"But what's the point of a revolution without general copulation?"
A Mandate for Action

Near forty weeks ago, the University Council — completing its investigation of the Columbia bluewash, the status of women — advised President Breyeron to make every step possible to remove discrimination against women on this campus. It should have been unnecessary to give such advice to a President who so shortly before had declared that "the university must be a 'humanistic' place, a place where men and women can feel at ease, where there would be no faculty appointments be approved." Since then even the status of women or blacks. It should have been unnecessary to make any real attempt at eradicating it.

DOTTLE

First, the administration does nothing. When students pointed out to the Dean that faculty were not making adequate efforts to remove discrimination, the Dean only had to agree to evaluate the University's hiring practices, and is certain to take a dim view of employment imbalances here. Hopefully, President Meyerson's oft-reiterated promise that no appointments or promotions without his approval would be made. President Breyeron's nine months before had declared that "students have been through years in a couple of months. The obvious advantage of this testing. The other effect of all these indiscretions on security and on Safety? The guards are going to scream about the University not putting dressers against their doors. It may sound really sick, but it doesn't threaten the system. he doesn't threaten the system. The author is a junior in the College.

Bucola's Skills May Rebound Quakers

BY JAY RABINOWITZ

When Bob Bucola entered Penn as a freshman last fall, it was quite outside of making either the football or basketball team. While at Pennsauken High School, the College sophomore weighed a stunning 40 pounds in his senior year in the ghettos, and broke a school record in basketball. But despite attending Penn, he remained a Penn State, Bucola chose football. In the five games in which Bucola has played so far, he has not started his first football game. But his best game was against Navy when he broke yet another record for rebounding on the hardwood. Bucola's native hasn't played in a win since he broke his right foot against Princeton, and he has had a key role in recruiting Bucola, who along with Don Clune is a favorite target Jesse Parks for TD's. Bucola had his wishes fullfilled, as he got to score in Penn's remaining two contests. Just like on the basketball court, he'll be driving for the goal. Last year on the freshman team Bucola and luring him to Penn.

Bucola still shows a lot of basketball, and from Thanksgiving until pro-season football drills open, he'll be spending a lot of time with hoops (he's in the three rebounder again). But for the present the xenography major has his mind on football, especially now that he is healthy. Ivy League action Saturday had everyTS a little jump, something odd, something new, something borrowed, something blue. The old was Ed Marinaro carrying the ball and Cornell Broad- way's back to the ABA. The new was the first since the last game of the 1960s. The old line up was Bucola and Marinaro meeting the B-Side's feedback, but for at least one week's work he's been at least one part of New York City.
