U.S. to Bomb Cambodia for 'Moral Reasons'

BY JOHN MURPHY

Special Correspondent of several Pennsylvania medical schools, including the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Alfred Goldstein, presented the state legislature with a plan to provide scholarships for medical students in Pennsylvania today.

The proposal recommends that the state legislature fund a loan program for medical school students who are not reared in Pennsylvania.

The student loan plan was formulated in response to a proposal by the Pennsylvania Medical School Association that would have forced medical school graduates who do not set up practice in Pennsylvania to reimburse the state for four years of education.

In the past few years the legislature has been receptive to the possibility of a state-supported loan program for medical school students who do not set up practice in Pennsylvania.

However, a number of influential legislators have expressed reservations about the state-supported loan program in Pennsylvania. The Senate-Appropriations Committee Chairman, Senator Albert Shapp, said his committee to "express their approval of the program" on the part of the commonwealth.

He claimed that the legislature would be reluctant to act on the proposal "until we can relate what the 'money' of the state means to the Feds."

The program would be a very overrated candidate," he said.

BILLY LIBERT

For reprints, in contradiction with a dying person alike, one hour a day, and a feeling of helplessness. A truth about the above is that death is now.

Yet the recent success of Elizabethe Kubler-Ross's study of Death and Dying, which has already sold 30,000 copies in paperback, indicates that death has become an important concern of the American people, and that they are now in need of more support for the "dying in the USA" problem.

In an effort to open dialogue at this subject, two courses are now being offered at the University, both called "Death and Dying," and both organized by Dr. Alvin Schneider, assistant professor at the University of Pennsylvania.

The first course, which is an optional seminar for nursing and social workers, is entitled "Death and Dying," and both are organized by Dr. Alvin Schneider.

Yet the recent success of Elizabethe Kubler-Ross's study of Death and Dying, which has already sold 30,000 copies in paperback, indicates that death has become an important concern of the American people, and that they are now in need of more support for the "dying in the USA" problem.

The format of the course includes small lectures, class visit by dying patients, and small discussion groups in which students may share their own feelings and attitude towards death. The course has been so successful that the University decided to sponsor it for the entire spring semester this year.

RENEE FOX

Counselor for Quality of Life

Philadelphia Counseling Services

By REYNOLDS

The problem is that we're training too many doctors at state expense who practice out of the state. (Continued on page 3)

By BILLY LEBERT

"I Am Confused. It is Reasonably Fair.

"...and a feeling of helplessness. A truth about the above is that death is now.

"Yet the recent success of Elizabethe Kubler-Ross's study of Death and Dying, which has already sold 30,000 copies in paperback, indicates that death has become an important concern of the American people, and that they are now in need of more support for the "dying in the USA" problem.

The format of the course includes small lectures, class visit by dying patients, and small discussion groups in which students may share their own feelings and attitude towards death. The course has been so successful that the University decided to sponsor it for the entire spring semester this year.

RENEE FOX

Counselor for Quality of Life

Philadelphia Counseling Services
This Sunday 7 & 9:30 PM
Sean Connery in Diamonds Are Forever
(A Beautiful Bond Flick)
IRVINE

Campus Events

The Jesse Clanton Dance
March 30

Campus Curators

Grand Hotel

Midnite Movies

Programmers & Keyunchers

Computer Restart Service

Classifieds

Help

The Jesse Clanton Band

Scammon, Phillips

(Continued from page 1)
Last U.S. Troops Leave Vietnam

By United Press International

WASHINGTON - The United States ended its long involvement in the Vietnam War Thursday, withdrawing the last of its remaining combat troops and receiving back all but one of the American prisoners known to have been held by the Vietnamese Communist regime.

"It's one of those rare books that trulycall us to the point of view that what were once considered minor issues, minor events, are now considered major issues," said John S. Holmes, director of the Center for Communication Arts and Sciences.

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Last POW Freed

By Vietnamese CLANKE B. PHILIPPINES

WASHINGTON - The American POWs that were held in Vietnam by the Communist regime have been freed, ending a 12-year-long conflict that cost the lives of thousands of Vietnamese and millions of Vietnamese and Americans.

