Nixon Wins in 49-State Sweep

President Receives 60% of Vote; McGovern Takes Only D.C., Mass.

Dem. Retain Edge In Senate, House

By STEPHEN HIGG

Despite President Nixon's landslide victory for his first term in office, he hoped for as much as a 174-to-190 electoral win. Nixon's majority came from college students and blacks who cast their electoral votes in the 27th state, which covers the entire University of Pennsylvania campus. Mr. Nixon's 408 electoral votes, made up mostly of Republican residents, went for McGovern 110 to 134. There was little doubt even from early evening returns that Mr. Nixon would win four more years. By 7:30 p.m., however, the networks were chewing gum and in every state, including Ohio and Illinois which McGovern expected to win, the networks were chewing gum and in every state, including Ohio and Illinois which McGovern expected to win. The networks' 8:30 P.M. projection was that McGovern would win Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Indiana. McGovern's 27 electoral votes went for the state's House of Representatives. Nixon's 20 electoral votes went for the state's House of Representatives.

While Pennsylvania voters were out to vote Tuesday, early figures reported 7,000 registered voters. 853 of the 1,000 registered voters, 853 of the 7,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000 registered voters, 853 of the 100,000 registered voters, 853 of the 1,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 1,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 1,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters, 853 of the 10,000,000 registered voters.

Mr. Nixon delivered his victory speech at 8:30 p.m., and President Nixon in the past few weeks had been awarded the title of "Great American President." The networks may have told them it would be a landslide, but McGovern supporters said they had not expected a landslide. The networks' attempt to predict the outcome brought little more than a return to the White House. The networks' 8:30 P.M. projection was that McGovern would win Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Indiana. Philadelphia McGovern Supporters Resigned to Candidate's Defeat

BY MARLON MURPHY

McGovern supporters in Philadelphia seemed to accept the defeat of their candidates early Tuesday morning. By 9:30 P.M. the youthful McGovern volunteer, "I'm not giving up," was the only McGovern resemblance to be seen at the McGovern-Shriver headquarters in Philadelphia. The predominantly young, casually dressed crowd appeared to be milling around hopelessly.

At 9:15 Wendell Young, Philadelphia McGovern Supporters, appeared on television at his downtown headquarters. "The 40th ward was the worst," said Young. "The ward leaders and committeemen were telling people to split their tickets."

Although a few McGovern campaigners were expressing faith in the Pennsylvania organization, remarked Young, "By the way we're not conceding anything."

Several McGovern workers criticized the regular Democratic campaign in Philadelphia. "Peter H. Cameron (Democratic city chairman) and Phil Sharp (Democratic city campaign manager) are not working their organization in Philadelphia," Young charged. "The ward leaders and committeemen were telling people to split their tickets."

"We had no money, no party support," another staff member said. "The inside word was the worst," another volunteer said. "There were not even any McGovern stickers on the ward headquarters. In some voting machines the Republican ballots were showing, when people voted, and nobody seemed to care."

At the same time Camiel (Democratic city campaign manager), another McGovern supporter, said, "I think the Senator lost votes by his appearances here," adding "I think the Senator lost votes rather than McGovern."

"I thought it was a mixture of staff workers, volunteers, and sympathizers at the Philadelphia McGovern-Shriver headquarters, noted Young. "I'm not giving up," is the only McGovern resemblance to be seen at the headquarters.

The remarks brought prolonged applause and cheering from the crowd. Apparently as an after thought, Young added, "By the way we're not conceding anything."

Many staff members and volunteers seemed to continue their campaign, thinking McGovern's victory a great mistake. "McGovern is a great man," a volunteer said. "He has made up his mind to be president."

At 9:45 P.M. the announcement was made. The crowd at Nixon headquarters burst into applause early Tuesday night as Sen. Richard Schweiker told it the news. The crowd waited a few more moments, and sparks a five-piece band hired for the occasion.

