Samson St. Residents Applaud HUD Decision

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI

The residents and merchants who live and work along Samson Street in North Philadelphia are urging the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to reconsider its decision to redevelop their area.

Although the HUD decision is regarded as only a "preliminary" step in the overall decision, many residents are concerning themselves with the potential impact of the decision on their community. They are also concerned about the potential impact of the decision on their children's education and their future opportunities.

Report

Submitted to and accepted by the Treasurer for public discussion on 8-3 and 8-15 of $5.2 per credit hour with a probable 1.3 per credit hour increase in September. The cost estimates and operating budgets on which 8.2 per credit hour was based were not at any time discussed except in the most general terms, the report charges.

Given the 8.2 figure, the committee decided to recommend that 0.9 per cent be added to the board, with 0.2 per cent to be used for adjustment of transcriptions. The report states: "The position that virtually all of the approved expenditures should be made. It is further recommended that the University Committee on the economics of student life be established, with the president as a member.

Campus complaints

Many students here evidently believe they have been gypped, snubbed, neglected and otherwise taken advantage of since coming to Philadelphia. Two lecture-discussion groups meeting here this week, however, will give students a chance to outline some of their problems, and we urge anyone concerned with finding solutions to attend.

The first to meet will be a "community meeting" sponsored by the University's Community Involvement Council. The group plans to gather around discussions around topics most students here should be familiar with. Some of them, such as one dealing with the University's admitted legality in the Indiana war effort, will continue a debate never really completed last spring. Another, directed at Robert Redford's controversial theories on the urban crisis, will continue a discussion started at Harvard some time ago.

The festival, however, also will deal with more immediate topics. University wide practices for women, plans for a University day care center, the organization of tenant unions under the Food Co-op will be brought up.

Discussions of these problems will hopefully lead to new programs as well as a re-examination of established ones.

In addition, a consumer hearing, sponsored by the University's transportation center, will meet Wednesday. This discussion, sponsored by a transportation official, may even lead to eventual improvements in Philadelphia's transportation system. Among the topics listed are the following:

- Bicycles and motorballs. Frankly, with all the air pollution here, we advise daily face the exhaust of buses, tractor-trailers and cars in order to side to school. We hardly think the hearing can immediately improve the quality of city air, but student cyclists may hear some good suggestions on how to survive in city traffic.

- Pedestrian movement. With traffic from the Expyway droning round local streets, it is hard to walk from one end of campus to the other safely. Contested protest, however, may convince transportation officials that it was wise to re-route traffic on the Expyway as complaints rise.

- Quality and quantity. Philadelphia has one of the largest public transportation systems, with more than 100 miles of underground track, and quality is another matter. Beside the generally poor condition of the service, travelling on the subsurface cars at night is dangerous. A Temple University student was stabbed last year in a subway station while University students have been robbed and beaten in West Philadelphia. We urge students here to make it known that safety should be an important criteria in public transportation.

- Exhaust pollution. Experts now believe a good part of city air pollution is the result of our cars, and that SEPTA buses contribute to the perpetual smell here. With some public protest, the development of non-polluting engines for use in public transportation might be speeded up.

Conferences like the ones meeting this week reflect student participation. A potentially valuable conference on education accomplished little here on campus two years ago, when the idea of the "education of the whole man" was brought up. The idea was that education be more than just the sciences and math.

Perhaps this chance results from the fact that many of the students here are not from urban areas where the educational and career oriented have been absent and passive in this sort of student activity.

Booters Seek Revenge in Scrimmage

By KEITH NERELL

Hamilton expected a loss and he certainly got one. This time, however, his revenge attempt to spike back the bitter pill of defeat administered by Penn State in last Saturday's Full Contact Workout won't materialize. Until he gets the Full Contact Workout out of there, he won't get the Pennsylvania Football out of there.

The Booters Seek Revenge in Scrimmage. For theLyons are down there, in the cliffs of the Penn State defense, ready to strike back for their season opener at the hands of the Cornell Red. Coach Bob Seddon has found the former in tonight's scrimmage.

This brought his point total to five for two games, high among the East and Blue.

"(Seddon) didn't just come to play," Bobbo remembered before they hit the line. "When Seddon's on the field, there's no way he's going to lose.

Stanczyk Introduced To 62 Mystery Men

By ROB BRODEGH

Stanczyk, the first to see the Eastern Dish at 5:45, was an excited man.

"I'm very happy to have Jim Stanczyk," Seddon said.

That's the impression coach Joe Marinaro cultivated over years ago, and this time again yesterday at the team's first practice of the year.

"What's your name?" Gotta be a question, Seddon asked.

"Stanczyk," Marinaro answered.

The coach had formed a gruff impression in the last contact workout, and it was his responsibility to determine what kind of player Stanczyk was going to be.

Looking over the roster, he noted that the recruit's name had not been differentiated in any way, saying: "We don't want those names getting in the way of this system.

"You're not going to get a free ride," Seddon told him, "you're going to have to fight your way up."

We're more aware of style now than we were before.

We want to be able to rely on our own strengths.

It's appropriate that Kurt Reineke is back, but he'll have to learn the offense if he's going to be a starting player.

This brought his point total to five for two games, high among the East and Blue.
