Kissinger Flies Home; Accord Rumored Near

By United Press International

SAIGON, April 5—President Nixon Monday ended five days of talks with Premier Phan Van Khong and flew back to Washington to report to President Thieu of Vietnam made “progress” but that talks were "unsolved—mainly President Thieu’s side retaining the area they now occupied before the Sino-Vietnamese fighting in February.

Some Vietnamese government sources said Thieu had "principals" on a peace but the enemies and foreign talks were necessary. Thieu has made it clear in the past that he will not only oppose a result in the region but will resist any attempt at any kind of control.

There have been no official statements from the United States or France since the Sino-Vietnamese talks began on March 21.

"I’m not going to say anything," Kham Phouma, special envoy of the U.S. Government, told an Associated Press reporter here at the end of his second trip back to Washington to report to President Nixon Monday., which is 5:15 P.M. and proceeded to the Blue House.

President Nixon’s special envoy boarded the blue and white special plane that was to leave for Hanoi here at 7:15 P.M. in the hope of working out a peace plan for Indochina before the end of the week.

It is generally agreed that the United States and France are not planning to withdraw before the end of the week and would take time to work out a peace agreement.

The negotiations in Paris and conditions for a victory of the Democratic forces in Saigon, are being held秘密, are to be used to contain the American forces that basic issues remain unresolved, and it is expected that the negotiators will refuse to accept a coalition government in Vietnam.

McGovern Welcomed by Veterans in Tour of Philadelphia Naval Hospital

By LEE LEBINE

Saigon (UP)—President Thieu, the president of the Saigon government, Monday welcomed American veterans who returned to Vietnam to see the progress made in the negotiations here.

McGovern arrived in Philadelphia at 3:00 P.M. and proceeded to the hospital, where he was greeted by 400 American veterans of the Vietnam war, who were present to witness the hospital tour.

"We are here to help the veterans who served in Vietnam," one of them said. "We have seen the progress made in the negotiations, and we are happy to witness the hospital tour.

Walnut Street Merchants Plan To Contest Eviction Notices

By MICHAEL SILVER

The six merchants on the 420 block of Walnut Street who lost their rightful stores to the University were informed by the city hall that they had to leave within 30 days.

The notices were issued by the city hall, which has planned to demolish the buildings. The merchants are trying to appeal to the court to prevent the demolition.

Loss of Funds Causes Slavic Language Cuts

By MARGIE SAMPSON

Anticipating a loss of federal funding for the current academic year, the Graduate Department of Slavic Languages has eliminated several courses in marginal languages and eliminated a faculty position in foreign language training.

The reduction has been necessary due to the loss of federal funding for the current academic year. The department has worked out a new financial plan for the Slavic language program, which will permit the department to maintain its existing level of funding for the current academic year.

The new financial guidelines will permit the department to maintain its existing level of funding for the current academic year and will enable the department to maintain its existing level of funding for the current academic year.

Hospital Grass Patch Paved Despite Protests

By CLIFF GOODMAN

Dr. Robert Johnston, a 44-year-old former University hospital employee, led a protest march of hospital workers who are demanding the paving of the grass patch in front of the hospital.

The hospital personnel, who are members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFL-CIO), are demanding the paving of the grass patch in front of the hospital.

News in Brief

Nixon Tours Suburban N.Y.

By United Press International

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — President Nixon motored through New York's west-end suburbs Monday urging homeowners and housewives to "stand up to the big spenders" in the power to hold down prices and taxes.

Several hundred thousand persons, by police estimate, turned out as the President made a stop at a suburban residence in the Republican Watchtower County.

Although Nixon said his appeal was a "package deal," hundreds of signs along the way proclaimed that the Vietnam war was not much in the minds of many voters.

"A vote for Nixon is a vote for peace," and "Nixon and the Democrats will win," were some of the signs. Nixon said, "Nixon and the Republicans will win," and "Nixon and the Republicans will win.

The President's day holiday and beautiful autumn weather swelled the crowds as school children risked injury chasing the President's slow 50-mile motorcade route in his low-key campaign at the 50-mile drive a festive air.

Letters to the editor

Don Juan review

I was truly amazed when I read Professor Charles Read's letter in the Oct. 13 issue of The Daily Pennsylvanian.

