Superblock Fire Causes Minor Damage Friday
By MITCHELL BERGER
A fire took place on the seventh floor of High Rise South Friday night causing no serious damage. Smoke was heavy enough to exceed the maximum amount allowed by building codes, but was not considered a fire hazard.

The fire, which started in a refrigerator, was out before it could spread. The smoke was cleared out of the building by a 7,000-cubic foot fan. Mike Miles, a member of the seventh floor, attempted to put out the fire with a fire extinguisher, but could not.

Fetuses to Fractures at Downtown Mutter Medical Museum

Chavez Leads Boycott

From now on into the future, the strikes themselves will serve a different purpose.

Despite claims by both the California and national farm labor unions that the two-tier system of wage is divided among the workers, the two-tier system, however, has been anything but the norm. The two-tier system, in which a group of workers receive a lower wage than another group, is widely considered to be unfair and exploitative. It is often used as a means of exploiting workers and maintaining a low-wage workforce.

The Mutter Museum contains a total of 97,709 objects, making it one of the largest and most diverse medical collections in the world. The Museum's exhibits are electric but offer a fascinating glimpse into the human body, past and present. The exhibits are designed to educate and inspire, reminding us of the complexity and beauty of the human form.

Oldenburg

In addition, the displays often feature rare medical devices, such as the Venturi mask and the Venturi ventilator, which were used to treat patients suffering from respiratory problems in the past. The exhibits also include a number of medical instruments and tools, such as the surgical instruments used by Dr. John Hunter and the medical equipment used by Dr. Benjamin Rush.

The Mutter Museum is located at 19th Street and Spruce Street in Philadelphia, and is open to the public every day except Christmas and New Year's Day. It is a must-see for anyone interested in the history of medicine and the human body.
Tuition increase

The proposed tuition increase announced last week is, quite simply, a boondoggle for disaster. Students must realize that this kind of tuition increase is unacceptable and the number of angry parents here this weekend attest to their dissatisfaction also. For the University to plan another increase in the face of such opposition is foolish. For years everyone has been saying that the next increase would finally pull the rug out from the student body and the University appears bent on giving this chance to come true.

It is encouraging that the University appears to have taken some very sensible steps toward controlling costs. This is little instruction, however, for looking closely to see the fact that in years past no such planning took place. Nor should the boost to an increase in personal disposable income be used as a rationale. The fact is that tuition is rising faster than income in the last several years and to arbitrarily base assigning the relationship the year is a little like offering to fight a fair fight where you already know the puncher.

It is disturbing to note that early drafts of the guidelines used to determine the increase (that tuition was a last resort), and by no means as a result of the administration's decision to impose an enormous pile of fat just waiting to be cut. It makes clear that the increase can be taken, not for granted.

There are two developments we would encourage the University community to watch with a close eye. The Budget Committee has yet to consider financial aid, though well-placed sources have indicated the budget is not likely to be increased substantially. If this is in fact the case, the tuition increase seems foolish beyond belief.

Second, the committee has yet to consider athletic and other non-academic departments. It will be interesting to see whether the committee backs the Bursar's stories about the long-term effects of the budgeting or whether the committee will fulfill athletic demands by manipulating the budget. This is not to say that such a large deficit is being allowed to run up another large deficit, as it was last year. Nevertheless, the University's administration has placed itself under an obligation to its customers of its services. If it is not willing to consider financial aid, though well-placed sources have indicated the budget is not likely to be increased substantially. If this is in fact the case, the tuition increase seems foolish beyond belief.

Letters to the editor

Let us eat cake

The University is facing an increase in tuition. The students are supposed to supply the extra funds, while the students have already worked hard to supply them.

Well, our parents should be more than willing to take this extra financial burden. This increase in the cost of living is just the ticket.

But all that the students have to do is to put aside a few dollars a week in order to pay for this tuition increase. Our parents are willing to pay for this increase, so why can't we do the same?

The administration does not seem to realize the burden that this increase will put on the students and their families. There are many who are not able to pay this increased tuition.

Yes, we understand that the University needs the money to pay for the services that we receive. But what about the students who cannot afford it? What about the students who are already in financial difficulty due to other circumstances?

The University administration does not seem to realize the burden that this increase will put on the students and their families. There are many who are not able to pay this increased tuition.

Columbia coach Frank Navarro said after his team's 41-0 loss "we had a great opportunity to put a scare into Dartmouth. We showed the first 20 minutes that we were capable of beating the team."

Sealed the Big Red's fate and set the tone for the win in the second quarter was the scoreless tie which occurred on a goal by John Straub of the Blue Devils. The Blue Devils tied the game at 0-0 after one quarter of play and then took the lead with a goal by Bob Price in the second quarter. The Lions came back to tie the game at 1-1 with a goal by Bob Price in the fourth quarter. The Lions then won the game with a goal by Bob Price in the fifth quarter.

The Lions (1-0) built up their 1-0 lead in the second quarter on a goal by John Straub, which set the tone for the rest of the game. The Blue Devils (0-1) were unable to score in the second half, allowing the Lions to take control of the game. The Lions continued to score in the third and fourth quarters, increasing their lead to 3-0. The Blue Devils were unable to respond, and the Lions went on to win the game 3-0.

The Lions are now 1-0 on the season, while the Blue Devils are 0-1. The Lions will next face the Pennsylvania Quakers on Saturday, while the Blue Devils will play the University of Rochester on Sunday.
