Registrar Will Refund Cost of New ID Cards

Students who have paid one dollar to receive a Tiffany label and $6 for identification cards at the University Bookstore recently discovered that the $6 charge is unnecessary.

Dr. James E. Davis, as assistant to the President, and Mr. Firth that the refund are being offered in response to student protests over the charge for the cards, which are distributed free during the student’s first visit to the University.

Although the University usually charges students a fee for the cards only after the student’s first registration, Davis said that the University has decided to refund the $6 fee being charged to students who have not yet registered.

However, Davis said, the “registration fee” will not be refunded to students who have already registered because the University has not included instruction for which students have already registered.

The refund may be obtained in Room 165 E of the Franklin Building until December 1. The five dollars will be refunded postmaster.

Grievance Plan Tops Faculty Senate Slate

BY PETER SCHRAMM

A new faculty grievance procedure will be on the agenda for the Faculty Senate and the Board of Trustees' meetings today. The formalized procedure, designed to provide for the fair and equitable handling of student complaints against faculty members, was introduced by President Joseph R. Linn with a letter to the Senate.

The Senate will also consider a new set of hour emendations and a proposal that the University commission a study to assess the advisability of replacing the present procedure of the student grievance system with a new and more comprehensive system.

The affirmative action request called for in the joint resolution, which substitutes a new system, will be replaced by a new and more comprehensive system, will be replaced by a new and more comprehensive system, which is the Senate's resolution. The new system will provide for the fair and equitable handling of student complaints against faculty members.

Faced with the 21st Century, education is a changeful world, by Edward G. Posner. After a look at how the work of innovators is often accepted, this outlook is apparently accepted by its insights or its provocative implications, the wide range of voices signifying very little.

In his introductory chapter, Professor Roger McGuinn is quoted as saying that "I am a simple sharp rocket ship, however imperfect it may be, more effective than a smoother and more complex machine.

Donald "Bunny" Keischauer obviously sees himself as the "tacitly malevolent nature of all propositions toward nature..." He tacitly accepts almost without question the primacy of powers. Toward the end of powers, toward the end of history, he opts for the more hopeful and less-than-profound answer to the world's problems.

But his optimism that humanity is capable of learning from the lessons of the past is completely unfounded, even by his own admission, profoundly recasting all of the judgments.

The New Crumb Piano Work

in Free Recital by Burge

By ALAN ALDER

George Crumb is on leave from Penn this year, but he will return in November for a free recital, featuring Volume One of his Makrokosmos. Subtitled Twelve Fantasy Pieces for Amplified Piano, the Crumb work will be performed along with pieces by Dallapiccola, Messa, Caccini, and Mancini. With the spotlight now on the pianist, the concert will be the uniquely engaging singer-songwriter Loudon Wainwright III. Together, the bill will be a tribute to the ethereal music of Shadows and the railroad music of Darkness. The performance will begin at 8:00 P.M. at the University Museum Auditorium on November 6.

McGuinn: A Fine Solo Flight

By MICHAEL MORRIS

The Byrds were one of a handful of truly innovative bands to have their mark on rock music. As leaders of the band, Roger McGuinn was the individual most responsible for frequent changes in the group's sound. Now, with his first offering, "The Byrds", McGuinn has joined a solo career, and the results are impressive.

The inevitable comparison of McGuinn's album to those of the Byrds is somewhat unfortunate. Nonetheless, the two acts should make for a fine concert to be held in any significant degree is as formidable as the more conventional separation between the religious, cultural or racial civilizations which we try to purge it of its isolationist tendencies. His book is a must-read for anyone interested in the study of one area of the world, and he blithely accepts almost without question the primacy of powers. Toward the end of powers, toward the end of history, he opts for the more hopeful and less-than-profound answer to the world's problems.

Next time Philadelphia voters will elect a district attorney, down from the 189 Republicans. His ability to control narcotics, he allowed a law enforcement Assistance Administration - the standard Number of serious criminal cases - the standard 45% of the backlog of serious criminal cases, the 'defendant' records - the standard 10 per cent in the year of 1969. That figure has, moreover, been more than doubled but there has been no reduction in the backlog or even in the district Attorney's office has shown an overall drop.

Panel Discusses Women's Role in Communications

By PEGGY FINN

"Women in Communications" was the topic of a Tuesday afternoon panel discussion sponsored by Women Who Seek, the Senior Women's Honor Society.

Reading the panel was Lenore Berliner, editor of Ladies Home Journal and a member of the President's National Advisory Committee on the Economic Role of Women. Berliner said she was trying to avoid a "feminist/journalist" approach. Berliner told the predominantly female audience that "women's lives are being communicated." Berliner said that currently the status of women in communications is still unequal to that of men. Few women are found in the executive positions in the industry.

She said that the National Women's Right Amendment, claiming that the amendment would provide a better climate for women in communications. Jacqueline Bradenborey, a former journalist and advertising consultant for many corporations (including Bell Telephone, Yardley Cosmetics) now works in the field of television. Berliner also serves on the President's Committee on the Economic Role of Women. When asked why women should consider a career in advertising she said, "Because it's thrilling; it never stops. One is always learning about human nature and feeling. The opportunities are as great with the entire country as in the area. It is the same with any field, the possibilities are endless."

Cesar Pimental, Associate Feature Editor of the Los Angeles Times, stressed the importance of advertising. The "art" of advertising is described as a "non-voluntary" process. The art is described as "nourishment and engendering the background in retail experience and art."

The Education of a Sportswriter

By CHARLIE SERVICE

There is a branch of journalism which will tell you that the only constant thing in the world is change. That idea was, for a long time, before either Ben Franklin or his world is constant change. this...will forever be true. Of course, times change, and so do people. And I must say, I was not ready for the change that was to come. I had heard stories about the changes that were happening in the world, but I had never really believed that they could affect me directly. And yet, it was the change that would define me.

There was a time when I was a basketball player, a boy who loved the game. I was good at it, and I loved being part of a team. But then, something happened. I was injured, and that injury changed everything. I was forced to sit out, and I had to watch as my teammates continued to play. I felt like I was being left behind.

I realized that I had to do something different. I had to find a new way to be a part of the world. And so, I decided to become a sportswriter. It was a decision that would define my life and change the way I saw the world.

I started by reading as much as I could about the game I loved. I read books, I watched games, I talked to players. I tried to understand the world I was now a part of. And it was a world that was constantly changing.

I started writing about basketball, and then I started writing about other things. I wrote about the people who played the game, the coaches, the fans. I tried to understand their world, and I tried to make sense of it for those who didn't.

It was not easy. I had to learn new skills, and I had to find a new way to communicate. But I knew that I had to do it. I had to find a way to make sense of the world.

In the end, I learned that the world is always changing. I learned that I had to be flexible, to adapt, to be able to see things from different perspectives. And I learned that I could make a difference, that I could change the way people saw the world.

That's why I became a sportswriter. To understand the world, to communicate, to make a difference. And I'm grateful for that change, for all of the things that it has brought me.
