Faculty Senate Considers Aid Study at Eleventh-Hour Session

By MAURICE ORSFIELD

Meeting only one day before the end of the semester, the committee decided to consider the report of the Financial Policy Study Committee. The Faculty Senate agreed Thursday to authorize that report's recommendations in the field of aid to other institutions, but to reassert that the possible reductions in faculty and staff outlined therein not be implemented.

The committee, chaired by Dr. Robert Challin, chairman of the department of statistics, was charged with the formulation of a report recommending where cuts in the University's scholarship budget could best be made. The group made its recommendations, which were authorized by the Senate, Wednesday.

Deputy- Attorney General Kleindienst Will Speak on Preventative Detention

By JULIA LANDSMAN

The Deputy Attorney General of the United States, Richard G. Kleindienst, will speak at 1:30 p.m. on Friday, November 13, in Sanders Theatre on "Preventative Detention." The event is sponsored by the Review Board and the Gamma Tau chapter of the Phi Delta Kappa fraternity.

Kleindienst will discuss the problems and remedies concerning preventive detention, a legal practice that has attracted much attention in the past year. Preventive detention involves the detention of a person accused of a crime even before the trial begins, in order to prevent the commission of a future crime.

Although the practice is not without its supporters, many legal scholars and human rights advocates view it as a violation of fundamental liberties. Preventive detention has been criticized for potentially denying an accused individual the right to a fair trial and for the potential risk of false accusations.

Kleindienst’s talk is part of the Review Board’s ongoing efforts to raise awareness about legal and ethical issues in the criminal justice system. The Review Board is an advisory body to the university’s administration, responsible for hearing cases of student misconduct.

The event is free and open to the public, and it promises to be an engaging discussion on a pressing legal issue. Attendees are encouraged to arrive early to secure seating and to prepare their questions for the guest speaker.

Medical Relevance

A panel discussion on the effects of environmental factors on health delivery was held as part of the Dental Medicine curriculum at the University of Pennsylvania. The panelists, all dentists and medical professionals, concentrated on the relationship of health-care delivery systems to the health of the patient. The panelists discussed the relationship between the health-care delivery system and the patient's ability to relate to his health-care provider. The panelists also discussed the role of the health-care delivery system in the treatment of alcoholism and drug addiction.

The discussion was led by two dentists and one physician. The discussion was well received, and the students and faculty were very much impressed with the panelists' presentations. The panelists were able to bring to light some important issues that need to be addressed in order to improve the health-care delivery system.

In conclusion, the panelists emphasized the importance of addressing the environmental factors that affect health delivery. They stressed the need for continued research and education in this area to improve the health-care delivery system and the patient's ability to relate to his health-care provider.

Financial Crisis at the Ivies

Harvard's faculty of arts and sciences has been operating on a deficit for three years.

Harvard may soon follow the lead of Brown University, which has begun to accept scholarship-applicant students without offering class financial aid. Furthermore, there may be a reduction in the number of endowed positions and teaching fellowships in Cambridge. However, Harvard's problems are not alone, comparable in the League.

Stony Delhi at Brown

The problems of Brown University, which has a $1 million loss this year, are fairly typical of other schools. In addition to reduced enrollments, such as a new black studies program, the administration is in a minority group that will be neglected or funds. And they have raised prices of secretarial and food costs in the University-run cafeterias.

Princeton—Million Deficit

Although Princeton University is running a $4.5 million deficit this year, the tide may be turning for the school. At a school where monetary difficulties are not a matter of great concern there, the administration is confident of driving down the deficit after 1973 through annual giving campaigns and cutbacks across all departments. Jeff Collier, a reporter for the Daily Princetonian said Thursday.

Collier noted that graduate students may lose government fellowships and be faced with increased tuitions. However, relatively small government contracts and shares that have lost their last year. In addition, the projected figure for 1973 is $500,000 below the projected figure for 1972 and 1973.

NSF to Fund Student Work on Environmental and Social Problems

By THOMAS PAPSON

The National Science Foundation has departed from past traditions to sponsor a new competitive program which will help undergraduate research projects dealing with biological or social environmental problems. The Student-Originated Studies Program (SOS), will support projects designed and managed by students. Student groups, representing 40 colleges and universities, may receive grants totaling $115,000, while current look is to put the program back on firm financial footing.

Freshman Gridders
Tangle with Lions
In Gotham Today

The Quaker fresher football team (2-0) will try to avoid a Friday the 13th jinx when it travels to New York City today to face the Columbia freshman (4-0) at 2 P.M. in the season finale for both squads.

The Lions are not as quite as quaffable as the Quakers, although they did fall to their Penn, 13-7, Nov. 1, in their last outing.

The Columbia team this season has been led by signal-caller Tom Pinto, who ripped through the largely soft-caffeine defense of the Quakers for 496 yards in his sophomore performance.

Columbia always seems to come up with another good quarterback, and this year the Morgue Highbaals gridders have gone Erickson, who is reported to have passed the test of time and already has as far yard than he had in his own first season. Columbia may not be in the Alf Jackson could, but he isn't on the same level. That was only in the first half.

The Wash and Wig Club might be asking having women in its ranks, but the Prodigies welcome the men this year with open arms. Among this year's five walks are three female impersonators of the variety extolling them performing a comedy act called "Sweetie Buddha," tonight at 8:30 P.M., and Sunday afternoon at 3:30 P.M. at Globel Pool.

Tote bags, a guest from Drexel will headline the 7th annual splendiferous, organized version of the Columbia sideline at the annual finale, and the Columbia coaches.

Booters’ Night Life Includes Long-haired Kanter

Confident 150’s Will Dump Blue in Finale

By JOE LINTON

During the soccer season at Harvard, a few weeks ago a sportswriter from the Crimson asked, “What do you mean by writing that the Harvard team is better?”

Some members of the Harvard team were performing on the field outside the stadium when the question was asked. The senior maybe being another member of the team.

Well, this year’s Harvard’s have looked even better on the field. They’ve looked the same on the field. The Harvard team is better than the one the year before.

But the Harvard team’s lack of height has made the player’s football. About the worst grief kanter has caused to Harvard is that conservative op-
