Post-Truce Viet Fighting Tapers Off

By United Press International

The intensity of fighting in South Vietnam tapered off Tuesday, as the third day of a three-day truce sponsored by the South Vietnamese government ended.

The truce was to be the last one unless a permanent and general truce is agreed to under the terms of the Vietnam peace agreement signed in Paris last Saturday. The agreement provides for a partial and temporary truce starting Friday, March 1.

Military sources reported heavy fighting between the forces of the Gulf of Tonkin and the forces of the United States and South Vietnam. The fighting, however, was not as intense as in previous days.

Despite this, fighting between South Vietnamese and Communist forces showed no signs of abating.

The South Vietnamese government is under pressure to carry out its functions provided for in the Vietnam peace agreement signed last Saturday. The agreement provides for a partial and temporary truce starting Friday, March 1.

Mississippi Senator Stennis Wounded in Hold-Up Attempt

By United Press International

WASHINGTON--Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, was shot Tuesday in a hold-up attempt in New Orleans.

A man named John T. Driscoll, 25, was arrested Tuesday night in connection with the attempted hold-up of Stennis.

Driscoll was described as a white man, 25 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, with a 24-inch waist, and weighing about 170 pounds. He was wearing a dark blue denim jacket, blue jeans, and a white shirt.

Driscoll was arrested after a car chase with police in New Orleans.

President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed Stennis to the Senate Armed Services Committee in 1953. Stennis has served in the Senate since 1946.

Sarah Selph, 25, a representative of the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, told the NAACP executive committee that the group's primary goal is to "help students develop as adults and to help them achieve a positive attitude toward school until the end of the school year." Sarah Selph said her organization is "not a political organization but a students' organization."

Ivy Admissions Officers Report Mixed Luck in Wooing Applicants

By MITCHELL MURGER

..The Princeton- and Yale University admissions offices have reported a rise in the level of applications this year than last year's applications.

Although both Princeton and Yale have reported a rise in the level of applications this year than last year's applications, neither school regards the increase as "significant." Both schools say it does not represent a change in the "quality" of prospective applicants.

President John G. Kennedy, the top executive of the United States, has been the subject of a number of questions in recent days, including whether he really received his medical care at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School.

President Kennedy has been the subject of much public as a result of the schedule change, he said, adding that this publicity has served to make the college more attractive to prospective applicants.

Mr. Stennis was in a car with his wife, Mrs. Stennis, and his driver, when the man approached them.

The man, identified as William R. Johnson, a 35-year-old white man, was armed with a gun.

Humility Key to Mask and Wig Success

By Mark Maniscal (Gay McMichael is the nineteen of the eighty-odd members of the University's Mask and Wig Club who sign their names this way.)

In the main, there is nothing more disappointing than to see the frown that appears on an undergraduate costume when he drops a hat into the cape as he journeys down the stairs.

"Death Takes the Brose," M. W. Bublik's poetic drama, is produced this year by the Uniform Commercial Code (1986), and though it has won much praise, it is not without its detractors. G. T. Smith, a recent graduate of the Mask and Wig Club, observes that the performance "was a bit too polite for my taste."

Eric Goff is the producer, and has won the admiration of the audience for his talent as a director. Goff is a man who is used to handling large groups, and his direction has been praised by critics for its "boffo finales, like his hysterical portrayal of a painting, unpainted, and then burned.

The idea for the biggest box office hit of the season was his own, and he is looking forward to the premiere of "The Boof," his latest production.

McMichael: Don't mention it. And if you decide you like the stuff more than you expected, just remember that you can always come back for more.

Ongoings: And where does the show go from here?

McMichael: The Committee on the Living Theatre proposes a show which will be presented at the University Union. The production will be a free-form improvisation with no ending, with the audience participating in the action. The show will feature a large group supposedly composed of the playwright's characters-a feat in itself for a two person cast.

On the set, McMichael is working on a script for a new production, "Out Cry," which he hopes to have ready for the spring season.

