Admissions Office Seeking More Financial Aid Money

By JR MELNYK

In an attempt to increase the acceptance of students, the administration is considering making a change in the financial aid administration. For a larger aid budget, the administration is looking to increase the aid for students. However, the increase in aid will come at a cost, as the budget for next year's incoming class is increased. "Because aid shortages create financial difficulties," said an aide to Senate President Stans, "proactive actions are being taken to ensure that all students have adequate financial aid." The aide went on to explain that the administration's goal is to provide enough aid for students to avoid financial difficulties. "We want to make sure that all students have access to financial aid," said the aide. "We are working hard to ensure that all students have the resources they need to succeed."

The Senate added $1 billion a year to the House version in finance committee "social service" programs and welfare recipients. That amount, however, actually was a reduction from the House version, which would have given $2.7 billion in new spending to the government.

The Senate formula is tailored to help the poorer, rural states at the expense of richer, urban states, although its formula distribution is more generous to the large cities that the Senate added in comparison to the House bill.

The senators argued the reform would have increased the present $30,000 exemption to $29.8 billion distribution formula to conference with the House. The House bill without a dime to pay for it.

But Long responded that tax reform should be considered separately by Congress and should not be entangled with the Senate revenue-sharing measure," Church added. There was "no-germaine" to the Administration function.

The House last June approved a $36.4 billion distribution formula for five years.

Acknowledge he supported increasing the minimum tax on income covered by those special provisions, Long promoted the proposal to be "one of the principle issues we will look at" when his executive conducts a tour next week.

Long responded that tax reform was "irresponsible to pass the five-year bill without raising taxes to pay for it.

Defeated by a vote of 56 to 21 was an amendment that would have repealed the 28 per cent depreciation allowance Increase offered the proposals, charging it was the height of fiscal irresponsibility to pass the five-year bill without raising taxes to pay for it.

The senators who supported the bill were for their plants and equipment. Killed on a 60 to 23 vote was an amendment that would have repealed minimum tax laws which allow income tax deductions under the stock option, capital gain, oil depletion and bad debt provisions. It also would have increased the corporate tax rate from 34 to 40 per cent on income covered by those provisions and lowered the present $10,000 exemption to $7,000.

The special items we will look at" proposal would be "one of the principle issues we will look at" when his executive conducts a tour next week.

The McGeorge drive stumbles

By Phil Rubin

We have all at one time or another wondered what it would be like to be able to clean up the messes that arise from the activities of corporations. But in the case of the current political situation, the solution to the problem is not as straightforward as it might seem.

The issue of corporate responsibility has been a topic of discussion for many years, and it is clear that there are several areas where more needs to be done. However, it is important to note that there are also many positive examples of companies that are actively working to make a difference.

One such company is the Fair Trade Coffee Company, which has been involved in promoting fair trade practices for several years. The company's commitment to fair trade has been recognized by various organizations, including the United Nations and the Fair Trade Federation.

Another company that is making an impact is the B Corp movement, which was established in 2015. B Corporations are companies that meet a set of standards and commit to having a positive impact on society and the environment.

These examples demonstrate that there are ways for companies to take responsibility for their actions and to work towards creating a more socially and environmentally sustainable world.

Corporate responsibility guidelines

A B Corps

In light of increasing demand for corporate social responsibility, it is important for companies to consider how they can contribute to creating a more sustainable future. Here are some guidelines for companies to consider:

1. Define your company's mission and values: A clear and well-defined mission statement and values can help guide the company's decision-making and ensure that its actions align with its purpose.

2. Set clear goals: Setting specific and measurable goals can help the company track its progress and ensure that it is making meaningful progress towards its sustainability goals.

3. Engage stakeholders: Engaging with stakeholders, including customers, employees, and communities, can help the company understand their needs and concerns and develop solutions that are relevant and effective.

4. Measure and report: Measuring and reporting on the company's sustainability performance can help demonstrate progress, hold the company accountable, and provide valuable insights for future decision-making.

5. Commit to continuous improvement: Sustainability is an ongoing process, and companies should be committed to continuously improving their performance and seeking new opportunities to make a positive impact.

By following these guidelines, companies can take concrete steps towards becoming more socially and environmentally responsible and contribute to creating a more sustainable future.

America Wins Silver in Last Minute Event

MUNICH — Host West Germany won the final Gold medal of the Munich Olympic Games Sunday when it defeated North Korea 68-67 in a heart-stopping finish.

The win, coupled with the United States' 83-71 victory over Yugoslavia earlier in the day, clinched the silver medal for West Germany.

The Americans had been favored to win the gold, but their victory was far from assured. The North Koreans, who had been playing exceptionally well throughout the tournament, made a valiant effort to shake up the American men's basketball team.

In the climactic game, the Americans came out on top, but only after a hard-fought battle. The game was tied at 67 with less than two minutes left on the clock when the United States managed to pull ahead.

The win was the result of a series of key plays and a solid defensive effort by the Americans, who had been prepare to defend their number three national ranking earned last year.
