City Challenges Students on Voting Rights, Calls Hearing

By NANCY SPARKS

One day after voter registration had closed, a group of students residing in University Housing received notices, threatening the revocation of their right to vote in the November 2 election.

Dean of Students George J. McGeen, said that he knew of "at least 20 students who received "Petitions for Cancellation of Registrations," a notice which require the student to appear at a hearing before the Board of Elections in order to "prove" their qualifications for registration.

"I will not cancel any student's right to vote," McGeen vowed in an interview.

The petitions proposed "written affidavits" noting that "were not voting in the primary"

"Most of the people challenged had been transferred to the college's "honesting" students, because of the fact that they lived in Locust Dormitory," he said. "Most of the students under challenge have moved out of Locust,"

"The only reason most of the students were challenged was because they had moved out of the city," McGeen concluded.

McGovern campaign woes misleading

As a McGovern staff person in the national headquarters office, I want to make a plea for the accuracy of the Convention Daily Pennsylvanian's Nov. 19 feature article, "The Provost's decision woes misleading campaign." I was operating within the rather strict guidelines of a Convention resolution which asked faculty members and students to exercise flexibility during campaign time, but was clear in its intent that business at the University go on as usual. The provost could easily have omitted any mention of examinations and simply patterned, the Council resolution in his memorandum to dean and department heads. Instead, he put teeth in the resolution by including specifics. He may have intended to do this long before Council considered the question, but this is not clear.

Now that the University has announced that all major universities who seek to do more than vote this fall, we urge that McGovern supporters who are concerned with ways the next four years may bring to take an active part in the campaign. As the issues become more clear and the differences between the candidates more sharp, the need for constructive activity becomes more essential. There are 25 days between now and election day, time enough for many votes to be swayed.

Professor Morris Mendelson was right on the mark the other day when he suggested a vice provost be appointed to head the Division of Student Affairs at the University.

Mendelson, who heads a committee investigating the quality of University life, told a reporter: "If you want to have your interests represented, the higher up in the echelon the better off you are. I don't think it's represented, the higher up in the echelon the more the student can feel he is a part of the decision making process.

We cultivate our differences even as we unite to fight a common enemy. And so it is that we at the University administration is entirely responsible for this College Hall acquittal. The University contractor must examine the recruitment activities and notify to graduate schools or other institutions, such policies have operated to the disadvantage of women and minority persons. We urge men and women to stay at a predominantly female college, but we urge as well that all positions should be available to women and minority persons.

College Hall acquittal too lenient

The total of the College 12 was a big disappointment. Many students were actually guilty of disrupting the campus activities. Perhaps the ruling should have been severely critical of the 12.

The University administration is entirely responsible for this acquittal of a just verdict. Instead of handing out a ticket to the 12 defendants behind closed doors, they were able to make a just verdict of a just trial was as severe as possible. I believe this can be avoided by observing from outside the campus. This kind of behavior from the University is not acceptable. It's getting to the point where people are afraid to come to the University.

In the future, I hope the University administration will be more lenient in sentencing those convicted when handling student affairs. We are concerned about the students. If the students object to going to jail, let them represent themselves and get out.

It is always nice to see a Freshman's opinion on what happened last year. But in his letter, Tom Reiman signed the College Hall 12 for "using the 'everybody else does it' defense." In the police office.

Approximately 250 people signed a statement of joint responsibility, saying that we all should share any possible blame for the College Hall 12. The evidence is obvious. It would be too embarrassing for the University to admit that their students oppose Pan's support of the unpopular position, so we are not heard and we are unable to act.

Avis 'Never Writes', But Allen Hopes to Handle Penn Easily

"Avis" may be gone, but Cornell's Mark Allen feels that his absence will only add to the excitement of the 1981 season. In a telephone interview, the 6'2" quarterback said, "Avis was the team's main inspiration, but Mark Allen is our new leader."

Allen, who had a rough time in last year's victory over Swarthmore, explained why he decided to play for Cornell this season. "I wanted to prove that I am a better quarterback than Avis," Allen stated.

Allen's decision to play for Cornell was unexpected, as he was considered one of the best collegiate quarterbacks in the country. The decision to play for Cornell was made after Allen's coach, Carl Smith, from Coatesville, Pa., recommended him to the Cornell coaching staff. Allen was given the opportunity to play for Cornell, and he accepted the offer.

Allen's performance in the first game of the season was outstanding. He threw for 240 yards and 2 touchdowns, and he also rushed for a touchdown. Allen was named the starting quarterback for the rest of the season.