"If you don't thinkyou have any questions, the only way you can cope better with other people, they said. "It gave me a tremendous freedom in handling people," she said.

"The ANNENBERG CENTER FOR COMMUNICATION ARTS AND SCIENCES presents an avant-garde comedy your life. I value my experiences and friends much more." -MURRAY MELDIN

"It's one of those rare books that trulycall us to the point of view that what were once considered minor issues, minor events, are now considered major issues," said John S. Holmes, director of the Center for Communication Arts and Sciences.

"The ANNENBERG CENTER FOR COMMUNICATION ARTS AND SCIENCES presents an avant-garde comedy for women - and men, too, most of them - will be satisfied. "If you don't thinkyou have any questions, the only way you can cope better with other people, they said. "It gave me a tremendous freedom in handling people," she said.

"The ANNENBERG CENTER FOR COMMUNICATION ARTS AND SCIENCES presents an avant-garde comedy for women - and men, too, most of them - will be satisfied. "If you don't thinkyou have any questions, the only way you can cope better with other people, they said. "It gave me a tremendous freedom in handling people," she said.

"The ANNENBERG CENTER FOR COMMUNICATION ARTS AND SCIENCES presents an avant-garde comedy for women - and men, too, most of them - will be satisfied. "If you don't thinkyou have any questions, the only way you can cope better with other people, they said. "It gave me a tremendous freedom in handling people," she said.
The Housing Lottery

A significant inequity has become apparent in last year's room draw, a housing lottery, an injustice which further complicates the already dire situation. According to Residence Office figures, students who indicated that their primary preference was for rooms near a particular student received a room at that location. The method of selection was certainly not apparent to most applicants. A Residence Office brochure noted that a student need not have received a room student a room received at all; at least, the brochure was unclear on this point.

The impatience is even more glaring since many students who indicated "no preference" for a room near a specific student received a room in a smalt but useful locale. We realize that this procedure would be unfair to people who were not interested in a room near a specific student but did not receive a room in the section of the campus. This procedure would be unfair to people who were not interested in a room near a specific student but did not receive a room in the section of the campus.

The public accusations against our administration by those of us who are critical of the Residence Office's handling of this situation are well founded. We have been told that the current situation stems from an arbitrary decision made by the administration. Since students cannot compel the administration to make changes, we propose that the administration explain their decision and how it came about. We realize that the administration has the power to make changes, but we want to know how they came about.

The cornerstone of our residence policy is that all students should have an equal opportunity to live in University housing, regardless of their background. The administration has repeatedly stated that this is their goal, yet the current situation has failed to achieve it. We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Residential advisors have stated that they are not responsible for the allocation of rooms, but we believe that they should be made aware of the current situation and should be able to help students in finding rooms that they are willing to live in.

The public should be informed of the current situation and the administration's response. We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Philosophy Professor Explains Doppelt Decision

Jerry Doppelt was once a friend of mine, as were a number of other people who are now my friends. I have always respected his intellectual ability, and I believe that he is a person of integrity. However, I must say that I am disturbed by the way in which he has handled this situation.

The reason for Doppelt's double talk is not the claim of political motivation, but the fact that he has been acting for political reasons throughout his career. His statements to the effect that he is acting for political reasons have been repeated many times, and they have been made in many different contexts.

We are witnessing the sad spectacle of a kind of Joe McCarthy campaign in reverse, directed against a group of people who are not Philadelphians. The administration and the faculty are trying to build up a case for tenure, and they are using every argument they can think of to make their case.

The administration has stated that Doppelt has a right to two more years of tenure, and that he will be considered for tenure again after that time. However, this decision is not based on any new evidence, but on the administration's desire to continue their control over the department.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Graduates Need Housing

By Joanne Whitwell

Although I share the current concern about the current housing shortage, I believe that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

On the contrary, I suggest that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Students are people too.

By Eva-Lynn Purifex

The most obvious solution to the housing shortage is to build more housing units. However, this solution is not feasible in the short term, and we must work on more immediate solutions. One solution is to encourage more off-campus living. Another solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Improve Residency Cues

The following is a list of the residency rules at the University of Pennsylvania:

1. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
2. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
3. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
4. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

By Peter Oliver

University's response to the charges of political motivation has been to claim that the evidence is not substantial enough to support the claim. However, the current situation is not an isolated incident, but a pattern of behavior that has been repeated many times.

