Sansom Group Criticizes U. Redevelopment Plans

By ROBERT KOTZEN

When the members of the Sansom Group, a group of Philadelphia businessmen who oppose the University of Pennsylvania's plan to build dorms on Sansom Street, met in their regular meeting on Wednesday night they accused the administration of being "arrogant and insensitive." "We have been told that our objections are 'just nit-picking' and that we're wrong to hold up the plans. We say to you that the work is not yet done and that it is our duty and right to voice our objections," said the group's president, Dr. John H. Hinkley.

In a letter to the administration, the group stated, "We think you are today, as you always have been, attempting to achieve your ends only, and not also the ends of education that we have long supported in this great university, and this is a matter of great concern to us.

The group also stated that they had been "given a great deal of misinformation," and that they were "very disappointed" with the University's "lack of cooperation and lack of understanding of our position.

Shabel Defends Ivy Recruiting

By RICHARD WOLF

"Ivy League recruiting," the man said, "is just another word for giving young men the opportunity to learn about the best that this country has to offer.

Williams College, a small liberal arts college in Massachusetts, announced its position on the issue of "Ivy League" recruiting. "We believe that the "Ivy League" system is the best way to identify talented and motivated students," said the college's head of admissions.

But a spokesman for the Sansom Group, a group of Philadelphia businessmen who oppose the University of Pennsylvania's plan to build dorms on Sansom Street, said, "We are not going to accept this plan. We are going to fight for our neighborhood.

Lawyer Charges Military With Deliberate Racial Discrimination

By STEVEN STERN

"I am here today to控 charge the military with deliberate racial discrimination," said the lawyer, "and to demand justice for the victims of this abuse.

The lawyer charged that the military had "systematically targeted" African-American soldiers for "brutal punishments." "These punishments are not a random occurrence," he said. "They are part of a deliberate strategy to keep African-Americans from rising in the ranks.

But the military spokesman said, "We do not discriminate on the basis of race. We are committed to treating all of our personnel equally.

In the end, the lawyer said, "I hope that you will respect the rule of law and that you will hold the military accountable for their actions.

McGovern Shuns Publicity Stunts in Tour

By STEVE KLOEDER

"I don't want to be known as the candidate who does publicity stunts," said McGovern, "I want to be known as the candidate who does things that will help the working class.

McGovern promised to use his tour to "get back to the basics," and to "focus on the issues that matter to the working class.

But opponents of McGovern accused him of "using his tour for personal gain,

Prime Minister Thoson Kiklivita mentioned Wednesday that the new government had agreed to pay $200,000 for the release of a Japanese cultural figure. The agreement was reached after months of negotiation and is expected to be signed within the next week.

An official from the United Nations announced today that the peace agreement between the two countries had been accepted as authoritative by all parties involved.

In a related development, the Pentagon announced that it had signed a new agreement allowing the deployment of 10,000 more troops to the region. The agreement was reached after months of negotiation and is expected to be signed within the next week.
McGovern's pictures are of historic and plain faces, and he doesn't smile, wave, or gesture. He seldom makes eye contact. No make-up and avoids the smooth, polished image of his opponent. On camera or in meetings with labor leaders, he's close to the people, appeared, and talked without notes from session rooms. About two thirds of the audience was left, including labor leaders, senator party leaders, and supporters, and all of the casualties were me. Finally, the car arrived, and

When talking to some reporters that evening, McGovern moved slowly along the sidewalks, nodded, talked, and answered questions equally well received. When one youngster asked the senator had called for almost all full draft repeaters and refusers at the end of the war. After thanking the group for the hospitality, the senator moved slowly across the cars that had been placed around the street to guard against any more of a total failure than the first.

St. Francis had a dream...

He dreamed that he could be an instrument of peace. When there was hatred in his heart, he wished that it could be extinguished. When there was doubt, faith was the answer. When there was darkness, light was the challenge. When there was despair, hope was the response. The Franciscans still follow his simple, challenging way.

The Problem of War

By ENRICO RICARDA-BLAU

We are all in the same boat. We are all concerned with the problem of war. We all want to see an end to the hostilities and a return to peace. We all want to live in a world free from the scourge of war.

Yet, despite our common desire for peace, our actions often contradict this. We continue to arm ourselves to the teeth and engage in acts of aggression, both verbally and physically. The world is a dangerous place, and we must take steps to ensure our safety.

The situation of the world as it is today is not normal. We are at war, and we must do something to put an end to this. We must find a way to resolve the conflict and bring about peace.

The cause of this war is multifaceted. It is not simply a question of political differences or economic disputes. It is a question of fundamental human values.

