The New State Rule Ends Food Stamps for Students

A number of University students have had their food stamp allowances reduced by the state March 1. According to the University, the New State Rule, brought about by the Public Assistance Department, has cut many students' benefits due to the way it is being run.

The State Department of Public Welfare, in an effort to better control the way in which food stamps are used, has decreased the amount of money that can be spent on a particular meal. This has led to a decrease in the amount of money that can be spent on food stamps for students, even though they have been working in order to keep their benefits at a minimum.

The University's Public Assistance Department has announced that they will be implementing a new system for food stamp distribution. This system will allow students to purchase a certain amount of food stamps each month, and these stamps can then be redeemed at any university-owned residence hall.

This new system is expected to be in place by next month, and it will be open to all University students who are currently eligible for food stamps. Students will be able to purchase their food stamps online, and they will have the option to choose from a variety of meal plans.

The University is also working to ensure that students who are not currently eligible for food stamps will still be able to access food resources. They are currently looking into the possibility of setting up a food pantry that will be available to all students on campus.

Hi-Rise Rents Are in Luxury Range

The best apartments in Superblock—four-bedroom units—are not available to those on a tight budget. They may still be temporarily eligible for food stamps or other forms of public assistance, but the rent in Superblock is far higher than what they would be able to afford.

There are a number of University students who are living in luxury apartments, but they are not necessarily the ones who are eligible for food stamps or other forms of public assistance. Many of these students are upperclassmen who have been able to save enough money to afford the rent in Superblock.

The full rate schedule for Superblock housing appears in this article.

Residents do not generally receive rent checks in the mail; instead, they are expected to pay rent on a regular basis, usually every two weeks. If they are unable to pay rent on time, they may be charged late fees or have their apartment confiscated.

LAIRD ANNOUNCES DRAFT RESUMPTION
WASHINGTON.—Ending a three-month break in the draft, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird announced Monday that the nation's colleges and universities will be called into military service during April.

May and June, Laird said, will be a period of readjustment, planned for last week that would have followed the reservists to Vietnam.

The extension of the war in Vietnam was added to the bill.

He hoped the other candidates would follow suit and take a date without being fined. "I set the pattern in 1970," he said. "They now want long term credits for state's rights in his conservative campaign, has fallen by the wayside," he said.

The local restaurant Department does not separate students from other recipients of all-arch rolls and has no way of estimating the number of students affected by the rule change. Neither, apparently, has any University office. According to James Hartke, McCloskey's state worker, is any indication.

The Rent Increases

The rent increases announced Monday by the Residence Office are far less than many students had anticipated. University functionaries have explained that the rent rises are a direct result of poor student housing and low cost food services to the residential community.

The present financial situation of the University, in which the rent increases might have been larger, is certainly not new. It is clear that the complex of factors which has been playing itself out in the past few years has now culminated in a situation in which the residents of the University must bear the brunt of the University's financial problems.

In the past, the University has been able to maintain a balance between the cost of living and the price of consumer goods. This balance has been maintained by a combination of low rent increases and by the University's efforts to provide a quality of life for its students.

However, in recent years, the University has been forced to raise its rents and to offer fewer amenities to its students. This has led to a situation in which the University's financial situation is now most precarious.

The University administration must take the blame for the current situation. It is clear that the University has not been able to maintain a balance between the cost of living and the price of consumer goods.

In the future, the University must take steps to improve its financial situation. This includes increasing its financial support, increasing its investment in student housing, and increasing its efforts to provide a quality of life for its students.

were substantially raised. Last March, residence officials announced increases that averaged 20% for activity. Ledwell warned that hypertec-

"break-even point."

Ledwell said Monday that while the University would try to "keep rents as sufficiently low to be considered next year. However, he said, "I don’t think there is any built-in automatic increase."

He said the University hopes to realize $4,000,000 in rents from supplemental aid. He said he did not foresee any cutback in services such as a decrease in maid service.

New Hampshire is Primary Tournament Test for Icemen

The season’s first provincial tournament takes place this weekend for the Penn Icemen in the Division III tournament for Division I teams. However, the Icemen have had a difficult time dispatching the Wildcats of Dartmouth (14-11) and the University of New Hampshire (8-9), who have too much trouble handling the Penn power. Despite the Wildcats’ 3-1 victory in the first round playoff game, the Icemen have proven to be too good for New Hampshire in the last two games. The Wildcats have scored 26 goals in those games, but the Icemen have scored 46, and have a 7-0-0 record.
