
McGovern, Wallace Follow Pennsylvania Voting; Muskie Running Fourth

By ART HOSKIN, BEN GINSBERG

Sen. Hubert Humphrey scored an important victory today in the primary campaign for the presidential, primary Tuesday, capturing 49 per cent of the vote, compared to 24 per cent for his chief opponent, Sen. George McGovern, and 22 per cent for Sen. Fred Harris of South Dakota. Wallace, in a distant fourth, received 7 per cent of the vote.

Although the Pennsylvania balloting had been billed as a battle between Humphrey and Sen. Edward W. Brooke, Massachusetts and N.Y. City Democratic leaders, who had been urging all their supporters to vote for Wallace, had decided to stay out of the race.

But 50 per cent of the vote, Humphrey needed to win, according to the terms of the agreement reached between the candidates and the party's leaders.

Humphrey led with 208,496 votes, while McGovern received 116,834. The battle for second place, however, was close, with Wallace picking up 99,703 votes, compared to 103,259 for Harris.

The Sen. of New York won his home state with 210,617 votes, compared to 168,153 for Humphrey.

Humphrey's strength came from northern Pennsylvania and the Allegheny region, while McGovern carried the rest of the state.

Humphrey, who campaigned with Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon, said he was "very happy" to have carried the state.

McGovern, who campaigned with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, said he was "disappointed" but "will go on.

candidates' 'Victory' Headquarters Reflect 'Heartbreak and Happiness'

By ARTHUR SAIN, BEN GINSBERG and JOHN KAYE

There was much feasting among veteran political reporters that the 'white night' was over as the smoke cleared from the smoke-filled room at the headquarters of the Humphrey campaign, where the news director, John Quigley, told the press that the senator from Minnesota had won the Democratic presidential primary in Pennsylvania.

"We are prepared to announce Humphrey's victory at the headquarters,' Quigley said. "We have been talking to our local headquarters and their returns are coming in."

That announcement was met with much rejoicing at the McGovern campaign headquarters in Philadelphia, where the press room had been filled with reporters and cameramen waiting for the results.

"We are pleased with our victory in Pennsylvania,' said McGovern's campaign manager, John W. Fanning. "We knew it was going to be a close race, but we're happy with the outcome."

Affective Action Revisited

By Carol Tracy

A year ago there was much interest in doing a form of action that could be classed as a "public demonstration." The reasons for this interest were, of course, the close connection between the students and the broader community. Together for several years, the University, the city, the state and the nation have all been more and more aware of the issues involved in the civil rights movement. The University and its students have been at the forefront of this movement, and the students who have been involved have been the ones who have been the most active and effective in bringing about change.

The University has always been involved in the civil rights movement, and this involvement has been one of the key factors in its success. The University has always been committed to the ideals of justice and equality, and has always been willing to take a stand against injustice and inequality. This commitment has been evident in the many different ways in which the University has been involved in the civil rights movement, and has been a key factor in its success.

 Copies of the report began coming into public view over the weekend. But, until the material was released by the White House in the form of a televised address by President Nixon just after he took office, conclusions of the survey had been available only to Washington's most senior officials, including President Johnson and Secretary of Defense McNamara. The report, prepared under the direction of Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, Johnson's national security affairs adviser, said it would take the United States from one to seven years to "pacify" South Vietnam. It recommended a gradual withdrawal of U.S. forces, increasing the South Vietnamese role in the war, and a "flexible" military strategy for dealing with the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese. It concluded that the war was essentially a "domino theory" war, and that the fall of Laos and Cambodia might endanger Laos and the rest of Asia. The report was not released for public consumption until last week, but portions of it were earlier published in a French magazine. Develop Sense of Nation, Author Tells Black Students

By ELLIN MINTRO

PHILADELPHIA- "In order to resist black nationalist and the minority in the United States, we need a "national" concept," said Stokely Carmichael, chair of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, at the University of Pennsylvania last week.

Carmichael told an audience of 100 that the struggle for black liberation is bigger than just the Civil Rights Movement. He said that "how we win will make any definition of civil rights a nullity.

"It is a movement of all people. We are African people who are looking for something and we need to move as a people," he added.

Carmichael, who laid the foundations of the Black Power Movement in the 1960s, said that the struggle for black liberation is not just about civil rights but about a "state of being".

"The struggle is not just about the Civil Rights Movement, but about a "state of being". We must be clear that we are African people who are looking for something and we need to move as a people," he said.

The support of the Democratic city machine, led by City Chairmen Peter Cordi, Humphrey outpolled him in Philadelphia by a two-to-one margin. The Minnesota senator translated his opposition to the black neighborhoods of Philadelphia, with about three-to-two vote.

In some black sections, Humphrey voted in the Keystone state, but his dissatisfaction was unspoken. At the Franklin Field hotel, "We've come through a difficult period, but we've turned the corner, we've leveled off and we're on our way up again."

Don't risk being billed for phone calls that you don't make. Be sure to notify us in advance and disconnect your phone when you leave. Just fill in one of the cards provided in the dorm and to Rens Offices and drop in the receptacle inside the main floor by May 10. We'll take it from there.
ROTC Contract Under Negotiation

Aim: to ensure that the current contract with the Pentagon, which is valid through next year, contains clauses whereby the University will "make available to the Departments of Military Science the necessary classrooms, administrative offices, office equipment, storage space and other required facilities to a fair and equitable extent in comparison with other departments of the institution." Owen said that this clause may be rewritten for the new contract.

He described clauses concerning funding saying, "The main question we're dealing with is one of course approval from the Pentagon. The other matter would then go back to the Pentagon, which is agreed to by both parties, then I think we can get down to the incidental problems of whose budget is going to pay for it." He also declined to term ROTC as an "extracurricular activity" and compared it instead to the Department of Recreation and Intramural Athletics.

said this clause may be rewritten for the new contract, if needed.

Owen said the amount of money the University allocates to the two ROTC programs is less than the amount the programs bring to the University through scholarships. He also said the two departments have yet made requests regarding course changes because the two professors heading the programs, George Loper and Ray Kirkland, are both due to leave next year.

"The procedure followed by the (Pentagon) did not recommend any changes on the 220's on campus. It did not recommend any changes in the program. It should be controlled by external organizations.

DP Ames, Sports Editor

The 400 yard decathlon opened with a bang (or at least a very loud rumble) as freshman James Logan leaped to the lead in the season's first track meet, in the 400 yard hurdles race on Saturday.

Logan finished first in the race with a time of 50.7 seconds, improving on his previous best of 53.0 seconds.

Logan's performance was not without its challenges, however. In the second heat of the race, he was passed by two competitors in the first 100 meters, but managed to overcome the deficit and pull ahead in the final 200 meters.

Logan's time of 50.7 seconds is currently the top time among all collegiate athletes in the United States, and he is holding the nation's lead in the event.

Logan's performance has been consistent throughout the season, and he has established himself as a strong contender for a podium finish in the upcoming NCAA championships.

Logan's success in the hurdles has also helped the team to a strong showing in the overall meet, as they currently sit in third place, just behind powerhouse universities in the region.

Logan's next event will be the 200 meter hurdles, where he will look to maintain his momentum and continue his strong performance in the event.

Logan's success in the hurdles is a testament to his hard work and dedication to the sport. He has been training consistently throughout the season, and his efforts have paid off.

Logan's performance is a reminder that anything is possible with hard work and determination. He has shown that with the right mindset and attitude, anything is possible.

Logan's next event will be on Monday, where he will look to build on his success and continue his strong performance in the hurdles.
