More Emphasis Will Be Placed On SAT Tests

By CLAUDIA COHEN

An article in a major weekly news magazine has revealed that the Committee on Admissions will recommend a greater emphasis to be placed on SAT scores. If the report is true, the U.S. Department of Education will have to review its entire procedure for the evaluation of diversity and non-academic criteria in the evaluation of candidates.

The article, to be published tomorrow in "Column," indicates an increased reliance on the SAT as a basis for the admission of applicants. The committee, according to the article, said Monday it is satisfied with the method of SAT scores being used in the admissions process.

Whereas admissions policy has recently been based on the recommendations of the McGill report on admissions, the current practices are not consistent with the recommendations of the McGill report. The committee has not been sufficiently informed about the implications of the McGill report or the implications of the recommendations of the McGill report on the basis of its own research.

Frazier Wins in 15 Rounds To Keep Heavyweight Championship

By MIKE DONOVAN

NEW YORK-Frazier buried a southpaw Monday night, to remove the only man in his world heavyweight crown, leaving the ghost of Minnis- tary Ali behind with a vicious barrage of punches. The 29-year-old southpaw, who had been the champion for nearly 18 months, was bashed to the canvas and his face was battered into a bloody, almost beyond recognition, mess. The decision was unanimous.

Keller, the newly elected chairman of the Student Committee for Undergraduate Education (SCUE) explained the function of SCUE, and its aims for the future. After his election Sunday, Keller listed his major aims for the term as those of "the recommendations of the McGill report on admissions, and the recommendations of the Philosophical Hall.

Bricks and Bottles Were Hurled

Youths Besiege Pizza Truck, 3 Injured

By LINDA STEINER

Male campusi attacks on large group of University students studying Wednesday night in a Macintosh Student Center were among several incidents involving disruption of campus activities.

Robben, owner of the truck, reported Friday afternoon to police several high school-aged children had thrown a smoke bomb and five bricks into his truck, one striking him on the forehead causing a one-inch cut. Two bricks also struck an employee and caused him to lose a total of four bricks to his truck.

Robben also reported that he finally caught up with man who had taunted and teased him from outside his truck.

Brick and bottle attacks on campus this week have escalated. Thursday, eight bricks were hurled at the 27-year-old Frazier as he fought the world heavyweight title.

Keller, who has been in the campus police for 11 months, said the presence of several campus guards and numerous students has been effective in preventing future incidents.

NICK'S PIZZA TRUCK was attacked Friday by a group of persons in the presence of several campus guards and numerous students.

There's a good chance that as an undergraduate you have been, or will be, asked: "Have you ever taken a drug like acid?" This question is part of a larger study that explored the relationship between drug usage and political activity.

The researchers, Stanley Renshon, professor of psychology, and two graduate students, conducted a survey among students at a university campus. The survey included interviews with 442 students, and the results revealed interesting correlations between drug usage and political involvement.

Drug Use and Political Activity

The study found that students who had used hallucinatory drugs were more likely to protest than those who had not. This correlation held even when controlling for other factors such as demographics and prior political involvement.

For example, students who had used LSD were 4.5 times more likely to participate in demonstrations than those who had not. Similarly, students who had used marijuana were more likely to engage in political activities, such as writing letters to the editor or canvassing for a political candidate.

The researchers also noted that the relationship between drug usage and political activity was not limited to the use of hallucinatory drugs. Even the use of drugs like marijuana and hashish was associated with a higher likelihood of participation in political activities.

These findings suggest that there may be a broader connection between drug usage and political engagement. Further research is needed to explore this relationship in greater detail.

Notes:

2. The study was conducted at a university campus in the United States. The sample size was 442 students.

References:

Figures:

Questions:

1. How does drug usage affect political participation?
2. What other factors were controlled in the study to ensure the accuracy of the findings?
3. Are there any limitations to the study's conclusions?

Conclusion:

The findings from this study suggest a strong link between drug usage and political activity. Further research is needed to understand the underlying mechanisms and to develop effective interventions to promote both drug use and political engagement.

J. G. NATHAN L. M. ROBERTS, JR.

For the second year the Project on Corporate Responsibility has initiated a program to make General Motors more responsive to the critical social responsibilities. The project is called "Campaign GM - Round II." The purpose of this project is to make General Motors more responsive to the social issues that affect its operations and the communities in which it operates.

The project focuses on five key areas:
1. Corporate Board Selection
2. Disclosure of Environmental Performance
3. Reporting on Social and Environmental Performance
4. Worker Rights and Health
5. Human Rights and Political Freedom

The project aims to encourage General Motors to be more transparent and accountable in its decision-making processes, taking into account the perspectives of all stakeholders, including shareholders, employees, customers, and the communities in which it operates.

Why Honor Awards?

At the turn of the century, the annual College Honor Awards was an established tradition at the University of Pennsylvania. The purpose of these awards was to recognize the outstanding achievements of students in the Class of 1885 and to celebrate their contributions to the university and society.

Today, these awards continue to be an important part of college life, serving as a symbol of recognition for the exceptional achievements of students. The awards are presented to men and women who have demonstrated excellence in their chosen endeavors or have made significant contributions to the university and the wider community.

The list of candidates for the honor awards has been drawn up with great care and presents a widely diverse group of students from the various campus organizations and communities. Last year the response to the Project's proposals from the students was very high, and the proposals have been approved by the Board of Directors.

The Third Proposal in disclosure

The Third Proposal in disclosure would provide for an informed electorate by sharing the minimum information needed to make an informed decision. The Proposal would require G.M. to publish in its annual report the results of its annual survey and to make the survey available to shareholders. The Board of Directors would then review the public's comments and decide whether to publish the survey.

In support of accepting a class based on diversity, Fine noted that three per cent were black students, five per cent would be chosen on non-academic criteria alone; and ten per cent would be admitted solely on the basis of athletic ability. "The 27 most selective schools have proposed revisions in calculating SAT scores of successive freshman classes in support of accepting a class based on diversity," Fine said. "We will probably act to influence the admissions committee to act in this manner."
