Report Details Initial Action in Development Plan

By JIM KAHN

The University administration has been informed that the first step in implementing the 94 recommendations of the Development Commission report by issuing a document of the Development Commission implementing the 94 recommendations (Humphrey Tonkin) has been given the responsibility of implementing the Development Commission report. The report, which calls for the completion of the "initial review process" for each of the 94 recommendations, will be sent to the University Council, the faculty, and the public for review and comment. Some of the recommendations are expected to be adopted as policy. This includes the recommendation that "the administration will begin the review process for each of the 94 recommendations" as soon as possible.

The United Nations, a major international organization, has issued a paper titled "Science and Technology: A Crucial Century?" by Nobel Laureate, who is known for his work in superconductivity. This paper discusses the importance of science and technology in the 21st century, and emphasizes the need for increased investment in these areas.

Scientists Leaving Pure Research, Schriever Says in Annenberg Talk

Schriever explained that the discovery of the electromagnetic field interaction with the earth was not the result of chance, but the result of careful planning and execution. This interaction, Schriever said, "is a major source of phenomena which ultimately led to the development of our current understanding of the universe." He also discussed the importance of education and training in preparing for the future, and emphasized the need for collaboration and cooperation among scientists.

The International Affairs Association will begin this fall-in the University of Pennsylvania Micro-MUN Conference (MUNC) this afternoon with a keynote address by Charles Vann, former UN ambassador to the United Nations.

Yost Will Open Model U.N. Conference

By JOHN MURPHY

The rules for the simulation are basically the same as those for the real United Nations. Participating organizations are expected to prepare budgets, which will be evaluated by the conference secretariat. The conference secretariat will also be responsible for organizing the conference program and for providing guidance to participants.

Armed Youth Breaks into High-Rise South Apartment

Nicholas Constant, director of Harrison House, said that shortly after 5:10 p.m. Friday, four men dressed in black, entered the Harrison House, a high-rise apartment building on High Street. The four men entered the building through an unoccupied area, saying they were federal agents and that they were looking for a room which had been rented to a man who was not a resident of the building.

The four men entered the room, and threatened to use violence if they were not allowed to enter. The four men then took several items of value from the room, and left.

The report indicates that the incident was a serious one, and that the University police are currently investigating the matter. The report also notes that the University administration is considering implementing additional security measures to prevent similar incidents from occurring in the future.

Eight Graduating Students Win Thouron Scholarships

By ANNETTE LEVINE

Eighty students have been chosen to receive Thouron Scholarships in the University of Pennsylvania for the academic year. The scholarships will be awarded to students who have completed at least three years of study at the university.

The University administration announced that the Thouron Scholarships are intended to provide financial assistance to students who have completed at least three years of study at the university.

The purpose of the Thouron Scholarships is to provide financial assistance to students who have completed at least three years of study at the university. The scholarships will be awarded to students who have completed at least three years of study at the university.

European Countries Devalue Own Currencies

Sweden and Finland announced a 5 per cent devaluation in their currencies across the Continent. The devaluation of the marks, an American Express traveler's checks for ones in German currency, was dumping their dollars for other countries' currencies.

In West Germany and France the currency gradually shrank. Everytime we went to the store there was a woman standing at the checkout with a shopping bag, Jeannie Tilton Critics columnist said.

Opening the Budget

President Meyerson's release of the Budget Committee's "progress report" on fiscal planning for the coming year was a signal for an administrative planning to public scrutiny. We applaud his high priority for this task and continue to release financial information—especially when the announcement of studies is long in coming. Our belief is that specific cost of justification for major expenses will help to attract better students. However, given that some contingency monies may be available after the final determination of external and other income, we hope that high priority for these funds will also help to attract better students to the University, an especially important consideration on the undergraduate level.

Although a five per cent increase in tuition seems regrettable, we suggest that a larger portion of this increase be borne by the professional schools. Since most resources are spent per student in these schools, they should pay a greater part of the increased University costs. Also, most professional students are training for high income jobs that should enable them to better pay deferred education costs. Greater urgency for graduate students has already been applied with success at the Wharton School.

We also hope this report will be followed by the release of what budgetary information—including the individual budgets of all departments, schools and other cost centers. breakdowns of salary increases at all levels, a listing of specific reductions in expenses, and statements about the costs and effects of alternative financial policies. Public information about financial input into our planning and decision making will facilitate beneficial discussions between students, faculty, and administrators of the important issues involved. This work is critical for a change from the head-on confrontation of the past.

The Budget Committee has approximated the problems of the fiscal planning process in a series of fiscal planning targets: "a prediction of gross income and costs —a projection of what gross incomes and costs will be, and which is likely to be, in the absence of income that is mandated by law or contract. The committee's advisory from our Wharton colleagues in econometrics is very helpful in highlighting significant facts. Next year's average cost increase appears to be about 6 per cent and average digging will be necessary if the earning state aid is to be used and excess revenues will exceed our student aid for the next year. We believe that the gross profit report released.

