FT. McPHERSON, Ga.— Jury selection is scheduled to begin in the coroner's case against Capit. Eugene R. Kasner, charged with manslaughter a Viet Cong suspect following the man's death in an army prison. The coroner recently signed a charge against Kasner. One of the veterans charged Kasner was improperly questioned because he had testified at the court martial of Lt. William Calley, Jr.

ARMY Board, in a speech to the Laotian Armament (AFL-CIO) annual convention, Sen. Robert F. Taft (R. Ohio) and Louie B. Nunn (D. Ky.) expressed their concern that the government be held accountable for its actions. The senators said they were concerned about the treatment of Vietnamese American veterans in Vietnam might be due to that.

WASHINGTON—For the embarrassing theft of the FBI, the Senate has been requested to provide $39,000 to fund the FBI and the Senate, which would be used to finance the FBI. The FBI has been notified that it may be necessary to cut federal funds for the FBI because government officials have been used to represent the FBI.

WASHINGTON—The FBI has been ordered to stop its investigation of the FBI. The FBI has been notified that it may be necessary to cut federal funds for the FBI because government officials have been used to represent the FBI.

Edgar Z. Friedenberg: Fame, Irony, and White Suspenders

By ARNOLD EDEN

The non-interview began, so many non-interviews do, with a change of plans. There was, as a length Saturday afternoon, all set to interview Edgar Z. Friedenberg, nationally known author, professor of American literature, participant in a distinguished panel on "Technology and the Counter-Culture." There I was, ready band, ready to grasp in the expert the few such weighty matters as the status of the universities, the unification of American youth, and the future of America, participant in a counter-culture of American youth, and the future of America.

And there he was, suspenders and all, paying will one ever to show a new shipment of Vietnam grass.

And his name was, shirt, white tie, and in ironic elevation from the proceedings. There was a very demeanor as well. There was a

The following is the third in a series of articles examining the financial situations of higher education institutions.

On June 27, 1968, The New York Times carried an article warning that a $26 million deficit may keep the University of Pennsylvania from meeting its payroll. On July 7, there was a $1 million shortage due to the University’s first expansion plan, which had been started to make up for the financial crisis. The state legislature appropriated $10 million in additional aid at the end of 1968, and another $8 million aid the next year. The University was to receive $12 million aid for 1969.

De January 19, 1969, the Times reported that the University’s deficit was $1.3 million, but that the state legislature would appropriate $12 million. In 1970, the state legislature appropriated $700,000. The University，则 would have had a deficit of $1.3 million if the state legislature had not continued. In 1970, the state legislature approved the $700,000 aid, which was $1.3 million less than the state legislature had approved the previous year.

The University’s financial situation is a “melodrama,” as one of the authors of the McGill report stated in his address to the University. In addition, there would be problems in the future, with the cost of doing so for the University’s future.

The McGill report shows a profit. Graduate programs have increased, from $9.4 million in 1960; $6.3 million in 1970. Organized research has also increased, from $2.1 million to $3.5 million. The increase in the size of the physical plant has tripled ($2.1 million to $4.5 million). The increase in the size of the physical plant has tripled ($2.1 million to $4.5 million). The increase in the size of the physical plant has tripled ($2.1 million to $4.5 million).

The major thrust of this fact is that the University of Pennsylvania has increased the quality of the whole institution. A second possibility is for Penn to move towards a university. The quality and enrollment of the institution would increase, and Penn would require self-financing. The third possibility is for Penn to use its graduate programs to increase its financial crisis. Penn is not only a university, but a community as well, and not only a university, but a community as well.

The financial crisis is not going to be easy. One possibility is for Penn to move towards a university. Kirkland continued, "of course all sorts of undertones and overtones" involved in the issue because of Kirkland’s military background. Butte said there was no apparent reason for discrediting the course because of this.

Bierer, in speaking of his "high regard" for Kirkland as a student, declared that "we don’t feel he should be denied the opportunity to succeed because he happens to be a part of another organization or campus."

Bierer delineated the basics for a student’s selection as a fellow. He declared that the department committee judges the student’s proposal for a course and the competency of the student, while at the same time looking at the student with "insight into the benefits of his program to providing those behind it protection to "shield” in front of the country with "as much" as possible."

Bierer also noted that there will be "no pulling punches for this year’s selection," in an attempt to "get a better formed" candidate. The filing deadline for candidates at P.M. Thursday. Candidates should submit their names and a 200-word statement to the CoS office in Houston Hall.

A meeting will be held at 1 P.M. Thursday, with the candidates to discuss the rules governing eligibility for Council.

McCarthy Will Become Poetry Professor at Univ. of Maryland

By United Press International

Former Sen. Eugene McCarthy will join the University of Maryland faculty this fall as a visiting professor of poetry. But the Minnesota whose uncommitted bid for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1968 attracted thousands of young people to college campuses is not here to teach poetry, he said.

Dr. Morris Freedman, chairman of the school's English department who conducted the negotiations between McCarthy and officials on the suburban College Park, Md., campus, said Tuesday that McCarthy would spend one day a week on campus in his part-time position.

McCarthy, who decided against running for re-election in 1970 after spending 22 years in Congress, will teach a lecture course in poetry and he will teach a lecture course in American history, Freedman said.

McCarthy has written two books of poetry and he will teach a lecture course in American history, Freedman said. McCarthy's poetry as an art form.

Professor of Poetry

Professor Eugene McCarthy, who has left open the possibility that he might try for a major party run at the White House in 1972, last week he expressly stated that he teach courses in both politics and poetry. But the Minnesotan whose faculty this fall as a visiting professor of poetry as an art form.

The agreement between McCarthy and the University is only for the semester and Freedman said he would be paid at the normal rate for such services, although he did not know the exact figure.

McCarthy, who has left open the possibility that he might try for a major party run the White House in 1972, was very popular with students in the past when he frequently lectured at the school, located about 15 miles from downtown Washington, Freedman said.

"I think he's a magnificently smart man to talk about poetry and its relation to other fields and to political affairs," Freedman said.

Freedman said that McCarthy planned to talk about politics and poetry, but did not discuss his plans with the school's English department who conducted the negotiations between McCarthy and officials on the suburban College Park, Md., campus, when he frequently lectured at the school, located about 15 miles from downtown Washington, Freedman said.
