Report Proposes Major Commitment To Urban Affairs

The University has received federal grants for the development of urban studies and has sponsored a student community study project which is to be conducted under the direction of Dr. Neal Gross, dean of the graduate school of public administration.

The University plans to make the University a "force in the field of urban affairs," the administration added. The report of the committee, which was chaired by Dr. Gross, recommended that the University make a "major institutional commitment" in the area of urban affairs.

- Develop long and short-term institutional and policy priorities in urban affairs.
- Integrate graduate and under-graduate program.
- Consider the effectiveness of the University's relationship with its constituents and services to its constituents.
- Consider the costs and benefits that would result from cooperative ventures in urban programs with other institutions of higher learning and the private sector.
- Soften the rigor of the urban studies program to attract more students.

It was specifically recommended that the proposed institute "serve and represent the unique relationship the University has with urban environments and that the institute be affiliated with the Office of the President. In addition, an advisory council for the institute would be set up. The committee's report of evaluation". It was agreed that the main reasons why the financial support for existing programs is extremely inadequate, it stated that the University's relationship with other institutions and priorities is knowable.

During the past few weeks, the Dean of the College and two members of the philosophy department have leveled charges of a large-scale conflict—often reminiscent of slapstick comedy—against one another. Dr. Neal Gross, Dean of the School of Philosophy, and Dr. John Wolf, Professor of Philosophy and head of the Department of Philosophy, both believe that the other has failed to fulfill his responsibilities. They have devoted much of their efforts to one another's professional advancement, and their disagreements have been fierce.

Dr. Neal Gross, Dean of the School of Philosophy, and Dr. John Wolf, Professor of Philosophy and head of the Department of Philosophy, both believe that the other has failed to fulfill his responsibilities. They have devoted much of their efforts to one another's professional advancement, and their disagreements have been fierce.

Dean Gross has accused Dr. Wolf of being entitled and arrogant, and of allowing his personal ambitions to interfere with his professional duties. He argues that Dr. Wolf has failed to devote sufficient time and effort to the administration of the College, and that he has not been actively involved in the planning and execution of its programs. Dean Gross also charges that Dr. Wolf has been excessively critical of the work of other faculty members, and that he has been unwilling to accept constructive criticism.

In response, Dr. Wolf has accused Dean Gross of being rigid and inflexible, and of being more concerned with his own career than with the well-being of the College. He argues that Dean Gross has been excessively concerned with the financial aspects of the College, and that he has not been willing to consider innovative approaches to the solution of its problems. Dr. Wolf also charges that Dean Gross has been unwilling to accept the suggestions of other faculty members, and that he has been unwilling to make changes in the College's policies and procedures.

The University is currently facing a number of challenges, including increased costs and declining enrollment. Dean Gross and Dr. Wolf are both well-respected members of the faculty, and their disagreements could have a significant impact on the future of the College. It is hoped that the University will be able to resolve these issues in a manner that respects the rights of all parties involved.

The Big One: Harriers Take Shot at Heptagonal History

By BILL WITTE

Every year, the Ivy League rivals traditionally gathered about this time to discuss the upcoming Heptagonal track meet. However, when the Quakers handed out their invitations, the Big One buzzzzz.

The rumors are true. Last week, the Quakers invited the Harvard Crimson and the Brown Bears to compete in the annual meet. This year, however, the Quakers are not the only ones loaded with talent.

Harvard is coming off a strong finish at Penn and is looking to take this year's meet. Brown is also a contender, having finished second last year. The Big Five Meet is on track to be the most competitive in recent memory.

The meet will take place today as Cornell should provide stiff competition as Penn harriers bid for first.

Booster's Must Escape Hubert's Circus

By JEFF ROTHBARD

Our league's most notorious booster, Hubert Vogelsinger, may have hit upon his biggest idea yet. I've been hearing rumors of a new act with which to delight the fans.

"Happy" Hubert has never run out of acts to delight the fans. This year, he's planning to introduce the world to the 3-3-4 alignment. A weak midfield has prevented the Bulldogs from mounting a significant offense. Then when he was switched to the 4-3-3, the pickings were even slimmer.

"We'll have to get used to our new formation," Hubert stated. "But I have my say in the matter. If I say we'll win the meet, I'll have to switch to the 5-4-1." This is not to be taken lightly, for Hubert is a man with a plan.

For those of you who are unfamiliar with the 3-3-4, it's a formation that emphasizes quickness and durability. The weak midfield has been a problem for the Bulldogs, but this new formation may help them to compete with the best.

"I have heard the coaches say that the Bulldogs are going to use this formation," Hubert stated. "But I have my say in the matter. If I say we'll win the meet, I'll have to switch to the 5-4-1." This is not to be taken lightly, for Hubert is a man with a plan.

Although the Bulldogs dropped a 1-0 decision to a weak Connecticut squad on Wednesday, they have a strong record in the league.

If you're in the area, be sure to catch the action today. The meet starts at 2 p.m. in New York's Van Haven.

Quakers, Bulldogs Search For The Proper Antidote

By PHIL HIRSCH

According to all hot-dog and hot-water exchanges, the Bulldogs are currently preparing for a meeting with the Quakers. In the past, the Bulldogs have fared well against the Quakers, winning six out of the last ten meetings. However, this year's meet promises to be a tough one.

The Quakers, led by their legendary coach, Hubert Vogelsinger, have been preparing for this meet for months. They have been working on their formations and strategies, trying to figure out what the Bulldogs are planning to do.

The Bulldogs, on the other hand, have been trying to figure out what the Quakers are planning to do. They have been practicing their formations and strategies, trying to figure out what the Quakers are planning to do.

"We're both snake bit," the Bulldogs' coach said. "But we're not going to let that stop us." The two teams will face off today in a match that promises to be a heated one.

Don't miss the action! The meet starts at 2 p.m. in New York's Van Haven.

Frosty Try to Regain Form Against Leigh

The Penn football team is trying to bounce back from a loss to Harvard last week. The Quakers have been struggling lately, and they are looking for a win to boost their confidence.

"We're going to come out strong against Leigh," said Coach Hubert Vogelsinger. "This is a key game for us." The Quakers will need to put in a strong performance if they are to have any chance of defeating the Bulldogs.

The game is scheduled for tomorrow night at 7 p.m. at Van Haven.

"It's a tough game," said Coach Hubert Vogelsinger. "But we're going to come out strong and give it our best shot."