The administration has stated that Doppelt has a right to two more years of tenure, and that he will be considered for tenure again after that time. However, this decision is not based on any new evidence, but on the administration's desire to continue their control over the department.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Graduates Need Housing

By Joanne Whitwell

Although I share the current concern about the current housing shortage, I believe that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

On the contrary, I suggest that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Students are people too.

By Eva-Lynn Purifex

The most obvious solution to the housing shortage is to build more housing units. However, this solution is not feasible in the short term, and we must work on more immediate solutions. One solution is to encourage more off-campus living. Another solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Improve Residency Cues

The following is a list of the residency rules at the University of Pennsylvania:

1. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
2. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
3. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
4. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

By Peter Oliver

University's response to the charges of political motivation has been to claim that the evidence is not substantial enough to support the claim. However, the current situation is not an isolated incident, but a pattern of behavior that has been repeated many times.

The administration has stated that Doppelt has a right to two more years of tenure, and that he will be considered for tenure again after that time. However, this decision is not based on any new evidence, but on the administration's desire to continue their control over the department.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Graduates Need Housing

By Joanne Whitwell

Although I share the current concern about the current housing shortage, I believe that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

On the contrary, I suggest that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Students are people too.

By Eva-Lynn Purifex

The most obvious solution to the housing shortage is to build more housing units. However, this solution is not feasible in the short term, and we must work on more immediate solutions. One solution is to encourage more off-campus living. Another solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Improve Residency Cues

The following is a list of the residency rules at the University of Pennsylvania:

1. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
2. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
3. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.
4. Students must live in University housing until they are 21 years old.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

By Peter Oliver

University's response to the charges of political motivation has been to claim that the evidence is not substantial enough to support the claim. However, the current situation is not an isolated incident, but a pattern of behavior that has been repeated many times.

The administration has stated that Doppelt has a right to two more years of tenure, and that he will be considered for tenure again after that time. However, this decision is not based on any new evidence, but on the administration's desire to continue their control over the department.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Graduates Need Housing

By Joanne Whitwell

Although I share the current concern about the current housing shortage, I believe that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

On the contrary, I suggest that there are some solutions that will help to alleviate the problem. One solution is to build more housing units for graduate students. Another solution is to encourage more off-campus living. A third solution is to increase the number of housing units available for graduate students.

We believe that the administration should be held accountable for their actions, and we urge them to take immediate steps to rectify this situation.

Students are people too.
Vietnam War had been ended "with the best form of the housewives' rebellion" - should help high enough to increase farm back supplies in anticipation of even ceilings would discourage holding military involvement in Vietnam, while it still squeals," Shultz said. "At least Mississippi's moral ob- (Continued from page I)

"The University Council of the Pennsylvania State University exists to discuss and formulate recommendations to the President general policies of the University which may affect its educational objectives... It is empowered to initiate policy proposals as well as to express its judgement on those which are submitted to it by the administrative officers (2) of the various academic divisions of the University." (Byline of The University Council)

Sign Up For University Council Elections

March 27 to April 2

Petitions with 5 signatures are required for candidacy and are due by Monday, April 2 at 5:00 pm.

Pick up election materials in UPCoS office, Houston Hall.

For information call: 594-8908, 8909.
Tuppeny Looks to Field Strong Track Contingent Despite Graduation Losses

By DANNY BERRY

If you are a fan of Penn track, you know the last two years have been a struggle. The Quakers' men's coach, Jim Tuppeny, has been compiling a group of runners that just isn't there. But as track opens, it is clear that the year the Quakers were the force they were in 1971-72, when they swept the Indoor Ivy League meet and ran well in the Outdoor Ivy League meet, will be a year when Tuppeny's boys will compete in the Florida Relays. Eight seniors will represent the Quakers and make their fourth appearance.

Gold Coast

"In the ordinary problems," the former Villanova assistant continued. "Every guy on the team wants to be tough in zero degree weather?" It's a question of the type of dedication and competitive spirit the Quakers need to show. The Quakers need to show what it means to be tough in zero degree weather.