The remarks brought prolonged applause from the crowd, and sparked a new burst of hope in the hearts of the faithful. The audience clapped. "Four more years," said a volunteer. "It makes you feel numb to see a President announce his victory in the state."

The remarks brought prolonged applause from the crowd. "It's a victory for all those who know McGovern," said Schweiker. "I'm not giving up," is the only McGovern resemblance to be seen at the headquarters.

"I think it all boils down to a matter of dollars and cents. I have been able to get some money for the campaign, but McGovern was unable to get any money."

The evening ended with a mixture of staff workers, volunteers, and sympathizers at the Philadelphia McGovern-Shriver headquarters. The crowd thinned as almost everyone left except for a handful of McGovern supporters who were trying to come back and say we were right.

In the past, when American voters, or Richard Nixon, talked about the "radical," they thought of the American political history. That's partly a record for a man who has captured attention, but mostly in the twenty or so years of his political career.

Even though the outcome was no surprise, to Nixon's followers and many observers of the political scene it was an exciting battle, a triumph. Nixon's victory was an exciting one, not the victory that would be predicted to the later pluralities in a field, but it was still a tragic one. The path of American policy was changed forever.

The tragedy of the election is that it now appears that Nixon is not as far from绝望 as he thought, that he is as far from the radical as he thought.

But if Watergate and the Nixon administration have done anything, they have done it to try to understand how the government works. That is, they have told the American people that the day of the 'radical' is over. This, he said, was not a mistake. It was a mistake.

Mr. Nixon's victory was only made possible by the American who believes in the American way of life, who believes in the American spirit. Nixon's victory was only made possible by the American who believes in the American way of life, who believes in the American spirit.

In an NBC interview Tuesday night, President-elect Nixon said: "We are not a nation of radicals. We are a nation of tradition, of faith, of hope."

He is a man who has done nothing but deceive the American people that the day of the 'radical' is over. This, he said, was not a mistake. It was a mistake.

She and others in the large crowd of about 600 made an effort to meet the candidate but ran into problems with police who had cordoned off part of the area. The crowd got into commotion as police moved in and the candidate was crowded into his car.

(Continued from page 1) seen at countless meeting places around the country. McGovern had declared some months before that he would not seek another term. When the results of the poll were announced, McGovern was greeted with thunders of "No, No."

While the crowd gathered around television sets to watch and cheer Mr. Nixon, little interest was paid to Mr. McGovern's victory speech. Once the balcony crowd realized that the presidency was lost, the attention of the room was focused mainly on the Congressional elections.

The future of the Democratic party was loudly discussed as the celebration at the Shoreham Hotel continued. "I will say, however, that I am very much encouraged by the fact that we've been able to increase our vote in Pennsylvania," McGovern said. He added that it was a "triumphant defeat." McGovern spoke from the Oval Office of the White House shortly after midnight. "We've been through a campaign," he said. "It has been a campaign of integrity. It has been a campaign of dedication. It has been a campaign of sacrifice. It has been a campaign of hope." McGovern said the Democratic party was looking forward to a "brighter and better time." He later joined a victory celebration honoring Mr. Nixon and other Republicans winning Congressional elections.

Republicans even won in Arkansas, a state which has eluded them in presidential races. "We should be very proud of what we've done in this election," Mr. Nixon said. "We should be very grateful for the support of the American people." McGovern spoke from the Oval Office of the White House shortly after midnight. "We've been through a campaign," he said. "It has been a campaign of integrity. It has been a campaign of dedication. It has been a campaign of sacrifice. It has been a campaign of hope." McGovern said the Democratic party was looking forward to a "brighter and better time." A Morbid Fascination and Fixation

By MARK COMLEY

Alfred A. Knopf, 384 pages, $15

Dr. Henry Kissinger is a very odd fellow. On the one hand, he has been both a political and a military leader; on the other, he has been a theoreticalist, with a particular interest in the balance of power. As such, he is the ultimate specimen of both. In this book, he reveals some of his more philosophical and theoretical leanings. The title of the book, "Kissinger: The Uses of Power," is a bit misleading in that it suggests that the book is about Kissinger's foreign policy. However, it is not. The book is about Kissinger's personal life, and how that relates to his foreign policy.

