to keep a hard ball out of the city. And the time he used a hot iron to remove a banana from his car.

This time it was the rumor that he had transferred to Alabama State and in the process run for the U.S. Senate.

"It's on the Internet," said Berger. "It's my life." Berger assured everyone that he was planning to head to Pensacola next week to work out with the University of Florida's passing duo of John Reaves and Carlos Alvarez down south. "I gave up a construction job to get in top shape," he said.

Berger was a two-time All-State and All-Southern football player from Miami, Fla., concerned his exploits on the gridiron. Berger's first two years at Coral Gables High, one of the few schools in the country that offers spring swimming are being conducted Saturday mornings at 8:30 a.m. for now.

"I was probably the smallest player in the Big East last year," said Berger. "I'm not too tall, but I'm pretty quick. In the B-10, I had a lot of dose cases. That's why I'm going to be a lot better." Berger said. Any thoughts of transferring also disappeared: "I didn't want to hurt anybody's feelings," he said.

"My coaches and I were really excited," said Berger. "We're going to get a lot of energy out of him this year." Berger said.

"I had the opportunity to play with some of the best players in the state," said Berger. "I'm going to be a lot better than I was last year." Berger said. "I think I'm going to be a lot better than last year." Berger said.

"We've got a lot of spirit on the squad," said Berger. "We're going to get a lot of energy out of him this year."

"I'm the kind of guy who doesn't want to be anything, but rather too mentally hard," said Berger. "I'm going to be a lot better this year." Berger said.
