Sisterly Gives $13 Million
By BOB BROCH
Governor Milton Shapp signed a $13 million state appropriation bill on Tuesday in the Pennsylvania State Capitol. The bill appropriates $1,914,000 for the University in the 1973-74 fiscal year.

The legislation is the first of its kind for the University, since the state appropriated $1,914,000 for the University in the 1973-74 fiscal year. It appropriates $1,914,000 for the University's general fund and $2,914,000 for the Medical School.

The legislation was introduced at the University by the House and Senate. The House of Representatives passed the bill by a vote of 114-17, and the Senate passed it by a vote of 27-10.

Of the $13 million appropriation, $9 million is for the University's general fund, and $4 million is for the Medical School. The bill also includes $5 million for the construction of a new medical school building.

The legislation includes a provision that the University must submit a plan for the construction of a new medical school building to the state legislature by the end of the fiscal year.

On the Ballot

First in a series on candidates on the ballot in the University environment. This year's article discusses the two candidates for the state legislature, the Democratic candidates for the governor and lieutenant governor, the candidates for the state house, and the candidates for the state senate.

Although the contest between Michael Nixon and Robert Garb, Republican, is the most closely contested, the contest between the incumbent, Raymond Garb, and the Democratic candidate, John B. Smith, is also closely watched.

With the exception of Michael Nixon and Robert Garb, the other Democratic candidates for the state legislature include, in alphabetical order, Raymond Garb, John B. Smith, and John J. B. Smith. These candidates are also running for the state house and state senate.

John B. Smith, a professor of political science at the University, is the Democratic candidate for the state house. He has served as a state senator since 1971, and was formerly a state representative from 1967 to 1971.

The Democratic candidates for the state senate include, in alphabetical order, William D. Miller, a professor of political science at the University, and Robert Garb, a retired state senator who served from 1967 to 1971.

The contest between Michael Nixon and Robert Garb is closely watched because the incumbent, Raymond Garb, is seeking re-election. The Republican candidate, Michael Nixon, is seeking his first term in the state legislature.

The contest between the Democratic candidates is closely watched because John B. Smith has been a state senator for the past six years, and John J. B. Smith has been a state representative for the past four years.

John J. B. Smith's campaign has been the most visible, with a series of television advertisements and a strong ground game. Michael Nixon has also been active, with a series of television advertisements and a strong ground game.

John B. Smith has been endorsed by the state AFL-CIO, the state Teachers Association, and several local labor organizations.

Michael Nixon has been endorsed by the state Chamber of Commerce, the state Manufacturers Association, and several local business organizations.

Zinni Challenging Berson for Assembly

Once again, Zinni is arguing the value of the tax. Berson has sponsored legislation to freeze state aid to higher education and has proposed to implement an additional layer of "fair" taxation. The legislation is intended to ensure that the state finances higher education fairly and to protect the students from the excesses of "unfair" taxation.

The two challenges are a major issue. Zinni has called for a change in higher education policy to more fairly distribute funds. Berson has called for a change in higher education policy to more accurately reflect the interests of the students. The two challenges are a major issue.

Overstating the Case

by Y. MILES

Eric Force is the author of transactional analysis, a form of ego psychology治疗. His book The Dream and the Deal: The Federal Writers Project, 1935-1943 is praised for its detailed and valuable content. The book provides a thorough analysis of the project and its impact on American literature.

Mask and Wig: Cabaret Extravaganza and Good Clean Fun

by Julia Steele

A Mask and Wig fall show is a notoriously even if only because the twin-bred group has not put together a show for quite a while. So they decided to go all out and create a show that would be both entertaining and educational. The result is a show that is guaranteed to please even the most discerning audience.

HASK AND WIGGERS (from left) Mitch Schach, Bob Ney, Fred Buescher, and Chris Lova make up the group that will present Mask and Wig show this weekend. The show will be held at the university theater on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m.

The initial problems facing the FWP were awesome. Everyone knew the primary purpose of the Project was to keep thousands of writers from starving.

Abing was captivated by the prospect of sharing his talent and the other accidently committed by him with a dead rat which bounded between two pictures of a rat and as it struggled to escape the rat was high up in the air and the other writers. Abing was responsible for preparing the "material暂定" for publication.

Through this edict, the first task for the Project was to determine what constituted "fractional" (what we would say "abridged") literature. The majority of the state agencies, in fact, had preferred to make the decision themselves. Many administrators, however, were afraid that by publishing such works they would give the impression that the Project was not an essential public service. In the end, the decision was made to distribute the works only in manuscript form, and the support of 75% of the state agencies was obtained. The WPA, which was responsible for the administration of the Project in each state, was enjoined to keep one-third to one-half of the writers on the Project by Harry Hopkins, head of the Federal Employment Service.

By EVAN SARZIN

By January 1937, the Federal Writers Project had distributed over 500,000 copies of its publications. The Project was becoming a major force in American culture, with its diverse talents, its innovative projects, and its critical role in the development of the American literary scene.
The presidential election

The 1972 presidential campaign has become more than a simple race for political office; the ballot Tuesday will offer the electorate a clear-cut choice between two political philosophies. One, practiced for the past four years by Richard Nixon, relies upon an administrative service to the needs of the powerful, a government blind to civil liberties, deaf to reasoned criticism and oblivious to the real moral and social problems this country faces.

The other, put forward by George McGovern, would have an administration responsible to the needs of all as a whole. A government set on a human basis which would redirect the nation's goals and responsibilities, both here and abroad.

The Daily Pennsylvanian supports Sen. George McGovern for President because we feel he has lived during the campaign as aientos of a new country, a means of rebuilding in commitment to democracy and re-establishing the basic principles upon which it was created.

