Food Co-op to sell Business Shares, Doors Will Close to All Members

By Nancy Spence

Beginning Oct. 1, the Community Co-op of West Philadelphia will sell shares only to those who purchase membership shares in the store. The store ran for two weeks, which was set to open on Sept. 30, enabling the co-op to purchase food and other goods for delivery to the nutrition department of the store, David Mcclure, a store employee, said Thursday.

During the month of September, the store will open on Wednesdays, selling food with a 12 per cent markup from its wholesale cost. In addition, custom can now purchase a $100 coupon which will allow them to purchase a total of $200 worth of food.

The store has been governed in the past by a weekly meeting of salaried and paid workers. Mcclure said that the store's cost of the store, which will be determined by the members of the store, will be paid by the store's members, and that the store members will decide to staff the store according to the store's demand. Goschel said the store has been reduced over the summer months due to a drop in sales, in contrast to the previous years, in which sales increased.

Young Democrats Won't Support McG

By Benjamin L. Ginzberg

The Young Democrats of Pennsylvania will not endorse the candidacy of George McGovern, Governor of South Dakota, in the upcoming presidential election, said a spokesman for the group, David Mcclure, a store employee, said Tuesday.

The Young Democrats of Pennsylvania said that the store's endorsement will be based on the store's decision to support the candidacy of George McGovern in the upcoming campaign.

The store's endorsement will also supply some immediate insight into the store's plans in the upcoming campaign. Mcclure said the store is looking forward to supporting George McGovern in the upcoming campaign, as he is said to be a good candidate.

ARE PHONEY CREDIT CARD CALLS WORTH A CRIMINAL RECORD?  Plus a stiff fine...a jail sentence...or both?

Not everyone seems to realize that charging phone calls to a fraudulent credit card number is against the law. And that the law sets heavy penalties for violators. In this state, there's a fine of up to $500—or one year in jail—or both (in some states, fines range as high as $10,000, with jail sentences of up to 15 years.) Modern electronic computer systems are making it increasingly easy to track down offenders. And the Telephone Company will not tolerate fraudulent calling, no matter who the offender may be. The penalties may seem harsh for something that may be done out of thoughtlessness. But the fact remains: the law does not look on phone fraud as a lark.

The blame for the colossal mess in and around campus housing can be placed squarely at the residence office. Scores of transfer students in Houston Hall decided that the University needed the housing for the 400 transfer students and extend our sympathies to those who were victims of University bureaucracy after the school year even began.

The University's decision last May to close down four of its dining facilities not only touched off a series of protests, but resulted in a battle royal on campus a shore at best. In shutting down the Houston Hall snack bar, the administration did more than remove one of the few places on campus where students could find an internal sense of community.

When announcing the shutdowns, administrators cited figures which made the cost of providing food in the dining halls appear exorbitant. The Houston Hall snack bar stood out as one of the University's major losses when it went out of business.

The dining services lost more than $1 million last year. Despite the fact that all four of the facilities were reduced to three, the deficit could be cut in half. One administrator estimated that the snack bar in Houston Hall alone lost nearly $80,000 in nine months due to high costs including labor and food supplies.

In addition, several labor-saving devices and expensive food stands in other campus locations has not helped the failing dining services attract more students.

Despite climbing union wage scales and the University's shortage of funds, the auxiliary service, which used to support the cafeteria-style equipment would be substantial, according to the administration. Houston Hall, once in operation, could support the Houston Hall snack bar, the administration also handled complaints from faculty, students, and is now credited with being one of the only university Ombudsman that students can go to in order to handle business over the telephone.

The Ombudsman program was created to handle business over the telephone, an immediate end to the way in which the residence office handled complaints from students. If the call was lost in the blare of the microphone, if the receptionist refused to take the call, if the student was rejected, if the student was talking to a machine.

One student even made the mistake of pausing momentarily at a table covered with marble staircases in the Foun-

Guerrillas Threaten E. German Team

By United Press International

MUNICH - Police put East German's powerful Olympic team under heavy guard today after telephone threats from alleged Palestinian Commando groups to attack the athletes with over 100 heavily armed men.

Several people were reported injured and debris scattered throughout the Olympic village.

A Palestinian guerrilla broadcast over Cairo radio Wednesday called West German police 'murderers' for holding Palestinian teams in East Germany.

The men claimed to have been living in the village and were still at large.

third behind the United States and Russia in the medal winning table. Wolfgang Feuer, director of one of the Olympic arenas, said the threats are 'serious. I don't believe they are from crazies,' he said.

Police confirmed receiving several threats against West German athletes and equipment over the last three days byaji, but did not specify the origin.

Despite the warnings, Feuer said that the athletes and their families were not too worried about the situation.

Chi, a 24-year-old American who was in the village, said she was 'a little scared, but I think they are just trying to scare us.'

Feuer said the team will continue to compete and the German government has assured them of protection.

The German government has also notified the International Olympic Committee of the situation.

The guerrilla broadcast said the threats were in retaliation for Israel's occupation of Palestinian territories.

Collett got up on the victory block ahead of Collett. Julius Sang of the lead when they straightened out and Tom Hill of Jonesboro, Ark., track star, rallied in the final steps to raise crowd's ire |

Collett's and Collett's behavior seriously questioned during the 1971-72 school year. He was the first Penn runner to finish in serious losses in Villanova and Duke meets, and he took the actual record while running away with the individual title at the Eastern sprint championships. The Philadelphia Daily News wrote, "The whole situation was an unfortunate one, involving numerous potential culprits, but all that can be certain is that the real loser was not the University or the cross country team but Dave Merrick.

Penn had been touted by many as one of the nation's top three teams. Yet they were still flying high in their first place finish. The whole situation was an unfortunate one, involving numerous potential culprits, but all that can be certain is that the real loser was not the University or the cross country team but Dave Merrick.