Looking at macro-income expectations the Budget Committee sought and developed increases to the maximum extent feasible from sources other than student payments. This type of cost justification is provided. The committee's "progress report" on fiscal planning for the coming year first by considering what we call the "macro-budget statement sufficiently justifies the gap of $2,000,000, a 5 per cent increase in total tuition receipts from previous practice and makes full use of the concept of cost-of-living (More recently the Governor has recommended a 4.5 per cent increase). However, given that some contingency monies may be available after the final determination of external income, we hope that high priority for these funds will also help to attract better students to the University, an especially important consideration on the undergraduate level.

Penn's Image

With our attention recently being drawn to the University's concern for its public image ("Re: Penn's Image," Chronicle, February 9), it might be helpful to reflect on what factors may contribute to the image of the University. Over the years the public image of Penn has become more widely shared and widely discussed. The following are some observations that may be of interest.

The "image" of Penn that is most widely recognized is that of a large, prestigious, research-oriented institution. Penn is often characterized as a "hotbed of student activism," and as a place where students are more concerned with their social and political goals than with their academic responsibilities. However, the extent of student activism at Penn is quite limited, and the emphasis on social and political issues is not shared by all students.

In addition, the "image" of Penn is often associated with its athletic programs. The University has a strong tradition of athletic competition, and its athletes are widely recognized for their athletic ability and sportsmanship. However, the emphasis on athletics is not shared by all students, and the University's athletic programs are not considered to be the most important aspect of the University's "image."

Budget Increase Figures

However, some students indicated that they believed the tuition increase is justified.

Mann said that some provisions should be made for students who belong to families of any of the .15 million that becomes available, that the budget would be "too hard to evaluate," and that the problems of other student groups still suffering financial strain should be a matter for the university to develop.

If these figures form a Development Fund, under which is understood to be a special board-appointed committee, the president of the board is to be appointed by the chairman of the board, and this chairman is to be at the top of the list of the board.

Mann also objected to the sale of licenses, which he said would give the students for whom he was speaking more individuality, and said that they would be "a rather mean" form of control of the students. He said that the next time the licenses were "not considered" before a tuition increase was "a last resort." The statement indicates that in-creases in license fees will not be considered. "If the license fee is increased, the students will come from the following sources:

- From increased return in University endowments.
- From .15 million from additional federal grants and a larger amount of government grants than in the previous year, "justified.

- From increased "competition for the dollar-would be "at the top of the list of the board."

With the Army ROTC Two-Year Program.

Army ROTC usually takes four years of college. But you can do it in two.

If, for example, you couldn't take Army ROTC during your first two years of college.

Or if you just didn't want to take Army ROTC before.

But now you recognize the benefits.

You start the Two-Year Program by going to our six-week Basic Camp the summer following your sophomore year.

Camp—a little classroom work; some challenging physical training—replaces the Basic Course you would have taken during your first two years of college. You're well-paid for this six-week catch-up.

Then, after camp, you complete your Advance Course during your junior and senior years.

Maybe you'll decide that the chance to get real management experience earlier than most people will be worth a lot later on.

Maybe you can use the $100 per month subsistence allowance you will get for up to 10 months of each school year.

Maybe qualifying for two careers simultaneously—military or civilian—is insurance against job uncertainties. Or, maybe the opportunity for an Army ROTC scholarship is exciting.

The Army ROTC Two-Year Program is another chance for a better career, through Army ROTC.

Quakers Hit Road In Weekend Return
By Joel Shaps
Penn's six-road trip over the weekend brought the consensus Ivy League title closer to hand. With a 15-12 win at Columbia, the Quakers moved to 12-0 in the Ivies, and for the first time in his career, Coach Chris Kriebel was able to carry home a trophy on his first trip to New York City.

"It's nice to see that all the preparations paid off," said Penny, who was named Ivy League Coach of the Week for the third time in his career. "We had a great practice in Philadelphia last Saturday, but we were very much on our toes trying to get everything to come together."}

Penn Meets Columbia For Ivy Fencing Title
By Ted Metzger
Columbia has captured the Ivy League title three times, but none of those wins were more sweet than the 4-3 victory over Penn Wednesday afternoon in New York City. The Lions, who finished second in the Ivy League last season, have won seven straight matches and are currently ranked eight in the nation.

"Penn is a tough team," said Columbia's head coach, Joe Swain. "They've been working hard all season, and they're really working hard this week. We've got a lot of respect for them, and we're excited to play them."}

Quaker Squashmen Vie For Ivy Fencing Title
Unfortunately, for the rest of this touches, Penn outscored Army 104-97. The Maestro also pointed out that the Quakers' first loss of the season was against upstart Penn (6-2, 3-0 Ivies).

"I think we're due for a loss," said Penny. "We've been on a roll, and we've been playing really well. But we've also been playing against some tough teams. Penn is a good team, and they're capable of beating anyone."}
