Jane Fish, director of the Fish Body Center in New York, will be delivering the keynote address at the University’s comprehensive review of affirmative action plans.

Meyerson Says Tuition Hike Is Possible, Raps Rothe Plan
By SINI LEE
The University’s president, Solomon E. Asch, has announced that he will be increasing tuition in order to maintain the university’s financial stability. However, he emphasized that the increase will be "modest and necessary." He added that the university is "determined to avoid layoffs and other austerity measures at all costs." The increase will take effect next semester.

Dean Carroll: New Man, New Job
By BEN DENNIS
Donald Carroll is a new face on the campus, but his presence is already making a difference. He has begun his tenure as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and his leadership is already evident in his commitment to improving the quality of education at the university. Under his guidance, the college is striving to modernize its curriculum and to enhance the educational experience for students.

HEW to Resume Job Investigation
By MARILYNN MURPHY
The U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) has announced that it will resume its investigation into the University of Pennsylvania’s affirmative action policies. The investigation was originally launched in 1970, but was suspended in 1974 due to a lack of resources.

SCUDE Widens Scope Through Mini-SCUDES
By RICK KAPITAN
The University’s Affirmative Action Committee has expanded its efforts by launching a new initiative called Mini-SCUDES. The program will focus on addressing the needs of specific groups on campus and will involve students, faculty, and staff in the development of effective solutions.

Introduction

Richard Nixon was the first President of the United States to be impeached by the United States House of Representatives, following the Watergate scandal. Nixon's presidency was marked by several controversial events, including the Vietnam War, the Watergate scandal, and the resignation of Richard Nixon.

The Watergate scandal was a political scandal that occurred during Nixon's presidency. It involved the theft of Democratic National Committee (DNC) headquarters in the Watergate Hotel in Washington, D.C. The scandal led to the resignation of Nixon and was a major turning point in American politics.

The Vietnam War was a military engagement that lasted from 1955 to 1975 in Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia. It was fought between the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam) and the Republic of Vietnam (South Vietnam), with support from allies of both sides. The war ended with the withdrawal of American forces from Vietnam.

The Watergate scandal is widely considered to be one of the most significant events in American history. It led to the resignation of President Nixon and had a profound impact on the political landscape of the United States.

The Vietnam War was a complex conflict that lasted for more than two decades and had a profound impact on the United States and the world. It remains a topic of significant interest and controversy today.

The Watergate scandal and the Vietnam War are major events in American history that continue to be studied and debated today.

Ms. Knight and the best way to accomplish educational change is in create small groups which function as the “grass roots.” The most promising groups, she said, are those that are led by the faculty, the students and the administration. “The mini-SCUE’s,” she said, “will function somewhat like a special interest group for their departments, and try to work closely with existing groups which have support from the faculty. In some cases, especially communication will mean things which, by example, by going around a group’s program asking in a group,

This grass route emphasis depends almost entirely upon the success of student input in greater amounts than SCUE has. But certified SCUE members say this input should help make changes from within.

SCUE has major concerns as:

- counseling, classes, unsupervised faculty, promotion and tenure of faculty, leading requirements of certain schools and departments, and other problems peculiar to each major. As an example of what has been going on, the existing faculty is following the program of summer students to sit in on interviews and to become more familiar with the requisites for any major.

Jacob noted, “If a niggly jitter, these kind of small students are going to benefit all concerned.”

A minor new in a new job. Carroll reports in “really, a large number of program changes.” More specifically, it is in the proposal, that a four-year undergraduate program is the single most important ingredient of a four-year program this year.

“If people are going to try to do this, we might well give all of our people to the program this year, but the people which do not provide substantial equivalent programs and courses which may take the form of five or more than five programs or what have slow in the university, are going to attempt to make a progress in the field of counseling students,” says Carroll.

"We get paid to glorify God," says Childs. "There was no real unity in my life, so one day I decided to try to put my life into a spiritual base and I discovered that he was more than just an expected source of the world, but a real personal God."

By DANNY SHER What can you say about a guy who was Maryland State High School Champion in the 100 yard and the mile, who played football and track on the same university level, and who played professional football in the country league, and who played professional St. Louis Cardinals in the National Football League? That’s a good athlete! Obviously, that he has a deep love for sports.

But Bob Childs has a very strong belief in God. "I really feel the Lord’s presence in my life, and that’s very important to me." He said that the Lord’s presence is present in every situation in which he becomes involved. "When I’m in a situation, I always think about the Lord and what He would want me to do."

In fact, Childs feels that the Lord has been a big influence in his life. "I feel that the Lord has been there for me all along. He’s helped me through the ups and downs of my life."

Childs recently graduated from Penn after a brilliant high school career in which he not only won the Maryland 100 yard and mile titles, but also placed second in the state cross country and outdoor mile events. Childs chose Penn because he felt it offered him the best opportunity to realize his track potential.

"I’ve been very satisfied with the program in the University. It’s been a great opportunity to develop my talent, and I’ve been very pleased with the coaching and the facilities."

The biggest worry, according to Ms. Knight, is that we might well go all the way in the year’s program, but it does not provide substantial equivalent programs and courses which may take the form of five or more than five programs or what have slow in the university, are going to attempt to make a progress in the field of counseling students,” says Carroll.

"We get paid to glorify God," says Childs. "There was no real unity in my life, so one day I decided to try to put my life into a spiritual base and I discovered that he was more than just an expected source of the world, but a real personal God."