For many students, making the jump from freshman English to upperclassmen level English can be daunting. But Professor Read's letter simply seems to suggest that he is preposterously treating his students as if they were dummies. The word "Don Juan" is not a reference to sex or oral sex; it is the name of a character in Miguel de Cervantes' famous novel, "Don Quixote." Professor Read states that he has been teaching the play for years and that his students have always liked it. However, he has not explained what made him change his mind about the play. He seems to be suggesting that his students have not been able to understand the play, but he does not offer any evidence to support this claim.

I am a student at the University of Pennsylvania, and I must say that I have never had a problem understanding Professor Read's lectures. In fact, I have always found them to be insightful and thought-provoking. I believe that Professor Read's experiences as a teacher are not representative of all professors at the University.

Fiske should not consider himself to be the only person who has taught the play in the past. Many other professors have taught it successfully, with both literature and theatre majors.

I am not writing this letter to attack Professor Read, but rather to express my concern about the way he is teaching the play. As a student, I believe that it is important for professors to be open to feedback from their students, especially when it comes to issues of content and method.

I hope that Professor Read will consider my comments and take them into account when planning future courses.

Don Juan review

I recently had the opportunity to read the play "Don Juan" by Moliere, and I must say that it was a delightful experience. The characters were well-drawn, and the dialogue was witty and engaging. Overall, I would give the play an A+. I hope that other students will have the chance to experience this classic work of literature.

Don Juan review

I completely agree with Professor Read's letter. I have always enjoyed teaching the play "Don Juan" to my students, and I believe that it is an excellent introduction to 17th-century French drama. The characters are well-developed, and the themes are relevant to modern society. I would recommend this play to anyone interested in learning more about Moliere and the French theatre.

Options for majors in English

By Mark Malloni

The English major may find themselves on the Big Eight List, but in the race for the best major, let's not forget the majors that are low key. For many students, the English major is a safe choice because it's relatively easy to understand the concepts and principles involved. However, for many students, the English major is a difficult choice because it requires a lot of critical thinking, analysis, and synthesis. I believe that an English major should have a solid understanding of the principles of grammar, syntax, and semantics, and should be able to write clearly and effectively. In addition, students should be able to read critically, analyze texts, and synthesize information from various sources.

By Robert S. Kahn

I was recently invited to appear before the Subcommittee on the Arts and Humanities of the Joint Subcommittee of Faculty and Student Activities. I was asked to speak about the role of the English major in the arts and humanities. I explained that the English major is an important tool for understanding the arts and humanities, and that it provides a foundation for further study in these fields.

I also discussed the importance of the arts and humanities in our society. I believe that the arts and humanities are important because they provide a means of self-expression, influencing others, and promoting social justice. In addition, the arts and humanities can help us to understand the complex issues that we face in our society.

I hope that my appearance before the Subcommittee will help to raise awareness of the importance of the English major in the arts and humanities.

Working out

I recently had the opportunity to work out at the University's new fitness center. I was impressed with the selection of equipment and the size of the center. I hope that other students will take advantage of this new resource.

By Peter Jacobus

The fitness center is a great resource for students who want to improve their physical fitness. I have been regular at the center for several weeks now, and I have seen a significant improvement in my strength and endurance.

I encourage other students to use the fitness center regularly. It is a great way to stay in shape and to meet new people.

But Johnstone found that the area had already been paved by Saturday morning. Later that day, he also expressed his sentiment to Dr. Robert Lipschitz, vice-president for medical affairs.

Johnstone said that after dusk on the Friday after the lot was opened to the public, he told him that he knew the secret of the project and that he was going to have his own family to the Bryn Mawr Hospital.

Johnstone said "many very upset people," after returning to the "operating room area" on Friday night, expressed their sentiment to Dr. Richard Bitner, associate dean. According to the report, "Students also live there. Enf. Surgery was called, the emergency conference and fully acceptable to the President."

"I agree that all 20 parking lots help, but it is insufficient in terms of the department of the hospital," Johnstone summarized his position. "I do not know if 20 parking spots help, but it is insufficient in terms of the department of the hospital."

"The University has not increased its use for this purpose, but the present condition and subsequent condition is the same," he said. "The University has decided to build to the best advantage of the property and to carry out the plan."
