W.E.B. DuBois House: Programs, Problems

BY TOM CANDOR
Although the W.E.B. DuBois House, a college within the University, was created at the beginning of its first year, the dormitory was not opened until this fall. See you at the University, the program was begun in the spring of 1972, the academic, cultural and social benefits that students interested in black studies have been able to enjoy at the University have been delayed.

The program is now in its third year.

Sloan Unit Lectures to Begin Today
The Sloan Unit program today continues a series of lectures given by some of the program's noted instructors.

Consumer advocate Robert Chapman and former U.S. senator Joseph Clark are speaking on "Energy in America" this morning at 9:30 in Sterling Hall B-23.

Tonight, successful Philadelphia theatrical candidate John Logan will discuss "Vision of the Future" at 8:30 in the Tower Auditorium.

While in the Senate, Clark was noted for his investigations into maladjusting in the United States. Chapman made headlines last year when he predicted that most entertainers would soon disappear. He is currently concerned with advertising on children's television programs.

Al's Weather
The heat wave continues but don't start your spring cleaning yet. There are changes on the way. An expected high pressure system will move in from the west on Friday, bringing a chance of showers and storms. Lack of moisture in the area may result in some late-season fire hazards.
Peace Keeping Teams to Study Viet Flare-up

By United Press International

SAIGON, Feb. 20-The fighting raged throughout South Vietnam Monday, three weeks after the accord, and there were reports a Communist patrol touched off the conflict as they crossed a border on the northern front.

Three days ago, reports from two agencies proposed to make their first forays into the border area to study the situation at the Nhu Y and at the A Lac, where the United States attacked the Viet Cong of shooting down an American helicopter during their forays into the field Tuesday to study the possibilities for making their first forays into the border area to study the situation at the Nhu Y and at the A Lac, where the United States attacked the Viet Cong.

South Vietnam, which was virtually cut in half at the fishing village of Sa Huynh on the western coast of France, began Jan. 28.

The Viet Cong attacks on the Viet Cong offensive had virtually cut South Vietnam in half at Sa Huynh on the western coast of France.

The South Vietnamese command press confidentiality report the undersigned members of the University's Black community.

The resolutions were adopted overwhelmingly by a voice vote. Four later additions were made to the resolution, which includes provisions for poor child development laws "at least as good as the ones passed by Congress." The four additions were: an end to all poverty programs, and an end to all prostitution laws.

"We accomplished the objective of the United States in Vietnam, which, very simply, was to prevent the imposition of a Communist military victory in South Vietnam," Nixon said.

The President's remarks at an impromptu news conference in nearby Fort Lauderdale, was the closest he has expressed belief it might be flown to the mainland for "political reasons" he could. "I am, however, virtually certain..."

Commissioner Denenberg Warns Against Misleading Insurance Policy Packages

Insurance Commissioner Herbert B. Denenberg today cautioned Pennsylvanians against purchasing false promises from insurance agents, particularly in the area of life insurance. He claimed that the Lafayette's campaign was a "classic example of a misleading advertisement." Denenberg stated that the Lafayette's campaign was misleading because it failed to explain the true nature of the insurance policy.

"The Lafayette's campaign was a classic example of a misleading advertisement," Denenberg said today. "It was designed to persuade people that they could purchase a policy for a very low premium, and that the policy would provide them with a large benefit if they were to die. However, the policy was not a true life insurance policy, but rather a type of policy known as a "promissory note.""

Denenberg explained that a promissory note is a legal document that gives the insurance company the right to collect the premiums. The Lafayette's campaign never explained that the policy was a promissory note, and that the premiums were not a true premium, but rather a loan from the insurance company.

Denenberg stated that the Lafayette's campaign was a gross misrepresentation of the facts, and that it was designed to deceive people into purchasing a policy that was not a true life insurance policy.

Denenberg warned that the Lafayette's campaign was a classic example of a misleading advertisement, and that people should be careful when purchasing insurance policies. He stated that people should always read the fine print of an insurance policy, and that they should never purchase a policy without fully understanding the terms and conditions.

"People should always read the fine print of an insurance policy, and they should never purchase a policy without fully understanding the terms and conditions," Denenberg said. "People should never be misled into purchasing a policy that is not a true life insurance policy."

The Tennis Club Forms at Penn

By ODI ABRAHAM

In 1911, when University of Pennsylvania wasn't even in existence, there was a tennis club formed by students at the University of Pennsylvania. It was called the "Tennis Club" and its main purpose was to promote the game of tennis among the students. The club had a few goals in mind: to encourage physical fitness, to foster social interaction among students, and to provide a place for students to play the game of tennis. The club was open to any undergraduate, male or female. The membership was open to anyone who signed up, and the club was run by a group of elected officers. The club was the first of its kind at the University of Pennsylvania, and it set the stage for future tennis clubs that would be formed in the decades to come.
