Changes Ordered For Black Dorm

By MICHAEL SILVER

Peter Corwin, of Milwaukee, Wis., chef of the proposal for an all-black residential dormitory on campus, stated that the proposal has been modified after the recent student demonstrations. Some students have indicated that they are willing to meet with the black students in the dormitory, but there are still several issues to be resolved. The proposal will be submitted to the University administration by the end of the month.

Hurts Student

A number of black students in the dormitory have expressed concerns about the proposal, stating that it would violate their rights as students.

Separate "special experiment."

The proposal stated that the dormitory would be a "special experiment," separate from the rest of the student body. However, some students have raised concerns about the feasibility of such an experiment.

University of Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission

The University of Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission has been working on the proposal for an all-black dormitory. The proposal has been met with mixed reactions, with some students expressing concern about the feasibility of the project.

Based on the presence of the students, the University community will be invited to participate in the decision-making process.

McGovern Takes Wisconsin; Lindsay Drops Out of Race

By Universal Press

By ART BOCKMANN

Elliot Richardson, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Vice President for the United States, announced their withdrawal from the Democratic presidential race.

Richardson was the candidate for a third-term president, and Moynihan was considered a strong contender for the nomination. Both candidates had been expected to make a strong showing in the Wisconsin primary, but both dropped out of the race.

Foster Grad Students Urged to Withhold Fees

By BOB HUGGINS

The University administration has urged graduate students to withhold their fees, in addition to the tuition rollback, as a way of protesting the administration's decision to raise tuition fees.

The administration has also announced that it will offer a tuition rollback to students who agree to continue their studies.

HEW Orders U. to Submit Action Plan

By CHAT BLAKEMAN

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) has ordered the university to submit an action plan for the continuation of its educational programs.

The order was issued after the university failed to comply with HEW's request for information on its plans for the continuation of its educational programs.

The university has been working on a plan to meet HEW's requirements, and has already submitted a draft of the plan.

Richardson Praises Nixons School Desegregation Efforts

By ROBERT HUSBAND

Richardson praised Nixon's efforts to improve school desegregation, and called for continued efforts to achieve equality in education.

Richardson also called for increased funding for school desegregation programs, and for the federal government to play a greater role in ensuring equal educational opportunities for all students.

Grad Students Urged to Withhold Fees

The Graduate Student Association voted to urge graduate students to withhold their fees until the university agrees to a tuition rollback.

The students have been protesting the increase in tuition fees, and have called for a tuition rollback to offset the increase.

HEW asks university to submit plan for continuation of educational programs

The department of health, education, and welfare has ordered the university to submit an action plan in order to continue its educational programs.

The university has been working on a plan to meet HEW's requirements, and has already submitted a draft of the plan.

But students want the university to halt all educational programs until the HEW order is rescinded.

By the time this week's deadline expires, the university will have to submit an action plan to the HEW.

Deliberate Speed

After being kicked around various administrative committees for the past six weeks, the plan for an all-black residence will be considered today by a special meeting of the Faculty Senate. While faculty input is indeed valuable, there are several points about today's meeting which bother us.

First, the Senate will consider a resolution which says, in part, that it is "opposed to the establishment of any racial or religious criteria for residence." This vote for this resolution, though, should not be taken as a vote against the proposed plan. The wording of the resolution is so general that everyone would agree with it: in fact, without the residence criteria extension, white students would have said that, along with "apple pie and motherhood," they support it.

Second, many liberal faculty members have long stayed away from Senate meetings, convinced the body is dominated by a small group of black conservative colleagues. There have been over a meeting where liberal faculty members gathered, and thus we suggest that this change.

There is also the question of what the administration will do with the Senate's recommendations. The plan should be considered by the University's Board of Trustees. The Senate's resolution has not been formalized as a part of the University's decision-making system. For example, Provost Curtis Zeitlin told a group Tuesday that the program is "quietly" presented by the Faculty Senate, the University City Council, and the Student Government. The Senate, he said, is a part of the University's decision-making system. The Senate resolution has not been formalized within the decision-making system.

A number of troubling statements have also come out of College Hall concerning the legality of the proposed residence center. For example, Provost Zeitlin has said that, along with "apple pie and motherhood," there is "no assurance how a court or anyone" can be persuaded not to take legal action on the University's decision. The Senate resolution has not been formalized within the decision-making system.

The Senate's statement is that the Senate does not interview those faculty members who sit on its subcommittees, which are advisory to the University Senate. The Senate resolution has not been formalized within the decision-making system.

While the council stated that applied political, judicial, and social scientists should be heard on the issue of whether to accept or reject the residence center, it did not provide any basis for this claim. The Senate resolution has not been formalized within the decision-making system.