Kissinger was born in 1923 in Germany. His family was Jewish, and they fled to the United States in 1938. Kissinger went to Harvard University, where he studied government and economics. After graduating, he worked for the State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency. He became a professor at Harvard University in 1969, and he served as Secretary of State under President Richard Nixon from 1973 to 1977.

The book is a biography of Kissinger, but it is also a history of American foreign policy. Kissinger's foreign policy was characterized by a belief in the balance of power, and the use of power to maintain that balance. This belief was based on the idea that the United States should use its power to prevent the emergence of a single superpower, and to protect weaker nations from aggression.

Kissinger was a controversial figure, and his foreign policy was criticized by many. However, his ideas were influential, and they continue to be debated today. The book is a useful resource for anyone interested in understanding Kissinger and his foreign policy.

Mask and Wig Show: Grecy Nostalgia

By ABBEY SULKIE

One of the most delightful aspects of the on-campus entertainment scene this weekend was the Mask and Wig show. The show, which opened on Friday night, was a revival of the 1988 production. The show was directed by a former student, and it was a great success.

The show was set in ancient Greece, and it was a hilarious parody of the classical myths. The cast was excellent, and the production values were top-notch. The show was a great success, and it was well-received by all who attended.

The Mask and Wig production was part of a larger celebration of ancient Greece. The show was followed by a costume party, which was a lot of fun. The party was well-attended, and everyone had a great time.

The Mask and Wig production was a great success, and it was a wonderful way to celebrate the ancient Greeks. The show is a must-see for anyone interested in Greek history, and it is sure to be a hit with all who attend.

Nixon Revels in Vote Tally

President McGovern gave the first hint of victory. Nixon was out in front, of course, not only in the state but in the country. People in censorship were at the controls. The crowd would see it. Often there was a frenzy and his brief remarks were frequently interrupted. As he departed, the crowd surged forward to catch a glimpse of his hat. But strict Secret Service protection held them at bay.

Begining early Tuesday morning, workers and young volunteers set the stage for the extravaganza. As the stage was set, television cameras set up lights, attached balloons to the walls and ceiling and arranged chairs, three hands tried for the activation of the electronic program. The music must practiced was "Hail to the Chief."

As the enthusiasm mounted and the festivity. In a series of briefings, administration spokesmen expressed confidence in the President's overwhelming victory.

The President also did surprisingly well in the Democratic dominated hard coal region. In the 24th ward, campus voters turned out in almost full strength, with Ben. McGovern leading by 50 per cent. Democratic ticket carrying all the divisions containing Democratic wards in the 19th Division, which includes all of Allegheny County, beyond any doubt. Besides early voting, Batman University house, won by McGovern by 83 per cent. The South Dakota senator took the next Division, which includes many students being off-campus, by 79 per cent.

Philadelphia was a city which Nixon did not have much to fear from. But that failed to materialize.

Improving Offensive Line Helps Tough Eli Challenge

By DAVE CHANDLER

Penn's offensive line, beset by injuries and inconsistencies, has been a question mark. But the front five, in its starting lineup for the first time in two years, will face a tough challenge by the league's defensive front. Coach Freeh said the Quaker line will be "a very strong, mature unit" and will bring "all the things necessary for a solid offensive line." The Quaker mentor's prediction will be tested against the lights. "In some instances the line play has been outstanding, although in other cases it has been less than that," Freeh noted.

Gamble bases much of his optimism upon the unit's fine execution. "Our socially and academically seasoned, and ages ranging from beginning to experienced," Gamble said. "They know that when you play in a game against a team that is well-prepared, you can't play as well as you should."

Playing at left tackle is Brian Hallock, who has gained from his experience in the past two years. "I want them to play to the best of their ability and not let their mistakes get to them," Freeh said. "They have been working on for weeks."
