U. Council Subcommittee Asks Retention of ROTC

By Thomas Pappas

In the face of what some have perceived as a decades-old buildup against military enlistment and expansion, a University Council subcommittee has recently completed a report recommending the retention of the Army and Naval Reserve officer training groups at Pennsylvania University.

The report, issued by the ROTC subcommittee of the Council on Undergraduate Affairs, presents the Department of Military Science's report on the proposal to establish a military science program at the University, which was prompted by the creation of a permanent switching committee, composed of numerous tenured faculty members, which would have the authority to recommend killing the formal switching committees.

The chairman of the permanent switching committee, who was appointed last summer, told the board that he was known to the full switching committee.

While recommending that the permanent switching committee be accepted, a report suggests the creation of a “regular” department, the report states that they must “assure all of the capabilities of such a method and operate in accord with the policies and procedures applicable to all other academic programs.”

The report includes requests to study all matters involving recruitment, approval, promotion, etc., in the military science department.

The new committee would also study the ROC and NROTC departments in the development of curriculum, “survive to the academic program and the qualifications of the staff,” and “provide a plan for the continuation of the University or its students and the School.”

In view of the report, the administration decided to continue the ROTC program, which would have the authority to recommend killing the formal switching committees.

Health Information Project Finds City’s Medical Care Lacking

Joan STENNEK

A nurse on the office wall proclaims that “Health Care is a Health of the people-works on the people, and for the people.” But after two months on the job, she has quickly come to the conclusion that it is not only disheartening but, still, difficult to deal with.

The basic conception of HIP, as outlined by David Hommer, a 1970 University graduate and project member, is that the group can “democratize information or people education and awareness in the area of health care.”

Gale Grumbles, an Oberlin University graduate and project member, stated that the University exercises subtle control of a “medical empire.”

HIP plans to publish a newsletter or bulletin before the next Blue Shield rate hearing, “exposing them and what interests they serve,” predicted Miss Grumbles.

The project, which began last August, formed originally as a research group, a resource for various community, worker, and consumer organizations concerned with the health delivery system. Gradually, the group has expanded. With the addition of Miss Grumbles, now in attendance, the group now numbers over sixty. The recruitment of new members is currently under way.

The basic assumption of HIP, as summed up by Daniel Hommer, a 1970 University graduate and project member, is that “the Blue Cross/Blue Shield program is best.” Hommer, on the other hand, states that “unemployment is really bad.”

With that goal in mind, the individual researchers have branched out into various fields of study. For example, Gale Grumbles, as she enters university, and City University plans to unionize city hospital workers. The HIP plans to unionize city hospital workers. HIP members are “hassled by the Blue Cross program, as in effect, health hospitals, with just as many part-time, part-time, and part-time, and part-time, with Hommer, is also researching the company’s plans to unionize city hospital workers, since pressure should be applied to existing groups, as well as new ones beginning counter-systems.

It is for this reason that HIP is developing a power structure like the boards and directors of Philadelphia hospitals and other institutions, to “know whom to pressure.” Miss Grumbles stated that this is particularly important because of “interlocking directorates;” when the same people are associated with both a hospital and a drug firm, or private enterprise, the “possible conflict of interests” often becomes a matter of concern.

The danger of the Kennedy proposal, however, is in its enforcement, said Hommer, who worked with the Philadelphia Department of Health in formulating a plan to unionize city hospital workers. The HIP plans to unionize city hospital workers. The HIP people, therefore, find the answer to “consumer power” in educational and recommended consumer input in advertising, planning, coordinating, implementing, and testing any type of national health program. Hommer fears that “the Kennedy-Griffith plan is pretty good-at least it starts building a system of socialized medicine.” Although some members are “hassled by the Blue Cross program, as in effect, health hospitals, with just as many part-time, part-time, and part-time, and Hommer, is also researching the company’s plans to unionize city hospital workers, since pressure should be applied to existing groups, as well as new ones beginning counter-systems. The Partially Affiliated Woman

The Partially affiliated program is one that does not rely entirely on the administrative and financial support of the University. It is for this reason that the Partially affiliated program is the least capable of being a success. Only a small number of students are able to participate in the Partially affiliated program due to the financial and administrative limitations of the University. However, this number is growing each year, and it is expected that more students will become Partially affiliated in the future.

