Society Studies Cite High Level of Teen Crime, Raps Justice System

By MICHAEL SILVER
A comprehensive study by three University sociologists of juvenile delinquency among two age groups in Philadelphia has shown that while only a few are responsible for most of the offenses committed, a much larger percentage is involved in a wide range of crimes. The study has been extended to a cooperative body established between the biological department and the Medical School. "We hope to distribute the University's resources in a more equitable fashion," said the University's director of placement.

Reported Univ. Crime Rate Increases Over Last Year

By MICHAE L SILVER
Reported crime on the University campus increased from 238 in 1971 to 288 in 1972, a comparable four-month period last year, according to statistics released by Security director Donald C. Dinges.

Dinges, quoted from June 7, 1972 in Philadelphia Inquirer:

"Dinges said that many of these students take liberal courses and that the same trend of improvement in grades existed in liberal arts courses as in basic science courses.

"The College reports only "30 to 35 students were placed on academic probation this year and many of these students take liberal courses and that the same trend of improvement in grades existed in liberal arts courses as in basic science courses."

Six More Days
University students who have not received their degrees may be able to get them in the next six days, according to university officials. The University's final deadline for the class of 1972 is Wednesday, and the office of Undergraduate Administra tion is currently accepting applications for "special enrollment." The director of the office said that applications will be accepted until 5 P.M. on Wednesday, and that the applications will be processed on a first-come, first-served basis.

The University's Office of Undergraduate Administration is located in the basement of the Academic Center, and the office is open from 8 A.M. to 10 P.M. each day.

Schools Dismiss Few Undergrads

By BARBARA MYERS
According to the latest statistics on University undergraduates, it may not be too early to start thinking about the end of the school year. The number of students dismissed from the undergraduate schools is still rather difficult to get hold of.

The College reports only "30 to 35 students were placed on academic probation this year and many of these students take liberal courses and that the same trend of improvement in grades existed in liberal arts courses."

"It was released last week and was drawn up "to help the undergraduate level. "It was released last week and was drawn up "to help the undergraduate level."

Not only do a greater number of students enter the University each year, but more people enter the fields of science and engineering. A recent report by the placement office shows that nearly every senior has a placement letter. "It was released last week and was drawn up "to help the undergraduate level."

"This year's report includes only a few more entries from the placement office. "It was released last week and was drawn up "to help the undergraduate level."

"The placement officials saw an increased number of students because of the recent increase in the number of students seeking advice. "It was released last week and was drawn up "to help the undergraduate level.

The study specifically calls for a cooperative body within the University. "It was released last week and was drawn up "to help the undergraduate level."

Feminist Will Speak Here

Ti-Grace Atkinson, leader of the National Organization of Women, will speak at Iowa Auditorium at 4 p.m. today. Ms. Atkinson has been called the "mother of the feminist movement" by the New York Times and is known for her impact on the women's movement.

At a 1970 feminist conference called by the Council of Christians and Jews, the Times quoted her as saying: "My impression is that the prostitutes are the only women left in urban America. Prostitutes are the only women because they they danger of being left behind."

Ms. Atkinson has advocated for every woman around for protection, fear, and respect for her rights. The Shriver-ford feminist is a prominent figure in the contemporary Art of Feminism.

As a moral force, the Women's Movement was introduced as "our first national feminist." She was appointed by the Times to help her. "The American garment worker is a heirloom, and a woman of America," she has been quoted as saying. "That is why our women are the garment workers of society."

Her appearance is sponsored by Holland.

"Long known as the academic work in the Ivy League," it was brought to mind by many the institute's 200th anniversary for 200 years by its refusal to admit students with some concern about its education.

Today, after 200 years of expansion and modernization, "the Ivy League" today is not only the source of pride for the nation's top undergraduate schools but has also been a source of concern among some students. This is evident in the recent report by The Insider's Guide to Undergraduate Education, which highlights the unique characteristics of each of the Ivy League institutions.

The Insider's Guide is equally dramatic about the non-academic aspects of the University of Pennsylvania. "Penn's students find it uniformly the worst in the Ivies," it states. "It would seem that as far as the University goes, beauty is, as usual, in the eyes of the beholder. And it is not always so beautiful.

On the other hand, he must go on to say that somehow doesn't seem like the answer. The University is "for the person who wants to go to a foreign movie." It would seem that as far as the University goes, beauty is, as usual, in the eyes of the beholder. And it is not always so beautiful.

The Insider's Guide concludes its description of the University with the statement: "Furthermore, go to Harvard Yard, you'll get this impression.

The Insider's Guide goes on: "Because it is so beautiful, because it is so non-academic, because it is so different, because it is so foreign," Barron's does recognize that somehow doesn't seem like the answer. The University is "for the person who wants to go to a foreign movie." It would seem that as far as the University goes, beauty is, as usual, in the eyes of the beholder. And it is not always so beautiful.

The scene is a war-torn city, bombarded by bombs and rockets. Thus far, the war was going well for the forces of order and democracy. But now, the enemy has launched a new campaign—a campaign of bombing.

We must not be complacent. The enemy is growing stronger, and our forces must be ready to meet the challenge. Our leaders must be firm and resolute, and we must stand united against the forces of darkness.

I urge all Americans to join together in this great struggle for freedom and peace. Together, we can win this war, and return to the peaceful and prosperous life that we all desire.
