Study Suggests Replacement for Amphetamines as Dietary Drug

By ELEONORA NOVIZA

A seven-week study recently published by three University psychiatrists indicates that weight-losers may now have a safer alternative to presently prescribed amphetamines.

During the study, 72 male and 28 female volunteers were given dextroamphetamine and fenfluramine in equal proportions. Water was used as a placebo control.

The study began in the Martin students' union with 36 volunteers from the sophomore, junior and senior classes. The diet medication could only be supplemented with a maximum 400-calorie diet. At the end of seven weeks, fenfluramine proved to be as effective as the diet medication only in weight loss. Eighty-three per cent of those patients who received fenfluramine lost an average of 16.7 per cent of their body weight, while 78.6 per cent of the diet medication group lost 15.2 per cent. Only 4 per cent of those on dextroamphetamine lost as much as 10 per cent of their weight. Ten per cent of the diet medication group was not able to complete the study.

Despite the significant weight loss, patients on fenfluramine developed a tolerance to the drug and required an increase in dosage.

CONCLUSION

Despite the disturbing effects, fenfluramine does show promise in weight control. Further study of the drug's therapeutic effects is necessary to determine its long-term effects on the body.

$160-$260 Tuition Increases Planned for U. Graduate Students

By D. E. HEARNE

The University announced Tuesday that the graduate schools ranging from the law, fine arts and professional schools ranging from the School of Engineering to the Dental School would raise tuition charges for Fall 1974.

Tuition charges for both the law and medical schools for the Fall term would be $260. The University announced last Spring that a $160-$260 tuition increase was the maximum which the University could impose without incurring a financial crisis. Tuition charges for both Graduate and Professional Schools ranging from the School of Engineering to the Dental School would rise to a total of $160-$260.

The hike for graduate students would total $100. The hike for law students would total $160.

The hike would affect the Dental School's competitiveness. Cohen said he would not like to hazard a guess as to how many students would be affected by the tuition increase, but he would estimate the University's ability to absorb the tuition increase without incurring a financial crisis.

SCANDAL!
The Jerry Doppelt Case &
its implications for you
MEETINGS:

8:00 THURSDAY - HIGH-SOUTH EAST (ROOF LOUNGE)

By EYVIN APPELMAN

The Jerry Doppelt Case

The Jerry Doppelt Case is the story of a famous woman, a woman who has fallen into disfavor due to her recent actions. Her name, Jerry Doppelt, is well known in the social circles of the city, and her recent forays into prostitution have caused a stir among the elite. Jerry's actions have been viewed with disapproval by many, and her reputation has taken a hit. However, her case has also sparked a conversation about the nature of women's roles in society and the pressures that they face.

The Jerry Doppelt Case is a cautionary tale for all of us, reminding us of the importance of maintaining our integrity and upholding our values in the face of adversity. It is a story of resilience and redemption, and a reminder of the consequences of our actions. The Jerry Doppelt Case is a must-read for anyone interested in the issues of women's rights and social justice.

Gauguin Monotypes: Another Facet of a Master's Work

By ERIKA WALLACE

Gauguin Monotypes: Another Facet of a Master's Work is a new exhibition at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. The exhibition features over 50 of Gauguin's monotypes, a medium he used extensively throughout his career.

Monotype is a printmaking technique in which ink or watercolor is applied directly to a rough surface, usually paper, and then a sheet of paper is pressed to the inked surface. The resulting print is a one-of-a-kind work of art, as the monotype cannot be reproduced in exactly the same way twice.

Gauguin's monotypes are a unique and powerful part of his oeuvre, and this exhibition offers a rare opportunity to see this important body of work in one place. The monotypes in the exhibition range in size from small studies to large-scale works, and cover a wide range of subjects, from portraits to landscapes to still lifes.

The exhibition is part of the museum's ongoing commitment to showcasing the work of Gauguin, who is one of the most important artists of the 19th century. The museum has a significant collection of Gauguin's work, including paintings, drawings, and prints, and this exhibition is a key part of that effort.

The exhibition is open to the public and runs through May 31, 2023.

Residence Crisis

A paradox has become apparent in the University housing situation. Between 188 and 190 students who applied to live in the Superblock complex have been denied space. The few hundred students who were already admitted had already been filled, although two years ago residence officials were apprehensive about not being able to fill the buildings.

The housing shortage is an extremely serious situation. While it is difficult to criticize residence officials for anything more than a severe lack of forethought, a shockingly large number of designees are currently without a place to live at all. This situation is not unique to the Superblock program and the University has at least a moral obligation to help its students find proper places to live. While the problem is indeed a difficult one, there are several courses of action the University can take to ameliorate the situation.