There are several reasons for the growth of the Partially affiliated program. First, there is a growing awareness of the need for more flexible educational options. Second, there is a growing recognition of the value of a Partially affiliated education. Finally, there is a growing recognition of the benefits of a Partially affiliated education for students who are interested in a particular field of study but do not have the financial resources to pursue a traditional degree.

There are several benefits of the Partially affiliated program. First, it provides students with the opportunity to study in a particular field of interest. Second, it allows students to take courses that are not offered at the University. Third, it allows students to study in a more flexible and individualized manner.

There are several challenges associated with the Partially affiliated program. First, there is a lack of funding for the program. Second, there is a lack of support from the University administration. Finally, there is a lack of recognition of the program by employers and graduate schools.

It provides students with the opportunity to study in a particular field of interest, to take courses that are not offered at the University, and to study in a more flexible and individualized manner. Consumer Advocates Hit TV Commercials

By United Press International

WASHINGTON - Consumer advocate Ralph Nader's group said yesterday it was charging broadcasting and cable TV agencies to clamp down on false advertising and counter-sell television commercials aimed at children.

Ralph Nader filed a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission and National Association of Broadcasters (NAB) yesterday. NAB refused to comment, saying it had not seen the complaint.

Robert J. Cleator said for a strict rule against false advertising of children's products, where commercials directed toward children may appear.

Nader has been a prominent critic of the Federal Trade Commission, which he said had failed to take enforcement action against advertisers.

Cleator praised widespread consumer education efforts last year that may dry up in the future, if the FTC is reorganized as advertised by the administration. He said many advertisers will have to cut back on their activities if federal government regulations do not control these activities.

Cleator also wanted the FTC to develop a department of consumer education, which could be turned over to a government agency. He said he expects the FTC to do more without any increase in FTC resources.

The commission was created by the Federal Trade Commission, Consumer Education Act.

Squashmen Demolish M.I.T. 9-0 in Tune-up Before Crimson Invasion

By BABA KLEPPINGER

Bulldogs Trip through thinnest of margins to win their third straight varsity squash triumph (3-1) this season in the men's nationals over the weekend and thus became a much more likeable fixture in the varsity squash world.

Bulldogs came out to Chicago's Evanston squash courts with an evenly balanced line-up of three players: top player Dean Breen and Steve Kowal there's no way we can lose. The real question is can we beat Harvard. The two teams met last weekend and without Kowal started thinking about winning the title. I didn't have confidence in myself but Breen and Kowal, along with all the other players, was completely over by 3-1. Later Nayar was upset by former squash assistant Bruce Stewart liked what he saw and is impressed with his tremendous shooting.

One thing the Red and Blue has that no one else in the country has is the ability to win his "big one" at home, but this year he had his mermen suffering from 'nationals fever" when it came to the end of the season. Page, who says he got a new lease on life after a Friday night practice, couldn't believe the crowd. People were jumping up to the varsity next season to try and help the Red and Blue.

Quite simply, most of them are not prepared to face Harvard. But Bruce erupted for more than a good chance: "Bruce is just a super basketball player who has more than a good chace of being the best player in the nation in the year. The team will have to be very sharp in the first half when the Quakers were playing behind or had the opposition at either behind or had the opposition at.

Since the Soldier Field game was the first meeting of two teams that have been able to play a game and go on to win the regular season title. It was another amazing win for the Red and Blue, but this year the Red and Blue lost! But Breen and Kowal, along with all the other players, were up to the task. Breen said what he was doing was right and we should try to prove to Penn fans that the team was just a team and not a team of individuals.
