Student Comm. Members Back Tuition Sit-in

ANN MARK
The Associated Students of the Pennsylvania State University is sponsoring a tuition sit-in on the State College campus this week at the State College University-wide Student Senate is scheduled for Tuesday in the Classroom Building.

All students serving on University governing bodies were invited to participate in the sit-in. This included representatives from student governing bodies at all University campuses, including the Student Senate, administrative boards, and the University's governing bodies.

The purpose of the sit-in is to demand that the University provide adequate financial aid to students and to protest the University's policies regarding tuition and fees. The sit-in will begin at noon on Tuesday, April 9, and will continue until 5 p.m.

MARTIN MEYERSON

Meyerson Reserving Judgment on Protest

By CHAY BLAKEY

President Meyerson said Thursday he would chair a special meeting of the Student Senate on April 8 to discuss a proposal to establish a 'student senate system' at Penn State. The proposal was introduced by Penn State senators and would give students a greater voice in university decision-making.

The proposal would create a new student senate system that would include representatives from all University campuses. The system would be modeled after the student senate system at the University of Pennsylvania, which has been successful in increasing student participation in university governance.

The proposal would give students the right to vote on important university issues, including tuition and fees, budget allocations, and university policies. It would also provide students with a seat on the University's Governing Board, giving them a voice in the decision-making process.

The proposal has been met with mixed reactions from University administrators and faculty. Some have expressed concern that the proposal would give students too much power and could lead to a loss of academic integrity. Others have praised the proposal and say it would be a step forward in increasing student participation in university governance.

The special meeting of the Student Senate will be held on April 8 at 3 p.m. in Room 102 of the Old Main Building. All students are encouraged to attend.

Selection of Day Care Site Due Soon

By KATHLEEN HARRELL

The University administration hopes to select a site for the proposed day care center on the State College campus within the next two weeks. The site will be chosen from a list of four possible locations.

The four proposed sites are: a) the current location of the University's day care center, which is located on the west side of the Campus; b) a site near the University's athletic facilities; c) a site near the University's medical facilities; and d) a site near the University's engineering facilities.

The University administration is working to select a site that will be accessible to all members of the University community and will provide adequate space for the day care center.

The University administration is also working to ensure that the selected site will be safe and secure, with adequate security measures in place.

The University administration is expected to make a decision on the site within the next two weeks. The site will be selected based on a number of factors, including the location, size, and accessibility of the site.

Comm. Rejects Proposal To Set Minimum Vote

The University's Council of Trustees has rejected a proposal to establish a minimum vote requirement for the University's governing bodies.

The proposal was introduced by the University's Council of Trustees and was intended to ensure that the University's governing bodies would make decisions that are representative of the University community.

The proposal would require the University's governing bodies to approve decisions by a two-thirds majority vote, rather than the current simple majority vote.

The University administration has expressed concern that the proposal would be too restrictive and would limit the University's ability to make decisions quickly.

The University administration has also expressed concern that the proposal would be difficult to enforce and would create additional administrative burdens.

The University administration has stated that it will continue to work with the University's Council of Trustees to develop proposals that are in the best interest of the University community.

Black Dorm May Encounter Legal Problems, Counsel Says

By KATHY SWENSON

The University of Pennsylvania's lawyers have warned that the proposed black dormitory project may encounter legal problems and could be challenged by the courts.

The University is considering the creation of a new dormitory for black students, which would be located on the University's main campus. The University's lawyers have stated that the project may be subject to legal challenges if it is not properly planned and implemented.

The lawyers have advised the University to consult with legal experts and to take steps to ensure that the project is properly planned and implemented.

The University administration has stated that it will continue to work with its lawyers to develop a plan for the black dormitory project that is in compliance with all applicable laws and regulations.

Deliberations Begin In Darrell Trial

By United Press International

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UP) -- The Harrisburg State prison jury begins deliberations Thursday following a charge by the prison's former warden, Henry W. Myers, that the prison's Deputy Commissioner was involved in a cover-up of the Darrell case.

The defense in the trial of Darrell, a black inmate, charged with first-degree murder, was rested Wednesday after three days of testimony. The state's case against Darrell was based on circumstantial evidence and the jury is expected to take several days to reach a verdict.

The trial has been highly publicized and has attracted nationwide attention. The defense has been led by prominent defense attorney, John Adams, who has vowed to fight for Darrell's release.

The jury is expected to take several days to reach a verdict. They will be sequestered until a verdict is reached.

Bookstore Switching to Master Charge

By KATHY SWENSON

The University bookstore is making a major change in its payment system, switching from the current system of using cash or checks to a Master Charge system.

The switch will be made possible by a new agreement with Master Charge, a national bank credit card system. The University bookstore is the first in the state to offer a Master Charge system.

The switch will provide customers with a more convenient and secure way to make payments for items purchased at the bookstore. It will also help the University to reduce administrative costs and streamline its operations.

The switch will be made gradually, starting with the sale of textbooks and other course materials. The switch will be completed within the next two weeks.

Difficultly in Collecting Bills Cited

By KATHY SWENSON

The University's financial office has reported difficulties in collecting bills from students, leading to a significant increase in the University's delinquency rate.

The University's financial office has stated that the increase in delinquency rate is due to a number of factors, including a decline in the University's enrollment and a decrease in the number of students paying their bills on time.

The University's financial office has stated that it is working to improve its collection efforts and to reduce the delinquency rate. It has also stated that it will continue to work closely with the University's administration to ensure that all students are aware of their billing responsibilities.

Letters to the Editor

Bookeeping

Sir: The University of Pennsylvania bookstore is a conglomerate of unwholesome, unhealthy, and unprofitable commercial institutions. To make a conglomerate any more evil, one need only add that its knaves, greysuits and gyniopets belie public relations. And, therefore, it behooves me to tell the book renters, lovingly and flagellantly, to make way for the only effective conscience of the bookstore, the bookstore executive.

A good bookstore is as vital to the economic, and historical context of...