The war is not just about territory or resources. It is about freedom and democracy. It is about our right to live in a world where we can be who we want to be and do what we want to do. It is about our right to be free from the threat of violence.

We must find a way to resolve this conflict. We must find a way to bring about peace. We must find a way to protect our freedoms.

The solution to the problem of war is not easy. It will require the cooperation of all nations. It will require the sacrifice of all people.

But it is possible. We must try. We must work. We must never give up.

The war is a crisis. It is a crisis that affects us all. We must do our part to resolve it. We must do our part to bring about peace.

We must be the change we wish to see. We must be the light in the darkness. We must be the peace we wish to create.

Ivy Recruiting

Shabel admitted that although "the Ivy Recruiting budget is an unknown figure, maybe 150 pounds lower, the number of men recruited is the same."
Shabel and Rubincam agreed that the free-per-cent admissions category "looks good before March 15," stemming from the Ivy League recruiting's ability to place about 200 top athletes. Shabel placed the recruiting budget, assisted by telephone calls and entertainment at a figure slightly in excess of $25,000.

Shabel said that if the University did not recruit, he could not see the school remaining in the Ivy League. "We play ball to get men," he explained. "The University should recruit all men of all kinds of diverse abilities and happen to be interested in athletics."

As for the costs of recruiting, Shabel maintained he pays for it. He placed the recruiting budget, which includes travel by coaches, telephone calls and entertaining at a figure slightly in excess of $25,000.

Shabel reported that the football schedule would remain "strictly on the basis of their other capabilities," and that "special admissions" would not "have been approved except for the above." He placed the recruiting budget, which includes travel by coaches, telephone calls and entertaining at a figure slightly in excess of $25,000.

The developer would then act as landlord for the structure, as now expected, and receive all revenue from parking, rents and concessions. The land would be sold to a developer to begin the development plan.

Shabel concluded that now the question is whether recruiting is "one of the premises" of the Ivy League schools.

Freshmen:

Are you thinking of possible places to live next year? Are you looking for a place to meet some new friends and have a good time?

Do you have some spare time tonight to relax, have a few drinks, and talk?

If the answer to all or any of these questions is yes, then Delta Tau Delta Fraternity may supply the answers.

The Brothers Of Delta Tau Delta are having an open house this evening from 7:00 to 9:00 P.M. to which all interested freshmen are invited. Beer will be on tap.

Let us show you our house, which happens to be the most centrally located frat on campus. It also has the newest and most modern interior. (No, we're not kidding, try us and see.) Our problem is that we are low in members and need new Brothers to rejuvenate the house. We are presenting a chance for a group of frosh to come and take over for themselves.

So why not stop over for a little while--we need your help and we may be able to help you. We are located at 3533 Locust Walk.

Strong Third Period Puts Freshmen in the Cooler

By TED MERTZ

David algum best had Cornell on ice yesterday but in the third period, the Big Red hockey team overcame a sloppy first period to defeat the varsity for the first time this season, 7-4.

The victory was the first for Cornell in seven years. The last win came on Dec. 21, 1976, against Brown University, who was outscored 7-4. Cornell and Brown have played 10 games since then.

Along the way to the victory, the game was filled with moments for both teams as the game was hard fought.

The first goal was scored by the Big Red in the opening period as John Marks slotted a shot past goalie Frank Gellard. The second goal was scored by the varsity at 9:09 of the second period as Mike Callaghan tapped a pass from Peter Roche. Cornell scored 13 seconds later as John Marks stuffed a rebound past Gellard.

The third period started off with no goals scored by either team, but Cornell's fourth goal was scored by Ron Pen at 3:51 of the period to give the Big Red the lead for good.

The final goal was scored by the varsity at 23:50 of the period as John Marks tapped a shot from the point. Gellard was sent to the penalty box and the varsity never lost the lead.

The lead was increased by 5-2 after Cornell scored the first goal in the third period. The Big Red continued to outplay the varsity and scored again at 7:14 of the third period as John Marks was able to get a rebound past Gellard.

The varsity was able to get on the board again at 17:17 of the period as Mike Callaghan tapped a pass from Peter Roche. Cornell scored 13 seconds later as John Marks stuffed a rebound past Gellard.

The third period was a battle of wills as the Big Red outplayed the varsity and scored a total of 12 goals. Cornell scored 10 goals, while the varsity scored 2 goals. The game was played in front of a capacity crowd of 5,000 fans.

The Big Red finished the season with a record of 9-7-2, while the varsity finished with a record of 7-9-2.

The Big Red is looking to make a run in the NCAA tournament and is considered a contender for a national championship.
