The University has a new campus development plan which "contains the outlines of a strategy for keeping the University a viable and important part of the University area's "...and that "the case should never come to the Supreme Court" in any further proceedings. He said he knew that "the University had the support of the city..." and that "we are not fighting any other universities in this case".

Meyerson also said that the University had been "small, and in the past we have been able to do it without interfering with the University's financial stability."

Meyerson also said that he was "very pleased" with the University's response to the suit, and that he was "very happy" with the University's efforts to "protect the University's financial well-being." He said that the University had been "working hard" to protect its financial stability, and that "we are doing everything we can to make sure that the University is in a good financial position."

The mighty Curtis Pipe Organ opens its season this Saturday at 8:00 P.M. in Irvine Auditorium, as the Philadelphia chapter of the American Guild of Organists (AGO) and the Irvine Peninsula Organ Restoration Group sponsor Garnell Copeland in concert.

The program is designed for people who don't like organ music, as well as organ enthusiasts. However, the organ is a highly complex instrument, capable of producing a wide range of sounds, and the performance promises to be an exciting event for anyone interested in music.

I walked out of that obscure but notorious movie theater feeling like I had been ripped off. The latest offering from the Mask and Wig Club was, without a doubt, the worst. The actors were unprepared, the dialogue was poor, and the overall production was amateurish.

However, I have to admit that there was one positive aspect to the show. The Mask and Wig Club production of "The Fantasticks" was surprisingly good.

The production had a wonderful cast, and the music was absolutely fantastic. I highly recommend attending the next performance of "The Fantasticks" if you're a fan of musical theater.

Are SAT Scores Relevant?

By Edward Keller

Recent reports released by the admissions office indicate a decline in the average SAT scores of Penn's entering class over the past couple of years. There has been much talk that this is in some way indicative of a decline in the quality of the student body. However, similar reports have appeared in other large, selective universities and are not, in fact, a basis for alarm.

The necessity for abolition of the SAT's is manifold. If Penn to recruit students of diverse backgrounds, we must be prepared to look beyond standardized data such as these.

Letters to the Editor

Praiseworthy Reporting on Women

The following letter was signed by six members of the Class of '72 and the group's Campus Co-Chairman. They are: CV, Judd, Wire, Muro, and Kathy Sanders. (All Caps Boldface).

The coverage of the Women's Center, of the feminist theatre group and of James B. Anthony Hall was an energetic, pertinent, and well-composed analysis of important social, political and economic issues. In fact, this was a major strength of the article. The women of the program contributed a tremendous amount of insight and data that was both compelling and significant.

The effectiveness of the article's power lies in the fact that it not only reflects the ideas, concerns and experiences of women, but that it also provides for a broader audience.

Psych Registration

Last semester, The Daily Pennsylvania published a letter on our university's psychology program. We were pleased to see that the letter was well received and that the university's psychology program is indeed progressing in the right direction.

Methodless 'Madness'

In your Op-Ed of January 7, you mention that the University of Pennsylvania offers a course in 'moral education.' Unfortunately, your statement is not quite accurate. The course, titled 'Methodology,' is actually about the methodology of education, and it is being taught by a philosophy department faculty member.

The Philadelphia Retreat, based on themes from the Jewish Catalog
February 8-10
Cherrywood Camp, Medford, N.J.
Program: The weekend program is built around the newly published Jewish Catalog, a collection of fascinating topics that should aid any Jew—whether steeped in tradition or just discovering Judaism—to become personally involved in all aspects of Jewish life. The emphasis of the book is not only knowledge but on the practical side of things as well. Jewish life is a very physical experience, and the material covered is designed to help one live and experience Jewish life in a creative and personal way.

The ideological and religious concerns are of particular relevance to Jewish students on the college campus. The retreat promises to be a workshop for the mind and spirit by providing two courses, several interest groups, ritual skill sessions, and creative services. It will also provide the opportunity to exchange ideas and develop social ties with other Jewish students from the Philadelphia area.

Pucksters Prepare for Key Contest against Red Raiders

By BOB MCKELLAR

The University of Pennsylvania takes on Harvard University tonight for what could be a crucial game in the Ivy League standings.

The Quakers have already lost 4-3 twice this season to the Crimson, both times in games that were close to overtime. The Crimson's leading scorer in those games was senior Jeff Treece. Treece has been one of the key factors in Harvard's success this season, as he has scored 18 goals and added 18 assists for a total of 36 points. The Crimson's other top scorer is senior forward David Phillips, who has 14 goals and 16 assists for 30 points. The Crimson have a balanced attack, with seven players scoring 10 or more goals and 13 players scoring 10 or more assists. The Quakers have a solid defense, led by senior goalie Tom Welsh, who has a 3.57 goals per game average. The Quakers also have a strong goaltending tandem with sophomores J.D. McHale and Andrew Belfi, who have combined for a 3.72 goals per game average.

The Crimson have a strong defense led by senior defenseman Peter McDonald, who has 15 points and a plus-minus rating of +13. The Crimson also have a strong penalty kill, which has a success rate of 90.3%. The Quakers have a solid power play, which has a success rate of 22.5%. The Quakers have also been strong in special teams, with a penalty kill percentage of 81.8% and a power play percentage of 21.8%.

This game will be a key contest for both teams, as the Crimson are in the hunt for the Ivy League title and the Quakers are looking to improve their record. The Crimson currently sit in first place in the Ivy League with a 12-4-0 record, while the Quakers are in third place with a 10-6-0 record. The Crimson have won the last three meetings between the teams, but the Quakers have won the last two games in the series. This game will be a battle of two of the top defenses in the Ivy League, as the Crimson have allowed only 45 goals in 16 games, while the Quakers have allowed only 50 goals in 16 games. The Crimson will need to contain the Quakers' top scorers, while the Quakers will need to contain the Crimson's top scorers. This game will be a key contest for both teams, as they battle for control of the Ivy League.

You Can Go Home Again

Digger Phelps has always been an optimist. The University of Pennsylvania men's basketball team has been in the top two in the nation for the past two seasons, yet the team has been playing in the shadow of neighboring rival Temple University, which has been struggling to make the NCAA tournament.

Despite a telecast from the city of Ohio to see in the state, Wolfpack radio announcer Tom Martin's voice was all that mattered in the closing minutes of the game. The Quakers were down by 13 points, but Phelps was determined not to let his players lose heart.

The Horace and Phelps tandem had its first big success in 1971, when the Quakers won the Ivy League championship. The team was led by senior forward David Phillips, who had 14 goals and 16 assists for 30 points. The team also had a balanced attack, with seven players scoring 10 or more goals and 13 players scoring 10 or more assists. The team had also been strong in special teams, with a penalty kill percentage of 81.8% and a power play percentage of 22.5%.