In the meantime, we suggest Provost Zeitlin move with "all deliberate speed" to test that the program is implemented.

Tell the House We Are Continuing Our Fight Against Inflation

By Phil Berwick and Paul Masson

During the past year we have become increasingly interested in the relationship between the Faculty Senate and the University Council. The general system of advisory boards within the University is made up of a series of committees which are controlled by members of the University Senate. In the case of the House, however, the committees are controlled by the University Senate, but they do not control the House's full committee system. The Committee on Committees is the committee which enforces this system. The Committee on Committees is a subcommittee of the University Senate.

The Senate is greatly advised by a number of committees, among them the Senate Advisory Committee on the Budget, the Senate Advisory Committee on the Budget for Graduate Studies, and the Senate Advisory Committee on the Budget for Undergraduate Studies. These committees, which are linked with the University Senate, are advisory to the various bodies within the University Senate.

Kris Kristofferson has composed and performed several songs for other musicians, such as "Me and Bobby McGee." He has written songs about his experiences as a musician and activist, often touching on themes of freedom, society, and personal struggles. His music is characterized by its poetic lyrics and emotional depth, appealing to a wide range of listeners. Kristofferson's music has been a staple in both American and international markets, and his contributions to the music industry are widely recognized. His work has influenced many contemporary artists, and he continues to produce music that connects with audiences around the world.

(Yes, Virginia, there is an Environmental Studies Major.)

Why not get involved with a major in the process of creating itself? There's a group of interested faculty. The rest depends on you.

A new course, ENV 300, "Introduction to Environmental Analysis," will be offered in the Fall. This course has no prerequisites and is therefore available as an elective to all undergraduates. Hours to be arranged by September—please give us your schedule and we'll try!

Major requirements: (1) 10 c.u. in an "area of concentration," usually a single Department (to be approved by the Environmental Studies Committee)—can be natural or social sciences, or possibly others (South Asia has expressed interest; for example); (2) 3 c.u. course sequence: ENV 300 (Introduction to Environmental Analysis), ENV 301 (Environmental Case Studies, to be offered next Spring), and ENV 400 (Problem-Analysis Seminar); (3) 2 c.u. in ENV 499 (Senior Thesis, to be offered next Fall if there are Seniors interested in putting together a major in Environmental Studies).

Dual majors are easily possible. Honors majors in Environmental Studies will be possible for those who do well. (Note: dual major requires only 20 c.u. + the number of c.u. corresponding to the larger major.)

More details are available on a mimeographed outline available in Room 350, "Chemistry Laboratory," 33d Street opposite Franklin Field & Spruce. Or call or visit the Acting Chairman, Environmental Studies Committee, R. R. Thornton (594-8309). Or consult with other Committee members: Profs. Giegengack (Geology, away till August), Levin (Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning), Sharp (Physics), Telfer (Biology), Zandi (Civil Engineering). Other fields may be represented on the Committee as soon as we get off the ground (interested faculty members: why not contact us?)

Graduate opportunities involving environmental problems in one way or another abound, at Penn and at other institutions: in the sciences, in engineering, in medicine and allied medical professions, in regional planning and urban studies, in law.

Sequence numbers for Registration: ENV 300 (no prerequisites or permissions required)—# 29058 ENV 499 (permission from E.R.T. required)—# 29060

WHERE ARE YOU LIVING NEXT YEAR?

We need 15 men to be part of a new kind of living group, formed within the loose confines of a fraternity, Alpha Sigma Phi. This fraternity can be anything you choose to make We are prepared to throw a lot of old fashioned ideas out the window.

There are many advantages to living as a fraternal group:

1- It is inexpensive Our rent is $300/semester
2- We offer common rooms, a dining room, a kitchen as well as a basement.
3- We have recreational facilities such as a color TV, pool table, ping pong table.
4- Most important, we offer the possibility of getting to know and actually acquiring that feeling of belonging to a permanent set of friends.

Shabel Announces

Baseball

A University-wide committee has been chosen by Dr. Vincent F. Collins, Chairman of the Athletic Council, to choose baseball. Prentice Shabel has been selected as the new head coach as he replaces the late Dr. Joseph Bean, who had been the baseball coach since 1938.

The committee is chaired by Rev. Stanley Johnson, University Chaplain, and consists of Conrad G. Robinson, Executive Director of Personnel Relations, and Dr. August Heilig, Director of Athletics.

Shabel, a former pitcher for the Detroit Tigers and a lifetime member of the American League, has been quite successful in his brief tenure as the baseball coach at Temple. Under his leadership, the baseball team has won several games and has shown great improvement.

Shabel, who is a well-known figure in the Temple community, has promised to bring new energy and enthusiasm to the baseball program. He has already begun recruiting new players and has expressed his confidence in the team's ability to compete successfully in the conference.