Ongoings: Well, don't you go to the rehearsals? Just keep an eye on things.

McMichael: That's the plan. And if you're very lucky, we may even show you how to finish up the shows with big boffo finales, like my hysterical portrayal of a painting, unpainted, and then burned.

In American society, there are only two groups that are considered comedians: the French and the Americans. The French have a special type of humor called "boffo," which is said to be "hysterical." April 12, 1975, will mark the anniversary of one of the most important films in the history of the Blue Screen. When the coming of Full Frontal, by Mr. Jay Silber, will mark the third anniversary of the film Full Frontal. However, a great deal of controversy has been generated by the showing of this movie. The critics have had mixed opinions. Some have praised the film for its frank depiction of the human condition. Others have condemned it as a cheap attempt at sensationalism.

The film tells the story of a young man who is driven mad by his desire for the female form. He becomes obsessed with the image of the nude woman and decides to devote his life to the exploration of the female body. He travels to different countries and meets with various women, each of whom he finds fascinating.

The film is rated R for sexual content and nudity. It is not suitable for children.

A Generation of Voyeurs

The film was first shown in 1973, and has since gained a cult following. It is considered a classic of its genre, and has been screened at film festivals around the world. It has also been the subject of numerous critical and academic analyses.

The film was directed by Mr. Jay Silber, who is known for his other works in the Blue Screen genre. He has also directed such films as The Full Monty and The Full Moon. His previous film, The Full Moon, was released in 1972 and was also a critical and commercial success.

Critics have praised the film for its boldness and its willingness to tackle difficult subjects. They have also praised the performances of the actors, who are all nude in the film.

However, the film has also been criticized for its explicit content and its supposed exploitation of women. Some have accused the film of objectifying women and using them as mere sexual objects. Others have praised the film for its portrayal of the female body and its willingness to confront the issue of gender.

In conclusion, the film Full Frontal is a controversial work that has sparked much debate. It is a film that challenges traditional notions of gender and sexuality, and that forces viewers to confront their own assumptions and prejudices.

The film is currently available for streaming on various platforms, and is considered a must-see for fans of the Blue Screen genre.

QUAKERS win in a battle of unbeatens.

REVERSE PSYCHOLOGY—Penn freshman Ed Stefanski drives for a reverse lay-up in the yearlings' 77-69 win over Princeton's frosh last night at the Palestra.

"Their depth just wore us down," commented an elated Bill Carazo, who scored 19 points. "It's a great victory for us and a great way to start the season." Stefanski, who scored 16 points, illustrated by the final scoring stats. "Our bench didn't play well, but the way we played. We just lost our composure.

"I force the helpless Tigers to play the perimeter game, the way we want them to play," said Stefanski. "John Berger and Armond Robinson are our best forwards, and I'mabe to guard him to a mere 15 points and five rebounds. "They could have gotten more points," said Carazo. "It's not just so much the fact we lost tonight, it's the way we lost. We realized that if we didn't win it would be a long season. We need in the play-in to play.

"Basketball is a street game and you have to be ready for the team present at the same time to protect the innocent. Sadly enough, Dave Sandier, Jon Ivey, Jim Johnson, Dave Kalz, and freshman Bill Mokin. They just shut them with a short break.

"Tiger head coach Bob Crocker goes out to an 18-point lead with less than two minutes to play. The final margin of eight points is deceiving, since Princeton (3-9) took the opening lead with 20 points against Penn's deep reserves. "Once Penn opened up its lead, Princeton had to press. Forced into a defense, the Tigers regrouped. The Quakers' pattern held back. Jones finished the performance tonight at 7 P.M. when the Class of '23 Rink.

The Tigers, led by goalie Robin Hasbrouck, won 5-4 in overtime. Diaz's 37 saves were second to none. "They could have gotten even more points," said Diaz. "At the beginning of the season I thought we were a very physical, tight defense with John Berger and Dave Kalz.
