Budget Comm. Would Increase Income, Cut Expenses in Athletics

By MICHAEL SILVER

The Presidential Budget Committee has recommenced in its attempt to limit student athletics expenses, and has recommended several measures designed to increase income and cut expenditures. The committee proposed to reallocate funds currently allocated to the University's athletic department, and to consider the possibility of levying admission fees at sports events.

More Students Graduating Early

By NANCY SPARKS

Despite a lack of statistics, University officials have good reason to believe that early graduation among undergraduates is on the increase. According to the Associate Dean of the College, the number of students graduating early has doubled over the past three years.

U.S. Financial Support of Bicentennial Uncertain

By BETN GINSBERG and MAURICE J. R. OYSTER

After meeting Thursday with two key federal bureaucratic officials, Mayor Frank Rizzo got a glowing report from them about the possibility of increasing the city's financial support for the bicentennial celebration. Mayor Rizzo said that the city could receive up to $500,000 in federal aid, but some other officials expressed doubt about the possibility of any federal support.

AHM SGT. GETS 10 YEARS

DANANG—A Bronx old American sergeant was sentenced to 10 years in prison Thursday after he pleaded guilty to possessing a television camera and flying a helicopter to listen to his own broadcast in South Vietnam.

HEARD ME "FIRE"

``I heard me 'fire''' is the name given to the helicopter used by the sergeant, according to Lt. Col. Donald A. Martin, commander of the 3rd Air Support Division and a former student of the University of Detroit.

``He was a good student, but we are not going to reward that," said the colonel, who did not want to be named. "He will serve his time and go home."
Talking Point

BY DANIEL COHEN

Talking Point is a student-run peer counseling service on the University of Pennsylvania campus. It is a service designed to help students deal with the diverse needs of a university community. The group's particular efficacy has been especially pronounced in areas where many students have been unable to cope.

The group's general purpose is to respond to an organizational need, as in the case of students who had been wary of seeking psychiatric help at Student Health services. The Talking Point project is designed to operate in close association with the University medical school, as it has shunned ties with the University administration. It is the only free service on campus that is completely set up to help students deal with personal and psychological problems.

Talking Point counselors try to ensure that the student's control over their own lives is not replaced by someone else's. In some cases, they have had to rely on the student's apprehension of the situation and have had to deal with the student's control. Only recently, the group's involvement in one particular case has demonstrated the student's control over their own lives.

Talking Point operates through an answering service. It is the only organization on campus that is completely set up to help students deal with personal and psychological problems.

Talking Point is available to anyone on campus, and has been retained and a "have your say" service-no appointment hassles. It is the only organization on campus that is completely set up to help students deal with personal and psychological problems.

Talking Point's "inland switch" exists within the University, in the various areas of the campus that are served by the University. Talking Point is designed to be a service that responds to an organizational need, as in the case of students who had been wary of seeking psychiatric help at Student Health services. The Talking Point project is designed to operate in close association with the University medical school, as it has shunned ties with the University administration. The group's particular efficacy has been especially pronounced in areas where many students have been unable to cope.
Student Representation

While students, for the most part, have abandoned the protests and demonstrations of the sixties and the quaint notion of a "student voice in decision-making," we wonder what the future holds for these students wishing to have anything to do with planning their education.

The McPhill report—a document dealing with the faculty hiring procedures and the establishment of an Academic Review Committee, but not the needs of those two minorities in the Law School—might well not have occurred. Here is a student role in decision-making.

We believe that the student representation...

U.S. Production of Pep Pills to Drop

By United Press International

WASHINGTON—Attorney General John N. Mitchell announced Thursday that the 1973 production quota for the widely abused stimulant drugs amphetamine and methamphetamine would be cut by about 80 per cent. Mitchell said that the government had produced 4,800 kilograms of amphetamine and 4,800 kilograms of methamphetamine in 1972. Producers wanted 1973 quotas to produce 9,800 kilograms of amphetamine and 9,800 kilograms of methamphetamine.

Director John E. Ingersoll of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs told reporters that the government would be setting 1973 production quotas at 2,500 kilograms of amphetamine and 2,500 kilograms of methamphetamine. Mitchell denied that the savings would be sent to the graduate professional school as he said the savings would be "the amount of money the type of plan is most suitable."

Mitchell and Ingersoll arrived on the basis of recommendations by Surgeon General James E. Shannon, and said that a regulation against the manufacture of any form of amphetamine product, being diverted from the control of the United States.

Ingersoll testify before a House subcommittee Feb. 1 (that in 1971 alone, federal agents seized more than 16 million doses worth of amphetamines that had entered the illicit market.

It was estimated in 1970, the last year such a study was attempted, that 10 per cent of legally produced amphetamines products were diverted into illicit channels where such drugs are known as "speed" or "uppers."

Ingersoll warned that continued abuse of these drugs, which are legally used primarily for weight reduction, "may result in toxic psychosis, physical exhaustion, paranoia, hallucinations, convulsions, and even violence."

"Under the 1973 drug abuse and control act the attorney general sets production quotas based in part on the recommendation of the U.S. Surgeon General."

Mitchell said the 1972 quotas are adequate to provide for the estimated medical, scientific, research and industrial needs of the United States, subject to requirements, and the reserve stocks.

Initially, he said the Surgeon General recommended a 40 percent reduction but after further study proposed an additional 30 per cent rollback.

Budget Plans

Dr. Mitchell Blame, chairman of the board of trustees, explained the amount of money the University could make additional savings, including "free substitution of loans for scholarships" for many graduate students.

Blame said his committee was studying the plans of loan programs that have recently been initiated at Harvard and Yale Universities, which have set up loan funds and it's pyramided through bank associations. Blame explained. "The variables are too many to say for sure which type of plan is most suitable."

Although Blame would not commit on the amount of money the University could expect to save, he said the savings would be "certainly substantial."
