Nixon, Thieu Begin Two-Day Summit

By United Press International

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — President Nixon welcomed South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu to a two-day summit meeting Monday with a speech to several hundred students in a gymnasium of the University of California, San Diego, where a military band played "The Star-Spangled Banner." Nixon, who was accompanied by his wife in a flowing, embroidered Vietnamese dress — with a red dragon embroidered on it — replied by expressing the "southern gratitude" of his people for American aid in preserving Vietnam's freedom.

In their initial remarks, both leaders reviewed the history of American involvement in Vietnam and promised it was a success.

This pasted out that although many Americans will remain in Europe a quarter-century after World War II, it's country now was strong enough to go it alone without direct American involvement.

A presidential helicopter delivered Nixon and his party to a grassy bluff overlooking the Pacific from their hotel in Los Angeles.

Perhaps the biggest challenge facing the university golf team this season is to find room for all of the trophies it has won. The Quakers have become four-time champions, numerous tournament winners and are perhaps the best team ever to be up at Penn. Last fall they swept through the Ivy League to become the best team from Penn State. As a result, the team has moved up in the national college golf rankings and is expected to do well in the upcoming season.

Walter Penn Stein's Dan O'Brien is rated as the top Eastern collegiate golfer. O'Brien has a winning streak of 15 matches and is expected to do well in the upcoming season.