We support Sen. McGovern because this country cannot afford four more years of a man who is intent on appealing to the worst elements of this society and who is willing to exaggerate people's legitimate concerns and fears in order to keep them from taking part in the American electorate.

Mr. Nixon has not shown during his career that he has even the slightest understanding of the human value system which could redirect the nation as a whole and a government established by the Constitution as a more perfect union.

We support Sen. McGovern because this country needs a leader who can provide a sense of what we are doing as a nation.

Finally, Richard Nixon and his deputy Melvin Laird have fostered a mystique of the irrelevancy of Indochina, killed, made or managed homefront policies which are as much as, or even more than, the $14,000 Americans killed in the war Mr. Nixon religiously promised to end. The end of the war is a far cry from our home. It comes little late, however, for the millions victimized by this administration's war policies.

We feel Sen. McGovern offers a clear alternative which does not abrogate the basic tenets of the Nixon administration, Critics point out that many of Sen. McGovern's proposals, such as his $1,000 welfare plan, were ill-conceived. We believe that the main criticism of Sen. McGovern's policies should be the outlandish programs and if some of them are unworkable, one only has to look at the conditions, circumstances, be confused with the cautious policies Mr. Nixon has pursued. If Sen. McGovern's decision to air his proposals publicly is in stark contrast to Mr. Nixon's closed-door system of administration.

Sen. McGovern, in the course of his campaign, has become a formidable force on the national political scene. He has so sound the people's enthusiasm for his campaign and his ideas that he is apparently willing to accept corruption and even legalities of the American political system.

Richard Nixon deserves to be defeated.

Unfortunately, however, Sen. McGovern's belief that the government cannot operate in an atmosphere of corruption and that the country has yet to realize its full potential as a democracy. We feel Sen. McGovern's proposals, if adopted, would help make realistic attempts to address the problems of corruption and neglect.

The headlines already assure us of a victory for Sen. McGovern. The American administration has tried to revise the very core of American democracy. The battle lines have already been drawn and a clear choice lies ahead for the American electorate. The voting is at the ballot box, and we believe that沿 the choice of Sen. McGovern will be made.

The problem of peace

By Stefan Ostrach

If you are anxious to stop the bombs and finally listen to reason. Certainly, the time has come to find a way to guarantee the safety of all the people in this area. Anyhow, the peace is not good for the people who are in conflict for over 30 years. It will be easier for the people who are in conflict to find a solution to the problem.

The military policies of the DRV and the DRV are weak. They have not fired or exited any of the bases during the war. They have not taken any action to guarantee the safety of all the people in this area. Anyhow, the peace is not good for the people who are in conflict for over 30 years. It will be easier for the people who are in conflict to find a solution to the problem.

McGovern

The most important group in the American electorate is the young and moderate moderates, and many more of these people will投反对票 to the American electorate.

The Vietnam issue has been dead for some time. The peace agreement is the only way to guarantee the safety of all the people in this area. Anyhow, the peace is not good for the people who are in conflict for over 30 years. It will be easier for the people who are in conflict to find a solution to the problem.

The trouble is, he (Ladd) knows he'll probably lose, but he wants to see how much he can get before he leaves office and before the flowers of his career become the suicide. And Ladd is certain to go down in flames.

The trouble here is that Ladd doesn't want to lose. He wants to see how much he can get before he leaves office and before the flowers of his career become the suicide. And Ladd is certain to go down in flames.

U. Counseling Offers Varied Services

This is part of a series on counseling services at the University.

Dr. ANNETTE LEVINSON

For many University students, the idea of seeking counseling is a novel concept. At times when a student is feeling confused about life or has problems with a variety of personal or academic life, counseling may be a viable solution.

Counseling does not make decisions for students or provide easy solutions to their problems. Instead, it helps students to clarify the nature of their problems and to find their own solutions. Counseling is a supportive relationship that helps students explore options and make decisions.

It is a confidential and professional relationship, where students can express their feelings and concerns without fear of judgment. Counseling is not just about problems; it is also about personal growth and development.

Students who come for counseling services may be referred there from residence counselors, family members, or teachers. Once they have spoken with a counselor, however, the "curiosity gap" (the gap between the student and the academic counselor) may close. Counseling services are available to all students, without any cost.

The counseling services are located on the third floor of Kissenlohr Hall, 3812 Walnut St. The University Counseling Service is open Monday to Friday, 8:30 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. The counselors can be reached at 726-2212.

Soccer Means More Than A Warm Bench to Splinter Set

By TED METZGER

The bench is warm, there's no hard fighting but there is a great deal of promise. The Splinter Set, the fringe players on the Penn varsity soccer team, are playing a larger role in practice and possibly in games. They aren't going to take the starting jobs from the seniors but they are learning and gaining experience.

One of the Splinter Set players, Jeff Winokur, senior fullback, has been watching his teammates all year and trying to give the starters a push.

"I think I've improved here and it's important to the team to perhaps see a few minutes of unheralded denizens of the soccer offense because he was afraid that two touchdowns last Saturday led them to believe that they involve themselves in so many games that they aren't going to get much fame or recognition. "Those guys are our Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside," he said, "but they aren't going to get much fame or recognition." They are the scoring for the Splinter Set.

Dragons Psyched For Today's Game

Forty-sixed and Poweromega in a long way from Cambridge, the Penn varsity soccer team (4-1) will face a Tufts team that will certainly be a test for the Quakers. Penn's six-sixed opponent will be looking to get their first conference win of the season and possibly their first win of the season.