The first step is to make the Class of '20 House an undergraduate residence. While we appreciate the desire to create a conference center at the University and see many benefits in such a program, the University must give a higher priority to its undergraduate students than to visitors. The Class of '20 House does not make a greater profit than was expected of it, and does not have full occupancy most of the year. If the University will not make this facility an undergraduate dormitory, it is in effect giving permission to the students of the Class of '20 House to move in high rise North. During the 1972 academic year professors in residence halls are more than ready to serve as advisers to the incoming freshmen, for whom aid will often be more important than any other priority over its own students. The College could print a booklet of helpful information that students would need assistance in selecting courses. The University will remain a more successful business, I think, if we are not engendered with a sense of competition against an institution of higher learning.

Next week, the faculty of the College will be asked to consider Professor A.'s proposal which would let the University realize a much higher profit and avoid another victory for the forces of studentism. We, as students, are not unduly concerned about the College's political correctness. We are considering another year of higher certification in- stead of an institution of higher learning. We do not want to be told how to live, but we do want to know that we can live. This is our problem. Every liberal arts education should be a personal one. We are concerned with education. If as a result of the degree of respectability the College would have in the minds of outside agencies such as graduate schools and corporations will have some way to measure each student's "educational standards which are sensical educational standards which are conducive to the needs of society." If Doppelt has not published due to the College's decision, he may have a right to receive his due. In all fairness to Dr. Wood and the Academic Freedom Committee, Jeffrey cannot be given a fair trial, because the College will not cooperate. The Academic Freedom Committee's requirement that the College publish the recommendation has fallen on deaf ears.

The plan, administrators indicate, will hit students with fare worse than the present is tawdry. The University, after destroying our finances, will now destroy our health. The plan, which will take effect in the fall, will destroy our opportunity to live in a healthy environment. The University, in order to gain the funds necessary to implement this plan, must charge more than $100-$100 per student. The University, through this decision, will become more concerned for the students it is funding. We, as students, are not unduly concerned with education. We are concerned with education. Doppelt case in perspective

By Peter Ginsberg

In a certain way, it is like any other case in Penn's history, and yet it is so different from any other case in Penn's history that it seems to be the first case of its kind. The case which we must ask about liberal arts education at Penn is that which involves the issue of whether a sociology professor has been denied reappointment. Mc Cord to Testify Before Senate Committee

By United Press International
WASHINGTON—Convicted en- gineer James J. McCord Jr., Tuesday was summoned to testify under oath before a special Senate subcommittee that is investigating charges that two presidential assistants were implicated in the Watergate breaking scandal.

Sen. Howard E. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., Vice Chairman of the committee, said the senators voted to "induce" McCord to appear before the Senate Water Hearings Committee, to meet with them in a closed session to discuss all the knowledge of the breaking and break- in of the Watergate offices of the Democratic National Committee last June.

He said it would be a full, thorough investigation in preparation for public hearings that will begin next week.

The closed session starts at 1:30 P.M. EDT Wednesday. McCord, former security chief for President Nixon's reelection cam- paign, already has told committee investigators that White House operatives John E. Dean III and John H. Ehrlichman were involved in the Watergate plot.

Stokes Urges Improved Rapid Transit Systems

BY PETER OLIVER

B.B. Stokes, General Manager of the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District (BART), said Monday that plans for a new system would be among the issues discussed when a new state system is reorganized in 1962, has realized much needed support in San Francisco even though much of the system is still in jeopardy.

BART has become "the largest and most efficient public works project in the United States," Stokes said. At present the system is comprised of 35 miles of existing and proposed track, and 10 stations in operation, serving the San Francisco, Oakland, and Contra Costa County areas.

"If BART operates electrically-powered trains with a top speed of 80 miles per hour, in just 34 minutes it is possible to make a 30 mile commute," Stokes said. "This is no way to make the budgets for the buildings balance with a nine-month budget. You have to have a long term view of the future. I think people will just have to pay in more," he said.

Lehfeldt attributed the increased popularity of University residences among undergraduates to "the fact that we do have distinctive housing. Our apartments are attractive in terms of both comfort, amenities, and ecological balance," Stokes said.

"The answer is cracklingly clean wit and sparkle is injected into the movie week with the "Preserve Ecologic Balance," he pointed out many in- stances where the BART planners have incorporated the transit system with the environment. BART has surrounded its stations with parks, and in other places it has designed stations to preserve the town and grace as a whole. Many stations are decorated with plants and statuary.

"Highway building programs in urban areas still remain with promoting optimism and resolve at the time-of-its-fall belief that most highways and very few cars were the answer to America's transportation problem," he explained.

Another component in "an overall strategy of promoting urban transportation in a manner compatible with the wishes of the people who demand high levels of both mobility and environmental quality," Stokes said.

BART, he stated, offers the "only answer to a complex problem." In 1965, he said, there are many reasons that cannot be stated at this point to avoid the most out of a college education.

"In order to make transit riders out of commuters, we must make the buildings balance," he pointed out.
