Admissions Groups Propose Class Size Limits to Council

By JIM KAHN

The Committee on Undergraduate Admissions and Financial Aid will propose to the University Council on Wednesday a resolution recommending that no more than 195 students be admitted to any class in the future. The proposal, which the committee said was "necessary to implement the financial aid

The above maximum number of students will apply to both men and women. Undergraduate students would comprise the majority of the admission class (including SAT scores which will be an important factor) while the number of graduate students would be almost equal to those of the entering freshmen. The committee has recommended that the maximum number of students, including graduate students, be limited to 195 persons in the entering class. The total number of fresh and transfer students enrolled during the academic year 2030-1 should be approximately 195. The University administration has approved the recommendations of the faculty and the University will announce the new admission policy in the near future.

Penn Upends Brown, 37-33, For Ivy Hoop Championship

The 10-year Harvard repayment plan, which includes a government-aided loan program, makes special provision for slower repayment or cancellation of debt when yearly income is insufficient.

Muskie also said the United States has no moral obligation in the task of reconstruction.

However, he said, this does not mean a continuation of support for a South Vietnamese war effort and indicated the United States should not use reconstruction with South Vietnam unless which reconstruction could begin.

Muskie who needs a big vote to confirm his frontrunner status, staged a parade parade in the largely French-American west side of Manchester earlier Sunday, walking a mile through the streets. He attempted to retain votes his staff believed were lost through the charge by the Manchester Union Leader that the Main Democrat did not object when the word "Canuck" was used.

The word has a derogatory connotation when the word was used.

Muskie later was confronted by 20 Vietnam veterans who opposed the war after he attended Mass at St. Marie's Roman Catholic church.

"I want to solve the problems of those who went there first," Muskie said. "When all the troops and all the prisoners are back, then we'll deal with the amnesty question. My first priority is ending the war, not only prisoners are back, then we'll deal with the amnesty question. My first priority is ending the war, not only reconstruction.

"I believe we have a moral obligation in the task of reconstruction.

Trackmen Halt Villanova ICAA Rampage As Collins, Blair Star

By NICK FURDON

Of the DP Sports Staff

PRINCETON, N.J. -- "A neat trick that the boys really heart your heart out," boasted a jubilant J. E. "Butch" Hamlin this morning, recalling the finals of the ICAA championship meet last night.

And after listening to the Penn track coach catch the black-hearted picture of his boys' domination of the ICAA and the Junior Track Club of Princeton, it was apparent that the Quaker boys were the poster children of the Princeton Invitational. From the looks of the scores, Princeton had won the ICAA meet.

On the first day, the Quakers placed first in five of the ten events, and on the second day, they won six events. From the last day of the Princeton Meet, it was apparent that the Quakers were the best team in the foreign track championships.

"It was a great weekend for us," said Hamlin. "We were at the top in every meets with the Quakers, and we were at the top in the half-marathon with Blair. And despite the fact that we had a remote chance to come out on top, we still had a great meet in eight years. And despite the fact that we had a remote chance to come out on top, we still had a great meet in eight years." (IC4A meet had enough pure excitement before Penn had officially handed the baton off.)

The victory was a great one for the Quakers, who had just begun to enter the national scene.