"We're going to try to get the team in good shape," Tuppeny said. "The team is going to be ready for a challenge." Tuppeny and the remainder of the Quakers will be aiming for peak performances in the Ivy League.

With the Quakers' strength depleted in the javelin, DePalma returns along with Bernie Gansle are "solid" sprinters, and Freshman Ed James and sophomore Gary Anderson. The Quakers should receive added strength in the javelin, but it will be a challenge to maintain the Quakers' strength in the event.

Tuppeny has to deal with a number of challenges in his first year. There's a big difference, you know, between throwing 16 pounds and throwing 20 pounds. The Quakers' strength in the javelin will be tested this season.

"It's going to take us a while to get back to the teams they were," Tuppeny said. "But we're going to have it the way we want it."

Cinderella's 1973 Slate Opens Today

With Four Events at Florida Relays

By ROY WITHE

Penn's indoor track team will begin its 1972-73 season with a trip to the Sunshine State. The Quakers will compete in the Florida Relays. Eight seniors will represent the Quakers and make their fourth appearance.

About everyone will be there. "It's a long, long time since we've had a real crowd," the former Villanova assistant continued. "But we're going to have a good crowd." Tuppeny and the remainder of the Quakers will be aiming for peak performances in the Ivy League.

The team swept through its dual-meet schedule, and will be aiming for peak performances in the Ivy League. The Quakers should receive added strength in the javelin, but it will be a challenge to maintain the Quakers' strength in the event.

"We're going to try to get the team in good shape," Tuppeny said. "The team is going to be ready for a challenge." Tuppeny and the remainder of the Quakers will be aiming for peak performances in the Ivy League.

With the Quakers' strength depleted in the javelin, DePalma returns along with Bernie Gansle are "solid" sprinters, and Freshman Ed James and sophomore Gary Anderson. The Quakers should receive added strength in the javelin, but it will be a challenge to maintain the Quakers' strength in the event.

Tuppeny has to deal with a number of challenges in his first year. There's a big difference, you know, between throwing 16 pounds and throwing 20 pounds. The Quakers' strength in the javelin will be tested this season.

"It's going to take us a while to get back to the teams they were," Tuppeny said. "But we're going to have it the way we want it."

West Records Second Shootout as Penn Rips Threads Out of Textile

By JAY STAIR

St. Joseph's was no match for West in the Florida Relays. The Quakers outdistanced the Rams by a 15-5 margin, winning all five events.

"He safer he wants to see just how good the women are," Fernberger observed. "He safer he wants to see just how good the women are." Fernberger is a great sprinter, but he can't really expect it, but I think he has a chance to go to the Olympics. But don't forget about the Quakers' performance in the javelin.

"We're rebuilding the distance events," Tuppeny said. "We're rebuilding the distance events."

Enthusiastic Bock Hopes to Pierce Armor of Scarlet Knights Tomorrow

By TERMEYER

Juniors Joe Bock and Tony D'Ambrosio have been roommates for three years. They're roommates for three years. They're roommates for three years. They're roommates for three years.

"No doubt about it, Rutgers is not going to be easy," Bock said. "They're going to be tough."

"I think they're going to be tough," Bock said. "They're going to be tough." There's a big difference, you know, between throwing 16 pounds and throwing 20 pounds. The Quakers' strength in the javelin will be tested this season.

"It's going to take us a while to get back to the teams they were," Tuppeny said. "But we're going to have it the way we want it."

Injured Billie Jean Forced to Miss Palestra's Max-Pax Tennis Open

By GLEN INTERBRECKER

The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.

The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.

"The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.

Another person who has followed the careers of track's more advanced competitors since his graduation from Penn...""

"The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.

The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.

No. 1 seed, who has won seven national championships for the Quakers, will be aiming for peak performances in the Ivy League. We've got too much talent. We've got too much talent. We've got too much talent.

"We're rebuilding the distance events," Tuppeny said. "We're rebuilding the distance events."

"The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.

The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.

"The draw for the 1973 Penn Indoor Tennis Classic held yesterday at the Penn Athletic Center was made by H. W. Tappen, a Penn Tennis official and Supervisor of Officials. The $25,000 net purse is entered in the AIEEE relays.