The ROTC Proposals

For the third time in as many months, University Council will have the question of ROTC proposals on the Pennsylvania campus. If all goes well, today's Council meeting will result in a definite pronouncement on the ROTC issue - a pronunciation which, if handed, could critically affect the current status of University ROTC.

At today's meeting, Council will consider four alternative proposals on ROTC placed before it by the FILTERING COMMITTEE. Among the four proposals which Council considered at its November meeting was dropped, and two completely new ones have been added to the list since then, we still cannot expect the Council to act in any way conditionally.

The second proposal - an example of the discussion to be presented in the present form and we urge that ROTC, whatever its potential for the University's ROTC-related contracts. We urge Council to support this proposal and to recommended that when the University ROTC program is eliminated, the various departments take all steps necessary to incorporate the most aspects of the military science curriculum into their own course offerings. This curriculum is determined by the University's ROTC program and taught by faculty members subject to University regulations.

The first proposal - an endorsement of the University ROTC report - fails to answer the many objections which we have brought against the continuance of the ROTC program in its present form, and we urge Council to reject it.

The second proposal - while containing much valuable advice - provides for the University's administration to enter into negotiations with the Defense Department so that the status of ROTC may be altered. The ultimate goal of the second proposal appears to be the elimination of any military influence over University curriculum and hiring decisions; however, the negotiations involved are very likely to prove ineffectual. The net result of the second proposal's implementation will probably be the prohibition of ROTC in the University's ROTC program at a later date.

The third proposal - which recommends that military and naval science courses be deprived of academic credit - would safeguard the University's academic freedom, but does not take into account the growing feeling that military science can be a valid field of study. It completely ignores what may very well be a legitimate area of knowledge, and makes no provision for instruction in this area - an instruction that could be carried out independently of any government-sponsored program.

The fourth proposal is the final one, which simply calls for the termination of all University ROTC programs. We urge Council to support this proposal, and to recommend that when the University ROTC program is eliminated, the various departments take all steps necessary to incorporate the most aspects of the military science curriculum into their own course offerings. This curriculum is determined by the University and taught by faculty members subject to University regulations.

Behrman and Sapir

Although Sapir's tenure application was formally rejected at the level of the Provost's Staff Committee, sources in the anthropology department asserted that the rejection was a result of the influence of certain members of that department at the school level.

Both Dr. Behrman's and Sapir's academic qualifications and competence in the African studies field received very high praise from academic colleagues. Both Dr. Behrman's and Sapir's appointment at the University, John Wideman, said. The Afro-American studies program said. "...without a scholar in African Sapir draws very high praise from faculty colleagues. Tuesday Tuesday Tuesday Tuesday Tuesday Tuesday did draw very high praise from academic qualifications and comment at the school level.

Although Sapir's tenure appearance was formally rejected at the level of the Provost's Staff Committee, sources in the anthropology department asserted that the rejection was a result of the influence of certain members of that department at the school level.

There is no reason to think that

Penn Outwaits Duke in Overtime

By BILL WITTE

DECEMBER 14—There’s nothing like a little southern hospitality.

Duke’s rebuilding Blue Devils were kind enough to invite Iverson to Durham on Saturday for a game against a strong Yale squad.

Another big difference? This time, the visitors were the ones who were coming in with a losing record.

The Quakers were able to handle them, as stated Read.

When we came down here, said Read, "we had a tough enough time without our top scorer. Dan Kasle.

They also have some fine scorers on their club," remarked Salfi about the Elis.

"They have some fine scorers on the team up for a big game. Against Harvard on Saturday the Quakers need a win to regain momentum.

"He’s a great forechecker and has a lot of experience in playing tough hockey," said Andy Jones.

"I think that the team can be very dangerous," assessed Read.

Read’s teammates consistently praised him for his work on the ice and off it. "He does a hell of a job," said one.

"Well, good hick down in Oregon," exited Yo-Yo.

"Maybe I shouldn’t have left now that you’re following Penn," smiled Harter.

"Good game, Richard," offered the rotund spectator.

"My sarcastic summary, "Those PCA guys should present the frosh a lot more than a month away. That match must have been looking past this one as we destroyed their downtown opponents by a 126-53 margin.

As he left the floor with a 26-21 advantage.
