Meal Contract Rates Hiked 5% for '73-'74

By ANNETTE LEVY

The price of University dining services contracts will rise five percent next year because of increased food costs, Director of Auxiliary Services Ralph Johnson told Assistant Director Kendall Choate. A new rate schedule contract plan which provides for ten meals a week, plus programs and the year and contract plan which it includes results in a week's cost will rise by $6.40 per year.

The increase is, of course, respectable since the price of food has been rising 10 percent or so every year. Also to be considered is the additional services offered to those on such contracts. The new rates reflect the overall break-even cost within three years to questions the financial picture of the meal service contracts and added that while the services offered to those on meal plans will rise five percent, the price of University dining services will not rise.

The price of University dining services includes a controversial sever-year term which was also included in the new rate schedule contract plan which provides for ten meals a week, plus programs and the year and contract plan. MITCHELL TIED TO ITT SCANDAL

By United Press International

WASHINGTON - A Senate committee released documents Thursday setting forth Attorney General John N. Mitchell helped the Internal Revenue Service and Telegram Corp. win an anti-trust fight with the Justice Department in 1970. The memos, along with other documents released in connection with an FBI investigation of an ITT official, raise fresh questions about Mitchell's actions before he allowed the charges against the FBI's Watergate files under or-}

The documents indicate that FBI agents by not telling them

Washington Post President Richard M. Nixon (D) had an office at the White House.

The Annenberg Center for Communication Arts and Sciences presents:

March 24 thru March 31.

A week of screenings and lectures by leading New American Filmmakers presenting their own work and the work of others.

This series is an intensive introduction to the wide variety of styles and forms that collectively have become known as New American Cinema. Artists who have chosen film as a medium for personal expression will show and discuss their own films plus illustrative examples of the new genre.

Three day film series: A personal look at the development of avant-garde film as a personal art form.

THURSDAY, MARCH 28

HOLLY FRAMPTON

Though a filmmaker for less than a decade, Holly Frampton has developed a lyrical film style clearly divergent from the more intellectual sensibilities of the East. Pat O'Neill, a builder of images on the optical bench, will show his own films and other examples of West Coast filmmaking.

FRIDAY, MARCH 29

RICHARD LEACOCK

The impact of cinema verite has permanently altered the direction of independent American film. And it is the work of Ricky Leacock that is responsible for much of this change. He will show and discuss examples of his non-fiction films.

SATURDAY, MARCH 31

JONAS MEKAS

As writer, filmmaker and publisher, Jonas Mekas has permanently altered the direction of American film. His new film, Reminiscences of a Journey to Lithuana, is a fine example of his unique diary style.
Doppelt and Academic Philosophy

By Margaret Condul

General Editor, "Intellectual Digest," University of Pennsylvania, and a professor of philosophy at the university, has written a comprehensive study of the academic and intellectual climate at Penn. She has been a contributor to the university's intellectual community for many years, and her work reflects a deep commitment to understanding the philosophical and intellectual traditions that have shaped Penn's campus.

Doppelt's dismissal signifies for the teaching and practice of philosophy at Penn.

The following column is written by a contributor who has been gathered in a community of students, faculty, and members of the academic community who are interested in the Next Vietnam.

Iran: The Next Vietnam?

Iran, formerly called Persia, is a country that lies between the Caspian Sea and the Persian Gulf. It is bordered by Afghanistan to the west, Turkmenistan to the north, Azerbaijan to the north and east, Iraq to the east, and the Gulf of Oman to the south. Iran is the largest country in the Middle East and the eighth largest country in the world.

The government of Iran is a theocratic republic with a president as the head of state and government. The country is divided into 31 provinces, each of which is governed by a governor appointed by the president.

The Iranian people are predominantly Iranian, with small minorities of Azerbaijani, Armenian, and Kurdish populations. The official language is Farsi, also known as Persian.

Iran has a rich history dating back to the Persian Empire, which was one of the largest empires in history. The country is home to several major cities, including Tehran, the capital city, and Isfahan, Mashhad, and Qom.

In recent years, Iran has faced significant political and economic challenges, including a series of revolutions and civil wars. The country has also been involved in several international conflicts, including the Iran-Iraq War and the Iran-Iran-Iranian War.

Iran has a strong economy, with significant oil and gas reserves, making it a major player in the global economy. The country is also known for its rich cultural heritage, with a long history of art, literature, and music.

The country's leadership is dominated by the Islamic Republic of Iran, which is led by a Supreme Leader, a President, and a parliament. The country's legal system is based on Islamic law, and the country's government is largely controlled by the Supreme Leader's office.

Despite its challenges, Iran remains a complex and fascinating country, with a rich history and culture.

Repression on Campuses

University of Washington, Seattle, has been a student body for many years and has a long history of activism. The university has a reputation for being a liberal institution, and its students are known for their political engagement.

In recent years, however, the university has faced significant challenges, including a series of protests and demonstrations. The university's administration has been criticized for its handling of these events, and there has been significant media attention.

In a recent column, the university's student newspaper, The Varsity, has discussed the issue of campus repression. The column argues that the university's administration has been too quick to respond to student concerns, and that the university's policies are too restrictive.

The column also argues that the university should be more open to student input and that the university's policies should be more transparent.

The column concludes that the university should work to create a more inclusive and welcoming environment for all students.

As a full-time state, Maryland's contribution to the United States has been limited. Its role in national defense has been minimal, its economic contributions have been negligible, and its cultural output has been modest. Yet even Maryland has something that no other state can offer—人才培养.

The state is home to two of the nation's top universities: the University of Maryland in College Park and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. These institutions are known for their strong programs in fields such as engineering, medicine, and law. Their graduates are highly sought after by employers across the country.

In addition to these two universities, Maryland also has several smaller institutions that are notable for their contributions to their fields. For example, McDaniel College is known for its strong programs in business and communications, while Goucher College is recognized for its strong programs in the arts.

Overall, Maryland's contribution to the United States is significant, especially in the areas of education and research. Its universities and institutions produce leaders in a variety of fields, and its graduates are well-prepared to make contributions to the country. Despite its relatively small size, Maryland is a state that should not be overlooked.
