New Retention Plan Proposed By Quad Board

By CHRIS JENNEWEBEN

The Quad Board, the Quad's residence council, will be presenting a new plan to help freshmen retain their students. This plan, which was presented to the Quad Board on Monday, would allow students to choose a housing unit for the entire four years of college. The plan would be implemented on a trial basis for the fall 1974 semester.

Under this plan, freshmen would be allowed to select a housing unit when they register for the fall semester. They would then be required to remain in that housing unit for the entire four years of college. Students would be allowed to change housing units only once if they were dissatisfied with their roommate or living conditions.

The Quad Board hopes that this plan will help freshmen feel more comfortable and secure in their living environment. They believe that this will lead to higher retention rates and a more positive college experience for students.

The plan would also allow students to select a housing unit that is most conducive to their learning style. For example, some students may prefer a quiet, study-friendly environment, while others may prefer a more active, social environment.

The Quad Board is currently working on the details of this plan and hopes to have it approved by the end of the semester.

as well as a darkroom and two practice rooms. Plans for the Performing Arts program will not necessarily mean the exclusion of any present project residences who work in the visual arts, Coleman said.
A steering committee for the new project is now in process. A meeting committee of seven students will help to select the staff and students.

The current crisis in Britain is well-recognized by the nation's coming day. For while the British may feel that the past has not been too good, three decades ago, it is of major concern to all democratic countries to understand the impact of their actions upon the current world situation.

Ours is only heightened by the Arab oil controlled most of the world's oil supply. Britain's dependency on coal has been in question for some time. However, the current crisis will force the government to make a call a general election must deter-...
We take high fidelity seriously!

"High fidelity" is a term that receives an awful lot of abuse. It's really a matter of degree - although some music systems sound pretty good, they don't deserve the title as much as others do.

We'll be the first to admit that our $1500 Ohm F coherent sound loudspeaker system sounds lightyears better than our $150 starter model, but all Tech Hifi recommended music systems offer more high fidelity for the money than you'll find anywhere else.

We take high fidelity seriously, and a visit to one of our sound rooms will prove it to you.

This week's recommended system $1499

The purpose of a high fidelity music system is to make music sound as good as it can in your own living room as it would in a live performance. This is no easy task, but we can confidently say that this recommended system fulfills that task better than just about any other system you can buy - and definitely better than any other system you can buy for the money.

Ohm F coherent loudspeakers employ a single, specifically designed 12 inch driver to maintain critical phase accuracy. Phased relationships are perfect, for sound more natural than you've ever heard coming out of a loudspeaker. "We include the Ohm F among those few speakers we have tested that achieves state-of-the-art performance," Hinch-Houch Laboratories in Stereo Review.

The same review was the word "awesome" to describe the Ohm F when it is powered by an amplifier able to deliver 100 watts rms or more per channel. The Integral Systems Model 200 amplifier is just that ideal companion for the Ohm F. It provides a total of 200 watts rms with distortion never exceeding 0.2%. The Integral Systems Model 10 preamp was designed to process a wide variety of input signals with an absolute minimum of distortion.

The Miracord 7001 automatic turntable is an elegant, dependable, and highly competent instrument with which to play your records. We include an excellent ADC 100Q induced magnetic cartridge, a wood base, and a dustcover.

At Tech Hifi, we take high fidelity seriously.

Integral Systems cabinets optional.
