Zahra Speech

The University Council will hold a special session of meetings today to discuss the proposal of the University Development committee regarding future fundraising activities. The committee proposed that the University should use its property and facilities to generate funds.

The council will also consider a proposal to increase tuition fees. The proposal is expected to be a contentious issue among students.

The Thief Who Came to Dinner, at the Fox, proves to be a pleasant surprise. With a script by Kaufman-McCobb history it wins over the audience.

As the title suggests, the film is set at an elaborate dinner party given by the late great entrepeneur. At the party, a group of people gather and enjoy a feast. The film is about the various guests who attend the party and the events that unfold.

The guests include a variety of people, such as a famous politician, a successful businessman, and a famous actress. Each guest has their own agenda and motivations for attending the party, and their interactions with each other create a complex web of relationships and conflicts.

Overall, the film is well-made and entertaining. The cast delivers strong performances and the script is witty and engaging. The film is recommended for those who enjoy a good dinner party scene.
Is Winning Worth It?

As the winter sports season draws to a close, many students begin to question Penn's athleticism for its outstanding performances and wish them the best of luck in their future careers in sports. But it is perhaps at this time, when the issues in the context surrounding the scope of Penn's intercollegiate program are in sharpest focus, that the administrators and those actually participating in the commitment to intercollegiate athletics, simply, the goals of the competition must be determined definitively.

During the winter season, Penn teams won two Ivy championships and overall 37% of their contests. The basketball team will begin competition to the NCAA national championship on Saturday in Virginia. The hockey team placed in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Association championship tournament in Boston Sunday night. These rewards will continue as Penn for national championships in wrestling at Stanford, Washington this weekend. The winter teams in particular have had to deal with the disadvantages of such a program also become apparent.

Thus, at this time it is easy to see the rewards of an athleticism of the current scope. The arts program is designed to offer the reward of national championships to Penn's athletes. But like others I've felt that plays, concerts, and shows be performed art or experience the performance of others. The big campus advantage of their performance program should not only be continued, but amplified.

The situation demands a simple philosophical decision: Should we continue to support an intercollegiate program? We suggest that the Ivy leaders end their hypocrisy, make this decision and quit playing games of their own.

Pound Joins Float Against Dollar

By United Press International

LONDON, March 7 (UPI) — The pound was announced Tuesday to join the floating dollar, provided the European partners held tight to marketing commitments against speculative attacks to shore up the Western European economy.

Europe’s monetary authorities have been working hard to prevent a dollar slide, which would add to the overvalued British pound, and to float against the dollar would help contain inflation.

At the heart of the problem, both economic and monetary, is the United States, which is now faced with high inflation and a growing trade deficit. The dollar is losing its position as the world’s leading currency.

But in the face of mounting pressure, the United States is determined to keep the dollar strong. The currency is seen as essential to the world economy, and the United States is not willing to let it become weak.

The European partners, on the other hand, are concerned about the impact of a strong dollar on their economies. They are also concerned about the impact of a strong dollar on their currencies, which are already weak due to high inflation.

The European partners have been working hard to prevent a dollar slide, which would add to the overvalued British pound. They have been working to keep the European market from being flooded with dollars, which is seen as a way to keep the dollar strong.

Pucksters Shock BU in ECAC Playoffs, 7-3

By STEVE BASSINGER

SPORTS—Penn's freshman hockey team has made the past eight years as well as for us. But in what was really the fastest game that any Penn hockey team has ever played, the Quakers came completely unfazed, no doubt because of a patented Penn team that turned up the tempo for Friday night's second round at Rink Center.

Before the contest had ever begun, virtually no one in the near-capacity crowd at the Thomas Brown rink would have believed that Penn would be the eventual winners. To top it all, the Quakers went on to score the second round's first goal, and the two, out of the nine that Penn scored in the contest, were the biggest set of goals in college hockey history.

The Quakers came out of the gates in the first period with a resounding bang, scoring a point each in the opening and closing seconds of the opening period. Their first goal was scored by senior forward Mark Linn, whose shot from the right side of the net bounced off goalie Ed Walsh's glove and into the back of the net. The second goal was scored by senior forward Bob Smith, whose shot from the left side of the net was deflected by Walsh and into the net. The Quakers then proceeded to score five more goals in the second period, and five more in the third period, to win the game, 7-3.

The Quakers' performance was no surprise to the fans, who knew that the team was capable of winning if they could only get the ball rolling. And the fans were not disappointed, as the Quakers came out of the gates in the first period with a bang, scoring a point each in the opening and closing seconds of the opening period.
